The vender of umbrellas straightened himself as the sound of European boots echoed on the pavement. He peered across at the seller of sweetmeats and said that two foreign devils were approaching and that he meant to sell them his finest umbrellas.

The seller of sweetmeats cracked a melon seed with his strong teeth and rearranged his basket of confections. There were hundreds of foreign devils in the settlements outside, but few of them ever strayed within these high walls into the noisome native city.

"Buy!" screeched the umbrella vender out of his small stock of English words picked up in the settlement.

"Buy!" echoed the seller of sweetmeats over the way.

They were quick to choose from the assortment of gayly colored paper and printed silk sunshades a pair of handsome ones whose covering was a delicately woven network of fine bamboo threads. So closely was it woven that no lining was required to shut out the rays of the sun, and the covering was as soft and pliable as silk.

Vaill dropped the umbrella and turned away with a gesture of disgust. The umbrella man blocked his going by a swift movement.

Whereupon in a dolorous chant he gradually lowered the price of bamboo umbrellas until his customers were convinced that he was not charging more than double their actual worth; then they purchased.

As the Chinese thrust the money in his capacious sleeve, which did duty as money drawer or cash register, he shook his head sadly.

"Virtue, eh? How?" The imaginative Haller was instantly interested. When one buys umbrellas in crooked streets it is not unreasonable to hope for an adventure of some sort, even if the day is beastly hot and there is not a drop to drink short of the Astor House beyond the wall.

"Virtue? Tell us about it," insisted Haller, producing some copper cash that immediately disappeared into the voracious sleeve.

In spasmodic English, punctuated by shrill screeches to properly emphasize the interspersed Chinese words, the vender of umbrellas managed to convey the legend of the extraordinary nature of the bamboo umbrellas just purchased by the two Americans.

It appeared that the umbrellas had once belonged to a very learned physician, who, sitting beneath their shade, had in deep concentration of mind become possessed of the wisdom of all the past ages; consequently he became the wisest man in the entire world.

"Pshaw, the umbrellas have lost their virtue by this time!" laughed the skeptical Vaill.

But the narrator of the legend protested loudly and called upon the seller of sweetmeats to substantiate his statements. And this the latter did, swearing by his ancestral tablets and the grave of his great grandfather in so convincing a manner that the tourists tossed each of the rascals a dollar and grinningly entered the temple of the Ten Gods to put the story to a test.

The temple of the Ten Gods was supposed to offer the quiet and seclusion necessary to carrying out the scheme of concentration of mental forces, all of which was quite essential to attaining the wisdom of all the ages through the medium of the bamboo umbrellas. Thus had spoken the two Chinese.

Within the temple it was dim and dark and cool, and it smelled of dead incense smoke. The squatting idols in their shrines showed here and there a glimmer of gilt. There were no priests in attendance, and the tall prayer screens afforded a deep shadow where one who desired to meditate might hope to do so quite undisturbed.

"Of course it's all rubbish," remarked Vaill carlessly as he opened his umbrella and twirled it over his shoulder; "but, inasmuch as we are going to rest in here awhile and cool off, we might as well have a try for the wisdom end of the affair, eh?"

"Surely I shall try it," declared Haller solemnly. "As nearly as I can recollect, he said that he who meditates for three hours under one of these bamboo umbrellas will at the end of that time be possessed of all the wisdom of the ages. In other words, be the wisest man in the world."

"There will be a pair of us. We will have to divide the honors," laughed Vaill as he sat down on a pile of mats in the shadow of a prayer screen.

"Of course some of these oriental beliefs sound foolish," said Haller.

The air grew warmer as the day advanced, and finally the meditations of the tired tourists became merged in somnolence.

At last the rays of the declining sun pierced the carved screen in front of the doorway and awakened the sleepers.

They stared foolishly at each other, and with one accord each one reached for his timepiece to mark the hour.

Their pockets were empty.

An incredulous smile dawned on Vaill's face and faded. Slowly he arose and closed his bamboo umbrella with a sharp click.

"I've discovered the wisdom of the ages," he said dryly.

"That we are fools. I recollect a Chinese proverb that says, 'He who discovers himself a fool, no man can tell him more; therefore he is a sage.'"

They stumbled out into the deserted street, and they knew that among the thousand mazes of the ancient city it was useless to search for the two thieves.

Silently they tramped toward the gate that gave upon the Bund, where were life and civilization.

When they reached a favorable spot on the river front with one accord they flung the bamboo umbrellas far into the sluggish waters of the Hu-angpo.

And the long look they exchanged was an unspoken interchange of promises that the affair of the bamboo umbrellas was a closed incident.

Back in the walled city, on another crooked street, squatted the vender of umbrellas and the seller of sweetmeats. They were in high good humor, for each one was admiring his American gold watch. The seller of sweetmeats cracked melon seeds with his strong teeth and grinned as he listened to the words of the umbrella vender. Said the latter:

"'He who discovers himself a fool, no man can tell him more; it is the wisdom of the ages!'"

Then they both laughed heartily.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Elliff, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough.

I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Be on time for Santa Claus

SANTA Claus time came round last year and found you with your gifts only half ready — it spoiled your Christmas. The gifts you sent away arrived days after the stockings had been emptied—after the Christmas tree was a thing of the past—too late to be fully appreciated. You had tried to do everything yourself, and to do it in the last few days.

Be on time this year. Save yourself worry and expense—let us do the work for you.

Send for our Gift Book. Give us the page and number of the gift you want for "Father," "Mother," "Brother Bill,"—all the long list. Part of an evening will do it—you won't have to leave your cozy fireside.

The parcelling, stamping, addressing, etc.—all the bothersome part—we do without extra charge. We pay delivery charges and are responsible for anything lost or damaged.

Don't wait for "To-morrow"—"To-morrow" never comes. Write for the Gift Book to-day.

STOPPING A SNEEZE.

Why Pressure Upon Either Lip Will Halt the Noisy Spasm.

When the feeling comes over us which always precedes a sneeze all we have to do is to lay our finger across the upper lip, directly beneath the nose, and press firmly upon the lip for a few seconds. The same result can be obtained by laying the finger across the lower lip, just above the chin, and pressing rather firmly for a few moments. Either of these acts will not attract the attention of any person, and in almost every instance the person will be saved the annoyance of disturbing the entire audience.

The physiological reason for this seemingly curious interference in nature is quite interesting, although but few stop to reason why in this as in many other things.

The internal surface of the nasal passages is covered by a very delicate and sensitive mucous membrane. The surface is quite extensive, following as it does all the inequalities produced by the curved spongy bones of the nose. Only in the upper portion is the seat of smell, as that part only receives branches from the first pair of cranial nerves on the nerve known as the olfactory nerve, which is the one of smell. The distribution of this nerve in the form of an intricate network is upon the two upper spongy bones.

The olfactory nerve itself does not issue from the skull, but rests upon a thin facial bone which separates it from the cavity of the nose, and the many branches which proceed from it pass through this bone by means of numerous small openings. The many nerves which ramify over the lower portions of the delicate nasal membranes and which endow it with sensibility to touch and pain are branches of what is known as the fifth pair of nerves.

An irritation from several causes applied to the parts where this nerve is distributed occasions sneezing, which is a spasmodic contraction of the diaphragm, which results in the expulsion of the irritating cause. The pressure described above simply arrests the irritation, and the sensation dies without the outburst of air which produces the unpleasant sound. It is like crossed wires or some outside influence.

There are times when this method does not work, but they are rare and generally due to the fact that the pressure is not applied soon enough. Nearly every one has a warning of several moments that he is about to sneeze. If the pressure is instantly applied the sneeze is generally suppressed; otherwise it may be too late.

This does not mean that every sneeze should be suppressed. Only do this when in church or theatre or some such place. To sneeze aside from the sneeze caused by a cold is natural and affords a relief to the nasal passages from dust.

Still Yielding Gold.

The famous creeks of Atlin, B.C., still yield their gold, miners say, and as proof they point to the fact that the past year has been the best in gold production there since 1899. It is claimed that one man working on a quartz claim there made three clean-ups during the past summer, taking $71,000, $52,000 and $31,000 respectively.

A WOMEN'S ADVOCATE.

Mrs. Lillian Beynon Thomas Labors For Farmers' Wives.

Lillian Beynon Thomas is a very quiet person. So quiet indeed that only those who come into immediate contact with her are aware of the force behind her unassuming, still exterior, or of the effectiveness of her methods of work in Manitoba.

He real mission has always lain with the women of the countryside rather than with urban dwellers. She is a "truly rural" expert in the sense that she has had excellent opportunities in her own life for the study of problems of the country and has made uncommonly good use of the same. Born in York County, Ontario, Lillian Beynon's earliest years were spent on a farm. In 1889 her parents moved westward and took up land near Hartney, Manitoba, so that until 1890, or thereabouts, when the youthful Lillian was sent to Winnipeg to attend high school and college her life lay entirely in rural communities. From these early experiences of agricultural life and conditions Lillian, being of a ruminating, observant turn of mind, absorbed an immense store of well digested impressions, which, later, were to prove of great value in her work as journalist, organizer and feminist.

For some years after her graduation in 1905 Miss Beynon taught in the public schools or collegiates of Manitoba. Here, in teaching the young prairie idea how to shoot straight and aim high, she developed that patience which is one of her most notable characteristics, besides a faculty of self-expression, later to grow into a fine power for public speaking.

In 1906 Miss Beynon joined Free Press and Prairie Farmer. She took to herself at that time the pen name "Lillian Laurie," an alias which sticks to her to this day. Within a very short period Miss Beynon fell heir to the position of women's editor on the daily Press, a position formerly occupied by "Mary Markwell"—Kate Simpson Hayes—who had left to take up immigration work in Britain.

In her capacity as editor of a woman's page on a paper going into a very large number of homes throughout the West, Miss Beynon now found practical use for all the varied knowledge she had gained from her close association with the women of the countryside, and reactively, her own interest in their problems became intensified. Women in Manitoba labor under a number of disabilities unknown in old Ontario. For instance, there is no dower law in the Prairie Province. Real estate speculation is an indispensable pursuit with the men of the West and in Manitoba; they positively refuse to be hampered in their transactions by having to secure the signature of their wives before selling property. Also, when Miss Beynon began her work, the laws bearing on legal separation between man and wife and custody of children were most unjust to women in both Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Again, there was and is, the fact that there are no homesteads for women in Western Canada, unless such women care to qualify by killing off any inconvenient husbands they happen to own. Widows with children are the only eligibles for homesteads, and to Miss Beynon, as to many other people, this seemed very far from fair. Finally there was the crying need in many quarters for proper hospitals and nurses. The efforts to secure rural nursing, homesteads for women, a fairer inheritance law, and a generally squarer deal for the woman on the farm have all borne fruit, though in no single instance—save perhaps in the enactment of a better law of separation and custodial care of children in Saskatchewan—have the objects striven for been quite attained.—Canadian Courier.

British Columbia's Fisheries.

Fishing is one of British Columbia's leading industries. The production for the province for 1912 was over one-third of the total production of the Dominion, for the first time leading its rival, Nova Scotia. It had an output of 25 per cent. more than any other province and was the only one having an increase over the preceding year of more than $1,000,000.

SEVERE COLD ON LUNGS AND CHEST QUICKLY RELIEVED

by Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne

Mr. J. Seward, Bromptonville, Que., writes:

"Two weeks ago I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs and my chest was very sore, breathing tight and severe hacking cough. I was feeling miserable. I bought a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne and after a few doses I felt great relief and I went into a sound sleep, a thing I was not able to do for some nights. Next day I was able to be around again, and before completing the bottle, felt as well as ever. It is a fine cough and cold cure."

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne relieves the irritation and "stuffed-up" feeling in the air passages, soothes the tickling which makes you cough, loosens the phlegm and drives out the cold before it gets troublesome.

LUCKY YOUNGSTERS!

Hamilton Separate Schools Will Install Picture Machines.

HAMILTON, Dec. 2 — Following an order passed by the Hamilton Separate School Board at their meeting last night a series of motion picture films will be acquired for use in connection with geography instruction in the schools under the board's jurisdiction.

The board recently purchased a motion picture machine to aid in making school courses more adaptable to the minds of young children. It was thought that the impression made by living pictures would be more lasting than the best of textbooks could produce.

The children enrolled in the Separate schools of Hamilton are the first in Canada to learn through this new method. When the order of the board goes into force they will be afforded the opportunity of seeing the life of the countries of the world pictured at life size. The wood-cuts of the old geographies will be discarded for film reels and the names of places will mean more than ever they did before.

It is expected that if this venture proves successful the motion picture method will be extended to other courses.

IF CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS "CASCARETS"

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

30 YEARS IN PRISON; FREE.

Peter Derosch, Who Was Incarcerated for Murder, Leaves for Toronto.

KINGSTON, Dec. 2. —. Peter Derosch, aged 75, passed through the gates of the Portsmouth Penitentiary yesterday a free man, after serving thirty years within the walls of the prison.

Derosch was sent here from Vancouver, B.C., for murder for which he was tried, found guilty and sentenced to the hanged. The mental condition of the man at the time of the murder constrained the Department of Justice to commute the sentence to life imprisonment.

He is said to be the oldest prisoner in Canada. Derosch was brought from the coast to the penitentiary before Canada had a transcontinental railway. The long journey was made by stage coach and "prairie schooner," by boat for a short distance and a tramp to Sudbury, thence by train.

When he was released yesterday, Derosch looked for the first time on an electric street car and an automobile. As he was leaving the big gate of the prison an automobile passed, Derosch sprang back and broke away from his escort, trying to get behind the walls of the prison. A street car then passed and the aged prisoner showed the same signs of terror. He was taken to the G.T.R. station on the street car, but for a time he refused to go near the car.

When Derosch came to the penitentiary he was placed in the insane ward, where he was confined for eight years. His condition improved and for about twenty years he has been acting as a "trusty." He has been a model prisoner. Derosch secured his pardon through the efforts of the Salvation Army, who will care for him in Toronto.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

Hair Coming Out? If Dry, Thin, Faded, Bring Back its Colour and Lustre

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

CHURCHILL A PILOT.

He Runs an Aeroplane Himself For First Time.

LONDON, Dec. 2. —Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, has become a competent aviator. He has taken lessons recently at the flying depots, and on Saturday ascended at East Church in a dual control biplane with Capt. Lushington.

On Saturday morning Winston had some final lessons to complete his experience, and after lunch, donning a leather jacket and airman's cap, he took his seat in a dual control biplane with Captain Wildman Lushington.

Reaching an altitude of 500 feet, Mr. Churchill took charge of the machine, flying to and fro in a strong wind for nearly 45 minutes and covering altogether between 30 and 40 miles. Capt. Lushington then resumed control and brought the machine to the earth.

NO MORE FALLING HAIR NO MORE DANDRUFF

HERPICIDE

Nearly every one has dandruff, and must reconcile themselves to the idea of becoming completely bald or resort to the use of Newbro's Herpicide.

The manufacturers have absolute faith in Herpicide to remove all traces of dandruff. So perfect is this belief that all dealers are instructed to sell the preparation with a "money back" agreement.

Such supreme confidence is the best evidence in the world of the merit of Herpicide. They know the result, hence the guarantee. It protects the purchaser.

Used as directed, Newbro's Herpicide eradicates dandruff and prevents the hair from coming out. It stops itching of the scalp, which is so disagreeable.

Send 10c in postage or silver for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

ALLEGES CONSPIRACY.

That Is Kept Becker's Ground For a New Trial.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 2.—A conspiracy that found its support in perjured testimony put former Police Lieut. Charles Becker in the Sing Sing death house for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, attorneys for the convicted man argued yesterday in the Court of Appeals. Justice Goff, who denied Becker a new trial, and District Attorney Whitman, who prosecuted the case, were criticized severely. Becker's counsel appealed from the order denying their motion for a new trial, and asked a reversal of judgment. Mrs. Becker was in the courtroom by the special request of her husband. Judge Verner presided. Chief Justice Cullen and Judge Gray, both of whom will retire from the court this month, did not sit in the case. It is expected that a decision in the case will not be rendered for three months.

How I Made My Hair Grow

Woman With Marvellously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all equally failed; many of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring grey hair to its natural colour, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in healthy condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth but it practically restored all of his hair to its natural colour. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows:

Bay Rum, 4 oz.; Menthol Crystals, ½ drachm; Lavona de Composee 2 oz. If your hair is perfumed add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This, however, is not necessary. Apply night and morning; rub thoroughly into the scalp.

Toronto's Check For Exhibition.

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—The City of Toronto will receive a check this year from the Canadian National Exhibition Association for $60,000, representing the surplus from this year's Exhibition, after all accounts have been paid. This is the largest amount ever turned over to the city from the Exhibition.

Wants Tariff War With Canada.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A representative of the Conservative party in the German Reichstag yesterday advocated a tariff war against Canada in the matter of the import of Canadian wheat. This, he urged, would be better than the provisional treaty now in force.

To Set Date of Opening.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Premier Borden stated yesterday at the conclusion of a meeting of the Cabinet that the date of the opening of Parliament would be decided this week. It is expected that it will be either Jan. 8 or 15.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 166 carloads, 3205 cattle, 1712 hogs, 1456 sheep and lambs and 306 calves.

Butchers

Choice steers of export weights and quality sold at $8 to $8.25; choice butchers' steers, $7.50 to $8; good steers, $7 to $7.50; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.50 to $6; choice cows, $6 to $6.50; good cows, $5.50 to $5.75; medium cows, $4.50 to $5.25; common cows, $4 to $4.25; export bulls, $6.50 to $7.25; butchers' bulls, $5.50 to $6; common bulls, $4.25 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders

The demand for stockers and feeders still continues to be strong and prices were firm as follows: Steers, 1000 to 1100 lbs., sold at $6.40 to $6.50; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 500 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers

Veal Calves

The receipts of calves were not equal to the demand and prices remained firm. Choice veals sold at $9 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; common, $6 to $6; rough grass calves, $4.40 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs

Receipts of sheep and lambs were large, 2456. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $5 to $6; heavy ewes, at $4 to $5; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $8.25 to $8.70.

Hogs

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.60 to $8.65, and $8.25, f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, offerings for sale this morning amounted to 1900 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 350 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle today, but prices were well maintained at the advance noted a week ago on account of the continued scarcity of good stock. There continues to be a steady demand for supplies of common cattle for shipment to the United States, but the volume of trading doing in this direction is by no means as large as it was sometime ago. Demand from butchers was only for small lots to fill actual wants. Packers bought freely, however, and sales of a few loads of choice steers were made at $7.75 to $8 and good at $7.35 to $7.50 per 100 pounds.

Sheep and Lambs Wanted.

The feature of the small meat trade continues to be the strong undertone to the market for sheep and lambs. Prices for the former have scored a further advance of 10c and for the latter 25c per 100 pounds. At the higher range of prices there was a good demand and an active trade was done, with sales of western lambs at $8 to $8.25, and choice ewes at $6.90 to $6.50 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves is quiet, owing to the large falling off in the receipts, but there is a good demand from local buyers for all the choice stock offered at firm prices.

A weaker feeling developed in the local hog market and prices declined another 25c per 100 pounds, but at this reduction there was a keen demand from packers as some of them were short of stock, and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8.25 and straight lots at $8 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

"Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.90 to $8.25; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.05 to $3.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $4.50 to $4.75; do. medium, $5 to $4; do. bulls, $4.90 to $5.25; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $90; do. common and medium, each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70; sheep, ewes, $5.25 to $5.50; bucks and culls, $4.75 to $5; lambs, $7.50 to $8.25; hogs, f.o.b., $8 to $8.25; calves, $5 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Cattle—Receipts 21,000. Market steady. Beeves, $6.60 to $9.60; Texas steers, $6.05 to $7.70; stockers and feeders, $4.70 to $7.40; cows and heifers, $3.30 to $8.15; calves, $7 to $11.

BOUGHT BURNS BOOKS.

Philadelphia Publisher Will Give Them to Scottish Nation.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2. — The mystery surrounding the whereabouts of the Glenriddell manuscripts of the Poet Burns, which were sold by the Athenaeum Library of Liverpool last summer, and for which a committee of Scots in England and Scotland have been searching, was cleared up here last night when John Gribbell, vice-president of The Philadelphia Public Ledger and associated in the Curtis Publishing Co., announced that the two volumes were in his possession. Mr. Gribbell made the announcement at a dinner of the St. Andrew's Society. He declared he had purchased the manuscripts from a dealer and he would restore them to Scotland, forever protected by a deed of trust, as a gift to the people who gave Robert Burns to the world.

Mr. Gribbell, who was not assigned a toast on the program, surprised the diners when he rose to give an account of the romance of some of Burns' manuscripts and revealed the whereabouts of the missing volumes. As he finished speaking the two quarto volumes, bound in old polished calf, were removed from a steel and fireproof box and laid before the guests.

WANT LABOR PARTY.

Leaders Throughout Canada Would Enter Commons.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—An effort is being made by the labor leaders throughout the country to organize an independent labor party on the lines of the labor party in Great Britain. Hopes are entertained by the leading men of the Trades and Labor Congress that they will be sufficiently organized to place candidates in the field in such industrial centres as St. John, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

They propose to have a labor party in the House of Commons which will not be affiliated with either of the present political parties on general issues, but play an independent role, while uniting solidly on all matters affecting the interests of the laborers.

Quick Way To Make Ugly Hairs Vanish

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is a quick and very effective treatment for banishing objectionable hairs or fuzz: Mix a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water and apply to the hairy surface for about 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off and with it will come every trace of hair. Washing the skin to remove the remaining paste leaves it firm and free from blemish. Rarely is more than one application required, but results are more positive when the delatone is purchased in an original package.

Make Your Brains Count.

The fellow with brains and with energy to direct them is pretty likely to succeed, no matter what's pulling him down. If you're not succeeding have a heart to heart talk with yourself. Maybe you haven't so many brains as you have been giving yourself credit for, or maybe you don't know how to use them to get results. Have a ten minute talk with yourself every night, and do it in the coldest blooded way you possibly can. Every little failure of the day should be analysed; every opportunity you have let pass you uncaught should be used as a club on your brain. Then avoid those errors to-morrow.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1913

THE COUNCIL CONSIDERED WORKING MAN'S WELFARE

Ald. Langford Objected to By-law Going to the People for $8,000 For Motor Chemical Engine —Call a Halt in Spending, He Said.

DISCUSSION WAS GENERAL

After remaining in obscurity for months, the working man was figuratively dragged from his "little home on the outskirts of the city" at last night's Council meeting, and his financial welfare in so far as taxes concern it was the subject of considerable discussion.

To complete the metaphor, Alderman Langford put his arm affectionately around the working man's neck, stroked his cheek a couple times and said "I'll take care of you."

What the north ward alderman did say concerned the proposed expenditure of $8,000 for a combined chemical motor waggon and hose truck.

"It is my aim," he said, "to keep down the taxes. I came into the Council with that object, and I intend to stick to it." (Hear, hear, from a number of the aldermen).

"I don't see that the chemical engine is needed this year, nor for the next few years."

Alderman Gillespie—This by-law goes to the people. If they don't want to spend the $8,000 for this fire apparatus, all they have to do is vote against it.

Alderman Langford—But the fact that we put it before the people shows that we endorse it, and I want to go on record as opposing it. Last year we spent $12,500 on the Fire Department. This year we have spent $15,840 up to Oct. 31st, and that is not for the whole year.

Mayor Bradburn—What is the appropriation for the department?

Alderman Anderson—$16,000.

Alderman Langford—And the expenditure will go on from year to year.

Mayor Bradburn—Unfortunately it will.

Alderman Langford—I think that an increase of $3,000 for one year was enough. We should go slow for a while.

Cause of Increase.

Mayor Bradburn—Why did you not oppose the increase in the appropriation for the department?

Alderman Langford—I did oppose it.

Alderman Anderson—Did you oppose the increase in the wages of the firemen?

Alderman Langford—I did not.

Alderman Gillespie—Or the addition of extra men to the brigade?

Alderman Langford had not opposed that, but we should call a halt now, he said.

Alderman Gordon—What caused the increase of $3,000?

Alderman Langford—To give more wages to the men which possibly they deserved, to appoint some new men, and one or two other things.

Mayor Bradburn—Don't shift to "one or two other things."

Alderman Langford—I would have you understand that I am not doing this for election purposes. I am here for next year.

Alderman Langford caught his thumbs comfortably in the armholes of his waistcoat and said that his sympathy went out to the man with a little home, who is trying to make ends meet and finds his taxes going up. It was consideration for him that should lead to a halt in the expenditure of money.

Considering the House Owner.

Alderman Gillespie — We were thinking of the man who owns a home on the outskirts of the city when we drew up this by-law. We felt that the city could not offer him sufficient protection with only horses in the fire department.

It takes time in getting to a fire and the horses are played out before they cover some of the distances to the outskirts of the city. If the people vote down the by-law it is not our fault. The whole problem facing the city to-day is to get to our outskirts as quickly as possible, and it is for the direct benefit of the working man that we propose to give him a chance to say whether he wants this extra fire protection or not.

Alderman Duncan—Do you know what it will cost?

Alderman Gillespie—We are asking for $8,000, but next year's committee can go into the question and get the best prices available.

Alderman Duncan said he believed it would cost close to $12,000. Automatic jacks, and two skilled men to handle the machine would be necessary to the equipment.

Alderman Gordon—There is nothing better for getting to the outside wards than that engine.

Alderman Johnston—I'm glad to see that some attention is being paid the working man. It is the opportune time in the face of other matters. I am heartily in sympathy with the by-law.

Ald. Green Would Go Further.

Alderman Green said he was so impressed with the value of efficient fire protection that he would personally

TRAVELLING BAG FOR CITY CLERK

Mr. S. R. Armstrong's Twenty Years of Service to Peterboro' Appreciated by Present Council

31 YEARS' CIVIC DUTIES

Before the conclusion of the Council meeting last night City Clerk Armstrong was presented with a splendid travelling bag, a gift from Mayor Bradburn and the aldermen in recognition of his twenty years of service in the city's interests, and as a token of appreciation of their associations with him.

When the time came for an adjournment, His Worship said, Mr. Armstrong, the Council and myself learned a short time ago that about Nov. 8 or 9 you had closed 20 years in the service of the City of Peterborough. Looking ahead, twenty years seems a long time, but when one glances back over that period it does not seem so long. We appreciate the many kindnesses you have shown us, the manner in which you have guided us, and your unfailing courtesy in teaching us our duties as aldermen of the city. During the past few years you have practically taken the place of an Industrial Commissioner in addition to your other duties and much of your time has been spent in travelling. When one is on the road, he likes to have a pleasant companion, and in presenting this travelling companion we want you to feel that you have the best wishes of the Council of 1913.

Mr. Armstrong's Reply.

In making a reply to the Mayor, Mr. Armstrong said:

If I had received any hint of this I might have been in better shape to thank you for your gift and kindly expressions. It is true I have been a little more than 20 years in the service of the city, and I think I can say, as you expressed it so much better, that I have always tried to serve the city to the best of my ability. During the previous eleven years my duty in another capacity necessitated my attending all the meetings of the Council during that time. Thus my experience with the Council has extended over a period of 31 years. I have met during that time a large number of those who served the city in the positions you are now holding, and I believe that every member of the Council endeavoured to serve the ratepayers of the city. In regard to the extra work which you referred to there is scarcely anything that presents so many discouragements. We receive considerable information from those who are interested and with what we receive from other sources we follow them out as far as possible. The only thing to do, however, is to persevere. I don't know how to thank you, but I do thank you for your gift and the kind expressions you have made to me.

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

This Excellent Production Makes a Return Visit Here Next Saturday, December 6th

On its previous engagement in Peterborough last season "The Light Eternal" was greeted by large and unusually responsive audiences. The drama adapted by Martin V. Merle from Cardinal Wiseman's "Fabiola" picturing the persecutions and martyrdom of the early Christians, is one of the strongest of its kind, stirring the depths of all that believers hold most dear and sacred.

The conversion of the Princess Artemia, daughter of Diocletian and the heiress to all of his hatreds, and her condemnation and voluntary sacrifices through her love for Marco Valerius, captain of the Roman guard and a Christian, makes the drama at once grasping in its power of conviction and appealing in its beauty of its sentiment.

The play is full of strong situations that get over the footlights and grip the audiences.

Possibly no more powerful climax than the shattering of the statue of Jupiter and the appearance of the fiery cross in the third act has ever been put before a local audience.

"The Light Eternal" will play a return engagement at the Grand next Saturday, Dec. 6th, matinee and night.

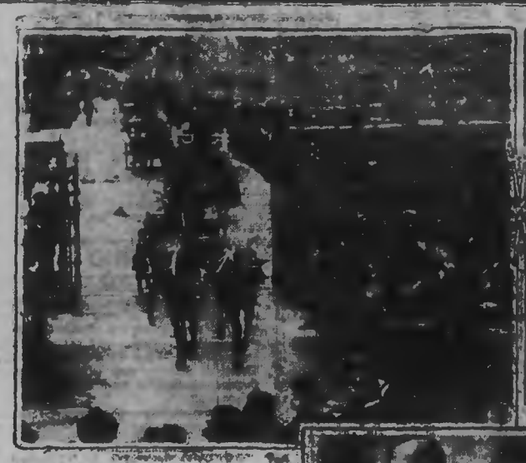
TO-NIGHT

A limited number of admission tickets at 50 cents, will go on sale at the Conservatory Hall, at 7.30 p.m. for the Ernestheim - Caruso recital. No one should miss this opportunity of hearing these great artists.



PROMINENT FARMERS TO VISIT CITY

Representatives of Three Great Farmer's Organizations of the West May be Entertained Here

A DINNER PROPOSED

Word was received in Peterborough a few days ago that twelve representatives of the three great farmers' organizations of Western Canada are likely to wait on the Dominion Government in Ottawa on Friday, December 12th, and it has been suggested that arrangements should be made to hold a meeting in Peterborough on Saturday, December 13th, to be addressed by some of these farmers. A meeting of prominent farmers living in the vicinity of Peterborough has been called for next Saturday afternoon to decide whether or not the necessary arrangements can be made.

The Western men represent all three of the great farmers' organizations of Western Canada, including the United Farmers of Alberta and the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Grain Growers' Associations. These associations have a membership of over 50,000 farmers. These men are also the men who are behind the great Grain Growers' Grain Company, which is probably the largest co-operative concern ran by farmers in the world. They own timber limits in British Columbia and are erecting their own saw mills. They have a complete chain of grain elevators throughout the West and at Fort William. They have their own flour mills and last year paid their 14,000 farmer shareholders 10 per cent. on their capital stock. This company has a reserve of several hundreds of thousands of dollars and last year did a business of over $60,000,000.

It has been proposed that a dinner be tendered these men in the National Hotel at 1 o'clock on Saturday, December 13th, and that they address those present immediately afterward. As the accommodation will be limited it will be possible to issue a small number of tickets in the event of its being found possible to bring these men to Peterborough. Arrangements at present are in the hands of Warden J. H. Garbutt and H. B. Cowan.

ZACKS BROS. TO ENLARGE

Stock Reducing Sale is Necessary

The firm of Zacks Bros., Ladies and Gents Clothiers, House Furnishings, etc., 422 George street, have decided that their present store shall be enlarged, remodelled and re-decorated. They have made great improvements in their store on two other previous occasions, and their business is so enlarged as to make further changes necessary. In order that they will not be carrying a large stock at the time they wish to make the changes, they are putting on a tremendous stock reducing sale for ten days commencing to-morrow, Wednesday, December 3rd, at 9 o'clock. Their entire stock of $18,000 is being marked down to figures that are absolutely astounding and as the firm of Zacks Bros. have enjoyed a large local patronage, there is no doubt but they will have little difficulty in reducing their stock as they desire.

STRICKEN ON HER BIRTHDAY

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 2.—Stricken with paralytic stroke as she was busy helping to prepare for her daughter's wedding to-morrow, Mrs. Hugh Fraser died an hour later without recovering consciousness.

To-day was her birthday and a party was to have been held this evening.

The Bench, Bar, and Craft Honour Sir Aemilius Irving.—On the left the funeral cortege is seen leaving Osgoode Hall and turning into University Avenue, Toronto. A large crowd thronged the curbs. To the right are two Mason Past Grand Masters. The lower picture is that of Rev. C. Ensor Sharp, who conducted the funeral service. The greatest honour was bestowed upon Sir Aemilius. He lay in state at Osgoode Hall for two days, and the funeral proceeded from Osgoode Hall, which is the first time such an event has taken place for many years.

CANADIAN LOAN CAUSES MUCH COMMENT

Announcement Has Aroused Much Unfavourable Comment on the London Stock Exchange

VIEWS OF THE PRESS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 2.—(Special Cable)—The announcement of a new Canadian loan has aroused much unfavourable comment on the stock exchange, brokers describing it as a bit of a bombshell for the Consol market. The Morning Post says: "With such tidal waves as the Canadian loan rolling up it is best to be down in the cabin."

The Canadian government has also disposed privately of some three million sterling in the London market. While financial papers and stock brokers are rather inclined to be critical of this method of financing it is generally accepted that the way it was taken up is indicative of renewed confidence in Canadian securities. When the government securities are readily accepted it may be depended upon that municipal and other securities will also find more ready sale immediately afterwards.

WILL BAR THE HINDUS

Special Wire to The Examiner.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 2.—Premier McBride to-day announced that the Provincial Government would immediately take means to prevent a influx of Hindus following the recent judgment of Chief Justice Hunter, which gave them permission to enter Canada on the same terms as any other British subjects. McBride said the ink of judgment was hardly dry before agents of immigration companies way off in India were arranging to ship Hindus to Canada by shipload and some were already under way. Just what action can be taken to prevent these landing Premier McBride did not make clear.

CITIZENS ASK FOR BRIDGE ACROSS RIVER

Over 800 Sign Petition Presented to the Council Last Night

AT END OF DALHOUSIE

Over eight hundred citizens signed their names to a petition which was presented to the City Council last night by Mr. E. A. Peck asking for a new bridge across the Otonabee river from the end of Dalhousie Street to Maria Street.

The petition was as follows:

The undersigned residents request the Council to take immediate steps for the construction of a bridge across the river between Maria and Dalhousie Streets or points adjacent thereto.

The petitioners point out that although nearly 70 p.c. of the population of the City is resident to the north side of Hunter Street, yet there is no means of communication over the river except by Hunter Street, and that those employed in the factories on either side of the river lying south of Hunter Street are in many cases put to a very considerable delay and inconvenience in proceeding to and from their work by the want of a suitable bridge at such points, and in many other ways persons are inconvenienced and the progress of the City delayed by want of such communication.

Mr. Peck's Remarks.

It is worthy of note, Mr. Peck said, in addressing the Council, that the petition has been signed by all classes of citizens, and that every ward is well represented. Only three or four refused to sign. There would be no difficulty in getting a much larger number if it is required. The question was not so acute as long as the C.P.R. permitted people to cross the railway bridge. But the situation is a different one now for the many citizens who have to go a long way round by Hunter Street. It is inevitable that a new bridge must be built, and it might as well be done now.

Mr. Peck referred to the numerous factories in the south end of the City and the several in the south end of East City. Business is hampered by the present conditions. A large percentage of communication is directed south of Hunter Street and it is therefore desirable that the bridge be erected at the end of Dalhousie Street.

Mr. J. C. Shook.

Mr. Shook said he represented the Dickson Company. He endorsed Mr. Peck's statements. The bridge has been necessary for some time, but now it is an absolute necessity.

Ald. Buller stated that Engineer Parsons was working on plans and would have them ready in about ten days. They could be further discussed and an extra effort made to get a by-law ready for the approaching municial elections.

Ald. Anderson.

Ald. Anderson— I am particularly glad that Mr. Peck has come backed up by a large deputation and by a largely signed petition. We from the East Ward have frequently pointed out the necessity of a bridge at that point. Last year there were other projects under way and we did no wish to endanger the bridge by-law by submitting it with the others. Besides, the question of the C. P. R. swin bridge had to be settled. The way is clear now, and I am particularly anxious that a bylaw be prepared and submitted to the ratepayers this year. I hope the citizens as a whole will support it. The East Ward ratepayers supported other by-laws when they were actually doing something that was detrimental to their own interests. The passing of them had the effect of drawing the population awa to the south end of the City

Has the Mayor's Support.

The bridge has my hearty suppor and endorsement, said Mayor Bradburn, and it will have my support in January. We believed that we would have the sewage disposal question on our hands by this time, but owing to unforeseen circumstances we cannot begin that work until next summer. This and other matters led us to defer the bridge question last year. In the meantime we will go ahead and get the by-law ready for the municipal elections.

Street Railway Tracks.

In preparing his plans, Mr. Parsons will make provisions for Street Railway single tracks. The bridge will also have a swing in one of the spans.

GOOD PROGRESS WITH EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

GENEROUS RESPONSES

Almost all the City Churches taking part in the Laymen's Missionary Campaign got away last night to a good start on the every member canvass which is being made this week. This morning very few of the Churches were able to report fully concerning their work owing to the fact that the returns had not all been received from their various representatives, but as far as received, the returns have been most gratifying.

Most Churches report already that people are starting to give to missions who never gave before, and many who have been giving in the past are increasing their givings. The middle and poorer classes are responding generously.

A striking feature of the reports so far received is the surprise expressed by a number of the canvassers at the pleasure they find in the work through the cordial way in which they are received in the homes in which they have called. They report that the canvass is proving of great value in bringing the work of the Church more closely home to the individuals in the homes called on.

So far the best response has been received from Mark Street Methodist Church. This Church has undertaken to obtain an increased revenue for current expenses of 50 p.c., and an increase in the givings for missions of 100 p.c. To-day's reports show that the increase for current expenses so far recorded amounts to 40 p.c. and for missions 86 p.c. Practically all the canvassers in this Church are very enthusiastic with the progress they have made.

All Saints' Church will not be able to report until to-morrow, as its men are meeting to-night at 10 o'clock to report results. These men will meet again at 10 o'clock on Thursday night for an oyster supper, when final returns are to be received.

St. Paul's Church, with partial reports received from nine of 28 districts report total givings for current expenses of $1,396 and for missions $905. The cards so far turned in show a number of gratifying increases.

St. Andrew's Church received only a few reports at noon, but expected many more in the course of the afternoon. Thirty cards received show increases for missions of $126, and for current expenses of $114.

The representatives of the different churches will continue to work to-night and to-morrow night, by which time it is expected that the work will be largely completed in most of the churches.

JUMPED HIS BOARD BILL

Hubert Hemming Given 30 Days For Getting Board and Lodging Under False Pretences

VAG GOT SIX MONTHS

Hubert Hemmings, an Englishman, was fined $20 and costs, amounting to $23.75, in police court this morning, for fraudulently obtaining board and lodgings under false pretences.

According to the daughters story in police court this morning, the prisoner came to the home of her mother, Mrs. Edwards, 653 Union Street, on October 12th. He told the family at dinner that he had paid $2,000 on a farm in Smith township, but that he did not like the farm life in the winter, so he was going to sell it. On the strength of this he was allowed to stay over three weeks at the rate of $7 a week. But one morning he went out to get something nice for breakfast, and didn't return. At that time he owed Mrs. Edwards $10.

In the witness box, prisoner admitted that he did not own any farm, and that he owed Mrs. Edwards $10.

A pension of $36 is due him on January 1st, but the Magistrate did not feel disposed to trust the prisoner that long, and he was fined $20 and costs or 30 days. Not having the sufficient currency, Hemming will spend the next 30 days in Castle Nesbitt.

Bruce Roddy, who has resided in the police station at night for the past three days, was charged with vagrancy this morning. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months in Central Prison.

Abraham Young was fined $2 for being drunk in a public place yesterday.

CONSIDERING THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, ONT., Dec. 2. — There may be further consideration this afternoon of the plan of Hon. Crothers, Minister of Labour, to appoint a high cost of living commission. It is said that the majority of the members of the Cabinet would prefer a reference of the matter to a Parliamentary committee. It was stated here o-day that under the new food platform the Liberals would press strongly this session for the organization of such a commission as Crothers favours. If the commission is not appointed an appeal may be made to the Senate, which is still strongly Liberal and has the power to appoint a commission on its own account.

TUESDAY, DEC. 2, 1913

SOUTH LANARK.

The Government has selected Dec. 13th as the date of the by-election in South Lanark to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the veteran John Haggart. On the face of things a lively contest is in sight. There are two Conservative candidates in the field. This is a strongly Conservative riding, Hon. John Haggart's majority, in the general elections of 1911, having been 1,167. With two Conservative candidates entered for the race, if they were allowed to fight the battle alone, there would be merely the personal factor, plus local party considerations to reckon with. Dr. Hanna is the product of the machine, and Colonel Balderson is the other Conservative who thinks the machine didn't "grind fair," and he is opposing his brother Conservative. But a new factor has been injected, or rather has injected himself. Mr. Arthur Hawkes of "British Born" fame, has declared himself a candidate. This will complicate matters, and in spite of the big Conservative majority, may defeat the Conservative candidates both. It is not, however, safe betting that both Conservative candidates will stay in the field. Colonel Balderson seems determined to stick and says he will not retire unless the Liberals regularly nominate a candidate. It is not probable that the Liberals will put a man into the field. But there are ways to influence the withdrawal of a candidate, and influence of a substantial character may be brought to bear upon the insurgent Conservative candidate. The promise of the first available Senate vacancy may have its influence, or something possibly more tangible may be employed. But even with the straight—or as his Conservative opponent would call him, the crooked—Conservative candidate and Mr. Hawkes in the field, we should have an interesting contest. Mr. Hawkes does not seem to be the man to go asleep over his work, and he would make it oratorically lively anyway. We have only about ten days of waiting to see what we shall see.

DR. MONTAGUE, MISSIONARY.

Dr. Montague, the new Minister of Public Works in the Roblin Cabinet, in Manitoba, has been elected for Kildonan and St. Andrews. As was to be expected the first taste of his "public works" was not edifying. In addition to evidences of corrupt practices, more or less secret, Dr. Montague ended his campaign by an orgie of public whiskey drinking—consumption of free grog supplied by the government agencies. Attributable to this and other sinister influences, Dr. Montague "won out" largely by the additional help of the foreign element of the electorate.

At first thought it would not be felt that this by-election and the manner of its working would be a friendly fillip to the Laymen's Missionary Movement. But it is. The object, or it should be the main object, of this campaign is to raise money for Home Missions—to be expended in Christianizing and raising the moral tone of our foreign-born population—to help their assimilation to the moral standards that obtain in Christian Canadian citizenship. We know that, under the best conditions, unless these foreigners are influenced by moral teaching they will become and be a danger and a menace to the state. In the ordinary capacity of their citizenship they will be a deteriorating danger:—but much more of a danger if they are allowed to become a corrupting influence in our representative and governmental life. In the Kildonan by-election it is not to be denied that the foreign vote largely influenced, if it did not decide, the result of Dr. Montague's election by a substantial majority. Thus Dr. Montague and the political influences he represents become a factor in the bedevilment of our political institutions and public life. However, this much is to be said in favour of Dr. Montague; he becomes a missionary in the sense that his manipulation of the foreign vote emphasizes the necessity of missionary work to civilize and Christianize the foreign element of Canada so that it will be less susceptible to the corrupt influences of corrupt politicians. In this respect the Manitoba election, with all its sordid corruption and electoral debauchery should be a stimulus to the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

THE GREAT CANADIAN CONUNDRUM.

We in Canada boast of our great spread of fertile soil, boast of its productiveness, boast of its capacity to feed and maintain in comfort, unsurpassed in any country of the world, uncounted millions of people. When, however, the matter is summed up in a few words, we can't, or at least don't, feed ourselves. We are struggling with various problems pressing for solution. We have the transportation problem which, with money available, is an easy nut to crack; we are exercising a good deal of gray matter to discover how we shall make ends meet to guess the puzzle of the high cost of living. But there is one problem to solve, the most puzzling and important of all. How is that Canada, with more than 200 million acres of fertile soil (one-tenth of its total area) available for cultivation, which would give nearly 10,000 acres to every man, woman and child in the Dominion—how is it that with this soil, this infinite capacity for producing the fruits of the earth, Canada has to import food-stuffs?

There is at this moment on the Pacific ocean the steamer Niagara, billed from New Zealand, a distance of between ten thousand and fifteen thousand miles, laden with a huge cargo of food products for Canada—butter, eggs, chilled meat, etc. These will be put on our market at a price enhanced by freight charges of a long ocean voyage and enhanced by the customs duties. Three cents per dozen will be added to the price of eggs, three cents a pound to the price of meats and four cents per pound to the price of butter; and instead of being a relief, this shipment will to the extent of its quantity, add to the high cost of living. If the duty were removed, the cost would be so much less.

When one comes to think of it, the situation is remarkable. Think of Canada with 3,730,000 square miles of territory, and 7,500,000 population, Canada an agricultural country par excellence, being fed by little New Zealand, with a total area of only 104,750 square miles, and a population of only 1,100,000.

The government proposes a commission to uncover the causes of the high cost of living. We have in this New Zealand shipment one of the causes that adds its mite of a few cents to every pound of butter and meat, and every dozen of eggs, the duty upon the necessaries of life. If the government wants to do something of account, it should appoint a commission to find out why Canada, a country of unexampled capacity for food production, is not growing enough to feed its population of about two persons to the square mile. There's something wrong with our agricultural conditions. We very properly invite the homeless millions of the old country to come to Canada and find homes, while, as a matter of fact, we can't feed the comparative handful of population we already have. We should be able to remedy such conditions. We should have more intensive farming, and more intensive statesmanship to bring about better conditions. If it is in the power of man to remedy such conditions, we shall look to those who are charged with administering the great Canadian estate and demand of them to devise some means by which we can feed ourselves without being starved by the prohibitive cost of living.

A GOOD PLATFORM.

The Liberal platform, as laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his Hamilton speech, is made up as follows:

1. Foodstuffs free from customs duty.
2. Prompt action to decrease the high cost of living.
3. Control of trusts and combines through competition from outside markets.
4. A national navy, the construction of which in Canada will provide work for Canadians.
5. Regulation of transportation rates to increase the profit of the farmer and lighten the burden of the shipper.

The platform is one which is sure to meet with popular favour, and, as opportunity may present itself, to lead to many repetitions of the Liberal triumph in South Bruce.—Brantford Expositor.

CANADIAN IMPORTS FROM UNITED STATES.

The Courier thinks because we export certain food products to the United States no advantage could come to the Canadian consumer by having free access to the American markets. Yet if it will turn to the last report of the Canadian Department of Customs it will find that Canada last year, despite import duties, imported from the United States oats to the value of $1,551,900, beans to the value of $191,152, peas to the value of $175,761, rye to the value of $174,495, wheat to the value of $8,131,279, butter to the value of $314,971, cheese to the value of $89,306; bacon and hams to the value of $1,929,013, salted beef to the value of $102,677, canned meats to the value of $29,090, extracts of meats to the value of $200,888, mutton and lamb to the value of $43,956, salt pork to the value of $959,041, fresh pork to the value of $83,585, poultry and game to the value of $385,584, etc. A free interchange of natural products is evidently mutually beneficial, whereas a one-sided exchange, such as now taking place is hard on the Canadian consumer, and becomes a big factor in the high cost of living.—Brantford Expositor.

CHORAL SOCIETY.

The St. George's Choral Society will resume the Study of the Oratoria "Judas Maccabaeus" in the Collegiate Assembly Hall to-night at 8 p.m. Members are requested to bring in the tickets to Mr. Roberts, the librarian, so that last week's concert may be settled up. New members will be made heartily welcome.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE MEETING AT ENNISMORE

Addressses Given on Matters of General Interest to the Farming Community — Good Attendance

THE NIGHT SESSION

The first of the regular Winter meetings of the Farmers' Institute was held in Ennismore yesterday afternoon and evening. A splendid list of speakers brought a goodly number of agriculturists to both meetings which were presided over by the President, Mr. C. E. Moore.

The meetings are being held to-day and to-night in Lakefield.

At the Institute meeting yesterday afternoon Mr. J. N. Paget of Canboro, a native of Peterborough County, addressed the meeting on "Profit and Loss in Dairying." In the opening of his address Mr. Paget urged upon the men in the audience to question him upon any point in which they had some doubt, and which he had not touched.

Changes were constantly taking place in the dairy industry, more particularly in the last two years, and some of them were not favourable to the industry. The value of dairying in Canada to-day is estimated at $125,00,000. It was an industry in which there were good profits and great loss. There are men to-day by the score and by the hundred who are keeping cows and milking them and do not even know the character of the cow they are milking.

About eight years ago Hon. Sydney Fisher paid a visit to Denmark, which country has a world-wide reputation for its production of milk and butter. As a result the value of each individual cow was now the subject of study. Six years ago cow-testing associations began to be formed and since that time the average producing capacity of each cow in Ontario has been doubled.

The speaker said that in travelling up and down Ontario only three in every ten knew what the cows were doing. Unfortunately the agricultural people had gotten into the rut of taking too much for granted, of not applying business methods in their business. This was not as it hould be.

Agriculture to-day was the greatest industry in the world—the foundation principle of the prosperity of the country. There was not another existing industry that did not depend upon agriculture.

If you have twenty cows in a barn you may say "My cows are paying," but the fact might be that four, five or six of them might be eating the heads off the others. Through the cow-testing system the farmers discover the poor cows and discard them, replacing them by cows that paid. One farmer had twenty-six cows. A cow-testing association was organized in his district and he found that only six of them were paying for their feed. He weeded his cows out and at the end of three years had sixteen cows giving 10,000 pounds of milk more than the twenty-six cows formerly gave him. This solved the labour problem, as he, himself had time to milk sixteen, and saved him the price of the keeping of the ten extra.

"Get rid of the cow that is not giving 6,000 pounds of milk per annum" was the speaker's advice to those present. He met one man who had twenty-four cows and each of them netted over 10,000 pounds of milk a year. This had been accomplished by careful breeding, by which means he hoped to get twenty-five cows yielding 12,000 pounds of milk per annum. There are good cows in all breeds, but then, getting a sire is a most important consideration. A young sire of good breed can be bought from $75 to $150, which is little in comparison to the improved value of the stocks of the next generation.

The first consideration is not feed; it is the cow's capacity to produce milk. A cow with a poor producing capacity cannot be made to give much milk, by giving her all the feed she could eat.

By weighing the milk and estimating thus, the production of the animal, was the only way to prove which were the best cows.

What agriculturists in this country wanted was to feed the cows food that cost the least for production. Well cured alfalfa, clover hay, and corn fed through the silo was ideal food for cows. Bran costs $24 per ton. Alfalfa, with almost the same food value, costs only from $2 to $5 a ton.

Profit was the object of keeping the cows, and if they were handled properly there was no other branch of agriculture that would pay better than that of the dairy cow.

Mr. C. E. McDowel, Assistant District Representative, opened his speech by the statement that in his opinion no other country would respond so readily to a system of underdrainage as Peterborough County. By this drainage the swamps of this county could be made the best producing area, and in the case of land already producing good crops, the yield would be increased from 15 to 30 per cent. In case a farmer does not have the capital to invest in under-drainage he can borrow all the money he neds from the Ontario Legislature, through the County Council, which can be repaid in yearly installments, in twenty years' time.

The speaker explained that the benefit of drainage was three-fold. It had a physical effect on the soil that made it more porous. It made the percolation of air freer, and, paradoxial, though it might seem, it gave the soil a better supply of water. The plant could not use standing water, but owing to the system of underdrainage the roots were supplied with more running water.

Drainage made the soil easier to work; made the soil dry and warm earlier in the spring; it will ventilate the soil properly and supply water when water is most needed. It was the business of the District Representative and his assistant to survey the farm of any farmer intending to put in a system of underdrainage. This was done free of charge.

The third speaker was Mr. H. K. Denyes of Halloway, whose subject was "The Raising of Horses for Profit." A man might have for his chief branch on the farm the raising of dairy or beef cows, but as a side line there was good money in the raising of horses.

In the raising of horses careless breeding must be avoided, and good brood mares must be selected. A few years ago the speaker bought a couple of mares and he inspected hundreds before he found two to suit him. Then the breeder must be very careful in selecting a sire, and stallions should be very cautiously selected. Men couldn't afford to spend time breeding from poor stock.

The mares, while in foal, should not be given too heavy food. They should have freedom and liberty, and be given plenty of exercise. Even working the mares before the foal was not going too far in this line.

To-day there was more profit for the raisers of the heavy horses than the breeders of the light horses. It was claimed that the market for horses was on the decline. But even so, horses could be raised for years yet, at a handsome profit. Hundreds of carloads of heavy horses were shipped to the West every year, and these commanded a good price.

The wintering of colts was a phase of horse raising that required much attention. Often colts became in poor condition because they were neglected in the winter. Besides timothy hay and oats, bran should be an article of diet. Separated milk was also a good article of diet.

In closing, the speaker said that although prices for horses might go down it was still advisable to take up breeding horses as a sideline for money making.

Mr. Smith of "Farm and Dairy" spoke on the use of manure on the farm. It was the handling of the "loose ends" of a business that decided whether it should be a failure or a success. The reason why the average wheat production in the West was decreasing was because the farms were not being fertilized.

He dealt with the value of manures and showed how a man with 10 cow got $250 a year return from his cattle. There were three ways of handling manure. By leaving it in an open pile a lot of its value was lost. Piling it in a shed was a second method, but the best was to get the manure out on to the field as quickly as possible. In Denmark, the manure was piled over a tank, in the open. Each rain washed the liquid out of the manure into the tank. Then the dry material was spread on the field and the liquid manure was sprayed on the fields. This was the system used in Denmark, where dairying was carried on as it was in no other country in the world.

"Agriculture is the oldest and most important industry on the face of the earth," said Mr. Peck, M. P. P., "and I don't think anyone here, unless it is our veteran, Mr. Collins, can think more of the value of the Farmers' Institutes than I do."

The Farmers Institutes were the means of keeping the young men on the farm, and of teaching the farmers to get increased crops without increase in labour or cost. Mr. Peck praised very highly the Farmers' Club, and suggested that the use of electricity on the farm would be a good subject for the Institute.

Mr. Elliott, County Treasurer, made a brief speech. As a past President, Mr. Elliott praised the services of Mr. Collins, the energetic Secretary-Treasurer of the Farmers' Institute. Mr. Elliott also spoke on his experience in under drainage, saying: "You may raise horses, beef cattle or dairy cattle, but unless your land is drained you have started wrong.

The Evening Meeting.

At the evening meeting a programme was presented which was greatly enjoyed. The ease with which this arrangment was made possible, speaks well for the eminent suitability of the hall for the purpose of holding the meeting. It is spacious, light, and can be well heated, and offers every accommodation to speakers and audiences.

The subject of Mr. Denyes' address at the evening meeting was "The Farm, Home and Nation.' The speaker first referred to Canada as a great nation and as a factor in the mighty British Empire. A great nation must have stupendous natural resources—fisheries, forests, minerals arable lands, etc., and in this respect Canada had been richly endowed. She was richer, perhaps, in natural resources than any other country in the world.

We were accustomed to speak of the farm as producing the food for the people of Canada. But the farm not only produced the food for Canada, but they produced the men for Canada. In the past the farm had produced seventy-five per cent. of our professional men, clergymen, doctors and lawyers.

Many a farmer gave a lot of his time to breeding and developing the dairy cow, and a large number who did neglected to develop himself, who is of far more importance than the bacon hog or the dairy cattle.

Illustrating this point, the lecturer told of a clergyman who went into a farmers home in Michigan. He was taken out to view the stock, and was given their age, value and pedigree by the farmer, who had them all at his finger-tips. When the clergyman went into the house he asked of the farmer, "So this is your son, George? How old is he?" "I don't know," was the answer, "I'll ask my wife." "And how old is Jane?" "I am not certain," was the second reaponse, and again the farmer referred to his better-half for the answer.

Some farmers were making the mistake of spending their time on dumb animals, and not enough of it in their homes. They failed to develop themselves and their children, forgetting that the farm is not only producing the nation's food bu the nation's men. He forgets that there is a typical man to aspire to as well as a typical hog, or a typical cow. He does not realize the responsibility that is on him in regard to his own culture, and that of his wife and sons and daughters.

To a great many farmers their wives and daughters are little better than slaves—only a part of the force to do the work around the home. In the home women were worked too hard and men should help in domestic duties more than they do.

The farmer should improve the condition of his home at once, if it was not already so arranged. If he did not the ultimate result would be infinitely below what he might otherwise have attained in this world. They should see that first-class reading matter was to be had in their houses. Their residences should be made as beautiful as possible, inside and out, and it should be seen to that their sons and daughters be given an insight into the questions of the day.

This was what the farmer owed to himself and posterity. And in improving the home the community was improved and this in turn exerted an influence upon the nation. Thus did the culture of the nation depend, in a measure, on the culture in the farm homes.

The second address was given by Mr. Paget, on the subject "The Relations that should exist between Producer, Proprietor and Maker." In opening his address Mr. Paget said that his answer to the problem of the sales of farm and dairy products was "co-operation." Not perhaps what is often known as co-operation, but merely the farmer agreeing to supply the makers of butter and cheese with the highest quality of milk and cream. Unless the cheese factories and creameries were given the best milk, they could not produce the best quality of cheese. Then there was the manufacturers' part of the co-operative system. It was his duty to see that the produce were handled in the most modern way and that the making of the cheese or butter be carefully looked after.

But the one great essential in this matter, and the one that was most often neglected, was that of cooling the milk before it was delivered. All the cream should be cooled to 60 degrees before it was sent, and should be kept at that temperature till it reached the factory. Then, too, when the cream, separated at one time, was mixed with that separated on a previous occasion, both should be cooled before they were mixed together.

In conclusion, the speaker emphasized that the cooling of the milk was the secret of the whole thing. This would allow the butter-maker to contact the acid in the cream.

The Rev. Father Fitzpatrick gave a brief address. He referred to what previous speaker had said about the home life of the farmers and endorsed it heartily. There was no doubt that some farmers did neglect the home in their eagerness in the pursuit of material things. He dwelt upon the influence of the home in the nation.

Then, too, the speaker heartily endorsed the system of co-operation, as formulated by a previous speaker, and thought that it was the best way to answer the sales problem.

The programme given last night, which was most heartily enjoyed, was as follows:

Solo—Mr. C. Telford.

Duet—Mrs. Telford and Mrs. Scollard.

Solo—Mr. Telford.

Solo—Miss Lyde Killen.

The farmers unanimously endorsed the organisation of a Farmers' Club, which may be commenced next summer, providing other centres enclose it.

Mr. and Mrs. Scollard, Ennismore, entertained the speakers of the day, during the time they spent in the Village. Their hospitality was thorough, and the result of their efforts to make the visitors at home was really enjoyed.

His Monetary Masters Order Borden Home

The Big Interests Alarmed at Finance Minister's Colossal Proposals of Expenditure

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Estimates of Dominion expenditure this session will total over 250 million dollars unless the government changes its programme.

Premier Borden is back in Ottawa. He came Sunday, two weeks sooner than he had intended, when he left in November to hunt health and golf balls in Virginia.

It is understood that the cause of his early return is a serious difference of policy which has developed among his advisers, both within and outside the cabinet.

Some of the leading bankers, railway men and manufacturers, of Canada, have taken alarm at the programme of expenditure, which Hon. Robert Rogers has forced the government to adopt. They declare it is time for economy and that for Finance Minister White to borrow at the rate of almost 5 per cent. is bad for the credit of Canadian securities generally.

Premier Borden has been told that Finance Minister White should not be allowed to glut the London money market with government bonds bearing high interest. They say that owing to Hon. Mr. White's extravagant borrowing in London no one else whether banker, railroad man or manufacturer can sell his securities.

The interests which have great authority over the government have practically ordered Premier Borden to return to Ottawa and lead his government in a programme of economy.

A number of the ministers feel that with the revenue dropping rapidly and the borrowing rate going up, estimates should be cut down this session, no matter what Hon. Mr. Rogers may say.

The question of economy or full steam ahead on borrowed money will be decided at council meetings this week.

TORONTO FAT STOCK SHOW

The Union Stock Yards, West Toronto, invite the general public to visit the Toronto Fat Stock Show at the Union Stock Yards, on Saturday, December 6th and Monday, December 8th. The judging will take place on Saturday, December 6th, and the auction sale of the prize winners will be held on Monday, December 8th. This will be an unsurpassed exhibit of cattle, sheep and swine, and is of the greatest possible interest to every breeder and butcher throughout the province. The admission is free, and the railways are granting reduced passenger fares. The show bids fair to be the largest of its kind that has ever been held within the boundaries of the Dominion, and as an old cattleman remarked the other day, "It's second only to the big Chicago show."

A NEW STREET FROM PATTERSON TO BOLIVAR

Mohtns of Negotiations Are Resolved Into Final Action.

The City Council took the final steps last night for the opening of a new street from Bolivar to Patterson streets, about half way between Park and the Boundary. Mr. John Penrose stated that if it were opened on the west side of the lot which had been purchased a man would buy the remaining 33 feet at $12 a foot, the price paid by the city. A number of the aldermen favoured the west side and it was moved by Alderman Duffus, seconded by Alderman Johnston that the new street between Bolivar and Sherbrooke streets be opened on the west side of the lot which the city purchased, and that the new street from Sherbrooke to Patterson streets be opened on the land secured.

The Calcutt Coy's Honest Brews

About now is the time to replenish the wine cellar with a case or two of wholesome home-brewed ale, porter or lager. With many people in the Trent Valley district, there is no beer, ale or porter that gives the same satisfaction as that brewed by the Calcutt Brewing and Malting Company, East City. Under the management of Gordon Logan, this long established brewery, maintains its wide reputation for its special brews. The business done covers every section of the Counties of Peterborough, Victoria and Northumberland. It is no secret that the purity of the Calcutt output accounts for the continued growth of this business. More than ever the development of this increased demand is accounted for by the determination to produce as fine a porter, [illegible] ale as it is possible to do. The men interested in the company are practical brewers and are enterprising as well as progressive managers, and careful in their laboratory work.

SOME USEFUL RECIPES

Cheese Fonder.

Buy a quarter pound of grated cheese, eggs, milk, and a fresh loaf of bread. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in the chafing dish, and add to it one cup of milk, then stir in a cup of fresh bread crumbs and the grated cheese. Add seasoning of pepper and salt, and cook until smooth. Next put in two beaten eggs and cook three minutes longer. This is served upon crackers or toasted bread.

Boiled Codfish with Cream Sauce.

After carefully cleaning a fresh codfish place in a kettle of salted cold water. When it begins to boil let it boil fast for 15 minutes, then boil slowly until done. Take out and remove skin. Make a cream sauce by putting 1-2 cup butter into a stew pan. When melted blend in 1 tablespoon of flour, brown and stir in a cup of cream, add a pinch of salt and pepper and serve with the fish.

ENTERTAINMENT WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid Society Present a Brand New Character Sketch—Fire Chief Howard in a New Role.

WILL BE REPEATED

One of the best amateur character sketches that have been produced in this City for some time was visualized before a large gathering on Monday evening, in the Lecture Hall of Charlotte Street Methodist Church. The hall from the platform to the gallery was filled to overflowing. The sketch which was produced under the auspices of the Charlotte Street Ladies Aid Society, is entitled, "Afternoon Tea in Friendly Village, 1862." It is the work of Clara E. Anderson, author of "A Ladies' Aid Business Meeting at Mohawk Cross Roads," which met with such splendid success at its several productions in Peterborough and has since been well received in every part of the Dominion.

Briefly, the story is—Mrs. Josiah Kelly entertains two old school friends from the city. Two neighbours call and she exhibits her new family album for life-size photos. The cover opening discloses the various members of the family, the photos were more realistic, in fact were real people, the poses were admirably taken and faithful copies of our grandfathers and grandmother's times, both as to clothing and position. The second scene depicted a real quilting bee, the ladies of Friendly Village gladly assisting at the quilting. Two fashionable city ladies coming to call create quite a diversion with their stylish clothes and modern ideas. A paper on 'Woman's Rights' supposedly from the 'Female Trumpeter' was received with derision. An old song and recitation, and the singing of 'When You and I Were Young, Maggie,' in the chorus of which the ladies joined, made a most effective finale for the sketch."

The Cast.

Mrs. Josiah Kelly, hostess—Mrs. A. E. Lane.
Mrs. Devere, visitor—Mrs. S. Clegg.
Mrs. Marton, visitor—Mrs. Morley Lyle.
Mrs. Goodsense, neighbour—Mrs. J. Wolstenholme.
Thomas's Wife, neighbour—Mrs. J. Lillico.
Mrs. Hicks, neighbour—Mrs. E. Thistlewaite.
Mrs. Skinning, neighbour—Mrs. A. Bookout.
Mrs. Runkle, neighbour—Mrs. R. F. Downey.
Mrs. Meek, neighbour—Mrs. Walter Stocker.
Mrs. Bond, neighbour—Mrs. G. B. Jamieson.
Mrs. Donnely, neighbour—Mrs. W. A. Howard.
Mrs. Jack, neighbour— Miss Lily Emmerson.
Mrs. Lamb, neighbour— Mrs. W. H. Christie.
Mrs. Vernon, visitor from the city—Mrs. P. D. Wright.
Mrs. Good, visitor from the city—Mrs. A. W. Pratten.
Deacon Sykes, deacon—Mr. R. F. Downey.

The sketch was a mirth provoking play in two scenes. The first scene in which was introduced the gigantic album, brought down the house. The apparent inanimate figures who posed as "family photos" in the album found it difficult at times to contain themselves. In one or two instances the figures manifested unmistakable signs of life to the huge delight of the audience.

"Was Shot in the Back."

The climax to the family album was reached when Fire Chief Howard was introduced to "Mrs. Josiar Kelly's" friends as the "boy who was killed in the war." Chief Howard was attired in the familiar uniform worn by the members of the 57th Regimen, Peterborough Rangers. His appearance in the family album elicited the following dialogue:

"Why Mary I ought to know that face."

"Sure he was killed in the war. He was shot in the back. He only lived long enough to say, "I was coming back to you, Mary.'

"What a pity he ran away. If he had stood his ground he would not have been shot in the back."

"Sure he was coming back to me. I mind the day he went away looking so brave and true. I often sit before the fireside and dream of the good old days before the war."

At this juncture the cover of the album was closed and the soldier boy who was shot in the back resumed his duties as property man behind the scenes.

The second scene depicted a real old-fashioned quilting bee in which a number of specialties were introduced. These included a recitation by Mrs. W. H. Christie, a duet by Messrs. D. R. Fleming and R. F. Downey and a couple of well rendered solos by Miss Ada Richardson. The singing of "When You and I Were Young Maggie" by Mrs. Morley Lyle and Mrs. A. E. Lane constituted a fitting finale for the entertainment, which will be repeated this evening.

HIS LITTLE SLIP.

A well-known business man who lives in the suburbs and usually goes home by the 5.30 train, met a friend the other day, and was persuaded to remain in town for the evening and attend a smoker. He was at a loss for a moment how to square himself with his wife, but finally, going to the telegraph office, he wired:

"Missed the 5.30 train. Do not keep dinner waiting. Will be home late." It was a good deal later when he reached home, and his wife met him at the door.

"Did you get my message, dearest?" he asked quickly, hoping to forestall the trouble.

"Yes," she replied in chilly accents, "and I would like you to explain why you sent a wire at 4.30 telling me you had missed the 5.30 train."

C. G. E. Declares A Bonus

Of One Per Cent. on the Common Stock —May Help to Strengthen the Market

Canadian General Electric directors have declared a bonus of 1 per cent. on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 1 3-4. Both are payable Jan. 1. This makes 8 per cent. on the stock in 1913, the same as in 1912.

Ought to Help Some.

"The declaration of that one per cent. bonus on General Electric," said a Toronto broker, "ought to have a helpful effect on the market and give sentiment on the industrial situation a more hopeful tinge. I am convinced that all that is needed is a little more sunshine and a little less pessimism, and we'd have a decidedly better market. It is useless to expect the investor or the trader to buy stocks when so much bear talk is current."

It would be too much to assume that this view is unanimous, however. "The outlook," said another broker, "is vastly different from what it was a year ago, when General Electric declared a bonus before. The company may have had a good year, but the indications for 1914 are the reverse of rosy."

STARS FOR THE WEEK

To-day the moon and the planet Uranus will be in conjunction and Venus and Mercury will appear to almost touch each other in the early eastern morning sky.

On Friday the moon will be at last quarter.

Venus is still a morning star whilst Jupiter as evening star is rapidly sinking earlier each night in the west.

Saturn is now well up and passes overhead at 10:30 o'clock at night. Mars is about four hours farther to the east and now distant from us about 63 million miles.

Council Gives Permission For Turnbull Store Elevator

At Final Regular Meeting of the Present Year—City Will Retain Possession of Ground Under Sidewalk.

TO BE USED UNTIL 11 A. M.

The last regular meeting of the Council for the present year was held on Monday night with Mayor Bradburn in the chair and all the members present.

There was quite a gallery of citizens, the majority of whom attended to give their support to the petition for a new general traffic bridge across the Otonabee linking up the east and south wards in the vicinity of Dalhousie and Maria streets.

Statement of Roll.

The statement of roll ending Nov. 30 was submitted by Tax Collector W. J. Green.

To total amount of roll for 1913—$272,456.29.

By total amount of deposit—$255,750.13.

Balance—$16,706.16.

Total amount for November:
Taken and deposited—$105,578.22.
Referred to Finance Committee.

Invitation to Schools.

An invitation from the Board of Education was received through Mr. G. H. Thompson to attend the formal opening of the King George and Queen Mary Public Schools, which will take place on Friday, Dec. 5, at 2:30 p.m.

Mayor Bradburn requested the members of the Council to attend the opening if they possibly could.

Turnbull Elevator Question.

The report of the Board of Works reopened the question of granting permission for the construction of a goods elevator on Simcoe street in connection with the new Turnbull building now in the course of erection at the corner of George and Simcoe streets. Alderman Buller read the report which allowed the construction of a coal storage room for the building, but which made no mention of the other subject.

Alderman Langford—In regard to Alderman Buller's report, I was not at the meeting of the Board. It seems that some of the aldermen did not understand what was asked for. The elevator is proposed to be built on the outside half of the sidewalk. The walk will be made two feet wider, and it is now ten feet or more in width. The elevator will be 5 feet 2 in. by 6 feet. 3 in., the latter dimension running east and west.

In reply to Alderman Duncan, Alderman Langford said his father was the contractor, the Toronto Savings and Loan Company the owners, and Mr. Might the proprietor of the Turnbull business.

Mr. Might stated that it would cost the owners less if the goods elevator were not constructed. They asked him what he wanted, and he included the elevator in order to facilitate the handling of incoming goods. In regard to safety, when the elevator is at the sidewalk level it automatically throws up a guard. This will be safer than the old opening.

If I were an outsider, he said, and were putting up the best building in the city to employ 100 hands, and all I asked was an elevator, I would not be charged two cents a cubic foot for the space. A nominal fee of one dollar a year might be considered sufficient.

Mayor Bradburn pointed out that this was close to one of the busiest corners in the city, and did not apply to industries in the outskirts.

Mr. Might said there were places in the city where no charge was made for space used under the sidewalk.

Alderman Duffus—When you take into consideration that the elevator takes up only five feet of the sidewalk leaving plenty of room for pedestrians, that it would get rid of the cases instead of leaving them on the sidewalk, and that the elevator will be used only during the unloading of drays, it looks like a better system that the use of the sidewalk opening into the old building.

Mr. Tewsley stated that if the present steel doors were used the crates would have to be run across the sidewalk, with the result that they would block traffic more or less.

Alderman Duncan—I would be satisfied to have the elevator there if it were used only in the morning.

Alderman Anderson maintained the position he took at the Board of Works meeting when Engineer Parsons brought in his report objecting to the elevator. They would be slippery in wet weather, he said, and would therefore cause accidents. He referred to other objections raised by Mr. Parsons.

Alderman Gillespie—All this information should have been given to us at our meeting.

Mr. Parsons gave a verbal statement of the points brought out in his report to the Board. He objected to the steel doors in the sidewalk, also declared the necessity of maintaining room for conduits under the walk.

Ald. Johnston—Recalling the meetings of a few night ago it first looked as if it was a foregone conclusion that the request would be granted. The Engineer's report changed the aspect and we all agreed that it was a good report. We've had considerable infomation given us to-night and I move that the request be granted under certain restrictions.

Ald. Anderson—I'm going to stay with the Engineer's report. I for one could not grant it, and I'm sorry I can't change my mind. I believe the steel doors are dangerous.

The motion by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Gordon, granted permission for the construction of a coal storage room and elevator under the Simcoe Street sidewalk provided the company gives the City an agreement, to be prepared by the City Solicitor, agreeing to put in the room and opening and maintain them as directed by the City Engineer, to indemnify the City with respect to them, to pay any extra cost the City may be put to in putting conduits or other services under the sidewalks and to remove them when requested by the Council to do so.

Ald. Buller's report was carried, the only opposition coming from Ald. Anderson and Ald. McIntyre.

Mr. Might said that the elevator would not be used after 11 a.m., at which hour all the morning freight would be received and taken into the cellar.

Ald. McIntyre resented a petition from East City residents for a sewer on Sophia and James Streets.—Referred to the Board of Works.

SHIPLOAD OF FOOD FROM FAR NEW ZEALAND

The Duty Will Be Added to the Price

OTTAWA, DEC. 1.The Liberal policy of free trade in foodstuffs is backed by figures from the report of the Trade Commission of New Zealand, which draws attention to the fact that he seamer Niagara, now en route to Vancouver, is bringing a cargo of foodstuffs for Canadian consumption. The cargo includes: 17,479 boxes of butter; 255 carcasses ofveal; 212 quarters of beef; 274 cases of eggs; 25 carcasses of mutton. A custom toll will be paid by the Canadian consumer on all these food stuffs, and the cost of living will be increased by the amount of that tax.

ALD. ANDERSON SAYS COUNCIL HAS NOT BEEN EXTRAVAGANT AND GIVES DEBENTURE LIST

REVIEW OF FOUR YEARS

Finance Minister Anderson called the attention of the Council last night to a letter signed "Ratepayer" in Monday's Examiner, in which it was stated that the City's debenture debt was $705,008 in 1908 and that its increase to $1,318,008 at the end of 1912 was due to extravagance.

A.d. Anderson felt that the citizens would be interested in this letter, and it was due to them, and especially to the Council to show what the real figures are and how the increase is accounted for.

The debenture debt on December 31, 1908, was $1,063,520.32. On the same date, 1912, it was $1,562,909.34.

The increase during the four years has amounted to $508,999.44. Part of this has been made up by the following:

Waterworks	$160,000.00
Schools	115,000.00
	$275,000.00

A glance at the appended statement shows the ratepayers have sanctioned by their votes a number of the expenditures. Local improvements such as sidewalks, sewers, etc., all permanent work, makes a total of $90,499.44. The Smith Street bridge, Protestant Home, Isolation Hospital, total $55,000.00, all of which can hardly be laid against the Council on the ground of extravagance.

Issued in 1909—

Local improvements	$ 25,108.15
Cement crossings	2,000.00
Public schools	14,000.00
Waterworks dam	120,000.00
Street extensions	21,500.00
Smith Street bridge	32,500.00
	$215,108.15

Issued in 1910—

Local improvements	$22,671.46
Waterworks	20,000.00
Colonial Weaving Co.	3,500.00

Protestant Home	10,000.00
	$65,602.97

Issued in 1912—

Waterworks	$ 10,000.00
Public schools	85,000.00
Local improvements	19,116.86
Bonner-Worth	6,000.00
De Laval	19,500.00
	$139,616.86
Grand Total	$1,572,519.76
Debentures paid off	9,550.42
Net debt Dec. 31, 1912	$1,562,969.34

This gives a total of $1,572,579.76, of which $9,550.42 has been paid off, leaving a net debt on Dec. 31, 1912, of $1,562,969.34.

In regard to "Ratepayer's" statement that the debenture debt in 1908 was $705,000.00, Ald. Anderson stated that on July 29, 1907, it was $705,-084.11, but this did not include the debentures for local improvements up to that time. Hence, "Ratepayer" did not cover the entire debenture issue. Going over the above list the expenditure for schools and waterworks does not come directly under the Council's supervision.

Citizens Gave Council.

Again, local improvements are petitioned for by the citizens who ask for sidewalks, sewers, etc. The items, street extensions, Smith Street bridge, Colonial Weaving Company, Romaine Street sewer, Isolation Hospital, De Laval and others received the consent of the ratepayers through the polls. The Bonner-Worth item is a loan which is being repaid. Hence, 'Ratepayer' has no grounds left upon which to state that the Council has been "guilty" of extravagance. If extravagance has been displayed, Ald. Anderson intimated that the blame could not be charged to the Council. "Ratepayer" had, himself, probably, sanctioned the majority of the debenture issue.

INTEREST IN TRIAL OF DR. W. B. CRAIG

Fifteen Year Old Daughter of the Prisoner a Pathetic Figure in the Court Room.

WILL TRY AN ALIBI

Special Wire to The Examiner.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Dec. 2. — Before a crowd that jammed the little court room here to-day the state began the introduction of her witnesses. It expects to prove that Dr. William B. Craig, Canadian dean of Indiana Veterinary College, slew Dr. Helene Knabe, Indianapolis woman physician.

All eyes were trained on the tall handsome Scotchman and then shifted to the most pitiful figure in the case, little fifteen-year-old Marian Craig, who will attempt to clear her father by establishing an alibi possibility. That sympathy for the little girl might sway the minds of the jurors caused the lawyers for the state to obtain from each juror a statement that her presence in the court room would in no way effect his vote.

VALEDICTORY CONCERT IN HONOUR OF REV. DR. MARSH

Choir of Springville Church Show Tangible Evidence of Esteem for Retiring Pastor—Local Talent Present.

CHURCH WAS FILLED

A farewell concert, in honour of Rev. Dr. Marsh and family was given on Monday evening in Springville Presbyterian Church. The entertainment, which was conducted under the auspices of the choir, was thoroughly enjoyed by the large gathering that filled the Church.

The programme took the form of a specially selected musical programme, in which the following Peterborough artists participted, Professor and Mrs. Renwick, Mr. and Mrs. F. Miles, Miss Jessie Logan, violiniste George Street Methodist Church, male quartette comprising Messrs. L. Fraser, W. Dartnell, F. Cole and G. Johnston, Mr. John Marsh, organist of Springville Presbyterian Church, and Master Jock Renwick of Peterborough. The George Street Sunday school orchestra also contributed to the musical part of the programme.

Rev. R. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, occupied the chair. During the course of the evening, Mr. John Marsh and Miss Mary Marsh were presented with the following address:

The Address.

It is with feelings of deep regret we realize that the associations which we so thoroughly enjoyed from the commencement thereof are now about to cease, and that you, by your response to the call of duty to other scenes, are about to leave our midst. We, as a choir, therefore, desire to express our sincere appreciation of the great interest you have taken in the service of song; also, by our association you have, through your high ideals, developed within us a desire for noble service and forged Heaven's strongest chain, friendship. In Mr. John Marsh we recognize the stewardship of special talents and thankfully acknowledge your fidelity to the duties of Organist so proficiently and faithfully rendered. We have found in you, Miss Marsh, the same noble qualities, and extend to you our thanks for service rendered in song. We especially appreciate the influence of your associations. This influence has so permeated us that by your removal from amongst us a discord in the harmonies of service has been caused. We unitedly invoke Heaven's choicest benedictions to accompany you through life; may your achievements heretofore be but the prelude of a grander and nobler chorus in which we may all again unite. If not mid earthly scenes, may it be our happy lot to blend again our voices in praising Him who was dead and is now alive, in one Grand Anthem, where Friendships never are severed and parting are unknown.

Miss Mary Marsh was also made a life member of the Women's Missionary Society by the Mission Band.

The esteem and respect of the community in which Dr. Marsh has identified himself during his seven years' pastorate at Springville was manifested in a tangible form, by the presentation of a number of handsome gifts, including a mink muff, which was presented to Mrs. Marsh.

Addresses were delivered by Mr. T. C. Elliot and Mr. R. R. Hall of Peterborough, Rev. Mr. Butler of Cavan, and Rev. Mr. Wickett, of Fraserville.

Rev. Dr. Marsh and family will leave this week for their new field of labour at Holstein, Ontario.

Christmas Rush At The Post Office

The Christmas rush in the mails, which is always looked forward to with somewhat of a trempur by the postal authorities, began yesterday. A large number of parcels for England and other "old countries," was piled into the local office.

For more than a week yet it will be possible for the natives of the old land to mail parcels in this city, and have them reach their destination before Christmas. But the deluge commenced yesterday afternoon and will continue until Christmas Day.

But besides the outgoing foreign and domestic mail, there is the incoming mail, which will show a more decided increase as Christmas approaches, until finally, for a few days before Christmas Day, the postman will be dragging a sleigh, and two or three bags of mail from door to door.

Better Factory Service.

Commencing recently a new mail delivery route has been added to those already in use in the city. Every morning at 7:30 o'clock a postman leaves the Post Office and carries the mail directly to the companies in the south of the city. By this means the companies get their mail earlier, and their business is facilitated. Those being served in this delivery are: Peterborough Canoe Company, Peterborough Canoe Company, B. T. Ackermans, Campbell Flour Mills, T. Kinnear & Co., McDonald Planing Mills, Canadian Canoe Company, Lundy Shovel & Tool Company, Colonial Weaving Company, Canadian General Electric Company, De Laval Dairy Supply Company, and Henry Hope and Sons.

One Man Is Killed In Strike Riot

Special Wire to The Examiner.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Dec. 2. — One unknown man was shot and three seriously injured in the teamsters' strike riot here before noon to-day. The fatal shooting was done by three negroes and two white employees riding in an empty waggon through the downtown streets. Strike breakers under arrest say one shot was fired from the mob of strikers and sympathizers threatening the waggon. The police reserves dispersed the crowd. A spectator is dying at the hospital.

HIS BI-PLANE TURNED TURTLE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

EAST CHURCH, ENG., Dec. 2. — Captain Wilman Lushington of the Royal Naval Flying Corps, was instantly killed here to-day when his biplane turned turtle.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S MESSAGE

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, DEC. 2.—President Wilson's message was very satisfactory. The announcement was made a week ago that its character would be very delicate.

President Wilson says: There can be no certain prospect of peace in America until Huerta has surrendered his usurped authority in Mexico and until it is understood by all that such present governments will not be countenanced by us.

Huerta has forfeited respect and moral support of even those who wished him to succeed. His power and prestige is crumbling. When the end comes we shall hope to see constructive order restored in Mexico.

Meadoo's distribution of treasury funds is approved.

Direct presidential primaries are held together with conferences to include candidates for national offices, so that they may be held directly responsible for platform pledges.

Government construction of railroads and harbours in Alaska should be assumed as practical to development of the locality.

Anti-Trust Law.

"I think we should let the Sherman Anti-Trust law stand as it is, with its debatable ground about it, but reduce its area of that debatable ground by further and more explicit legislation and should also supplement that act by legislation, which will not only improve it but also facilitate its administration and make it fairer to all concerned. No doubt we shall all wish, and the country will expect this to be the central subject of our deliberations during the present session, but it is a subject so many sided and so deserving of careful and discussion that I shall take the liberty of addressing you upon it in a special message at a later date.

For Business Men.

It is of capital importance that business men of this country should be relieved of all uncertainties of law with regard to their enterprises and investments and a clear path indicated which they can live in without anxiety.

It is as important that they should be relieved of embarrassment and set free to prosper and that private monopoly should be destroyed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.— For the fourth time since March 4th, President Wilson to-day personally addressed a joint session of Congress. The occasion was the delivery of his annual message. On only one previous occasion has the interest in the Executive's utterances been so intense. To-day's message afforded the first opportunity to get a real insight into the policies of the administration. The summarized chief features of the message were as follows: Mexico—Mexico has no government. There can be no certain prospect of peace until General Huerta has surrendered his usurped authority; the collapse is not far away. Farmers—"The pending currency bill does the farmers great service. The farmer is the servant of the seasons; the farmer and the government will henceforth work together as real partners." Safety at Sea—"Prompt alleviation of the very unsafe, unjust and burdensome conditions which now surround the employment of sailors." The message was among the briefest documents of its kind from any President, and some 3,000 words long. It required less than thirty minutes for reading, though it treated upon a variety of subjects. The President came directly to the Chamber from the White House in his automobile, remaining in the building only long enough to deliver his address.

An entering wedge for the government along public utilities and a demand that the people, not politicians, select the presidential candidates, were also revolutionary suggestions of President Wilson to-day. Reading the annual message to Congress, the President frankly advocated a movement of government owned and controlled railways for Alaska, and declared it necessary if the natural resources of that rich territory are exploited.

BLACKPOOL HAVE REFUSED SUBSTANTIAL OFFER FOR QUINN ROTHERFORD'S LAST APPEARANCE

Newcastle United, Chelsea and Aston Villa Are All Rich Clubs That Are Passing Through Rough Waters Just Now--Irvine Thornley is Still Scoring Goals for South Shields--Kerby Has Asked to be Put on the Transfer List.

Sheffield United are the sort of team who might go anywhere and do anything—triumph or collapse.

Newcastle United, Chelsea and Aston Villa are all rich clubs that are passing through rough waters just now.

Rutherford's last appearance in the League team for Newcastle United was on April 12 last, when he played centre forward against Notts County.

Leslie Skene, the ex-Fulham goalkeeper, is now a "full-fledged" doctor, and was recently acting in Burnley. Will Burnley get his amateur services?

Judging by their forwards display at Birmingham, Lincoln are very foolish in not playing Slade, who is one of the best centres in the Second League.

Some of the Villa officials have been absent from the last few games. They have been out "scouting" for new players, but have not made a single capture.

The Villa players say that Vizard, of Bolton, is the cleverest outside left playing to-day, and that the Bolton forwards are the best-balanced in the country—Blacburn included.

Middleboe, the Danish half-back who was supposed to have fixed up with Newcastle United, has signed an amateur form for Chelsea. It is said he has gone to London for business purposes.

Povey, the talented South Liverpool half-back, is a postman. He certainly "stamps" himself as a favourite with the "mates," by his "deliveries" between the "posts." A future man of "letters" so to speak.

English and Cook are playing so well for Sheffield United that Bob Benson is not missed.

M'Cracken seems to be making enemies wherever he goes. He had a tremendous reception from the Burnley crowd at Turf Moor on Saturday—a reception, of course, the reverse of complimentary.

Woolwich Arsenal are taking a fancy to ex-Tyneside players. First Jobey and Hardinge, and now 'Jacky' Rutherford.

Chelsea team although by no means brilliant should be capable of gaining a fairly good position in the League table.

Nuttall of Everton only cost $1,250 transfer fee, and experts say he would be cheap at four times the amount paid for him.

No man could desire to make a more successful debut than the old Novocastrian, Jack Rutherford, for Woolwich for he practically won the game on his own boot.

Aston Villa must be hard up for players when they play two half-back as a right wing pair. 'Tis wonderful that the club does not invest in a bit of fresh talent.

'Tis not necessary to look beyond Joe Smith for England's inside left

'Tis said that Macaulay of Hudders field is anxious to change his quarters.

Kirby, the Exeter City captain, has asked to be put on the transfer list

Newcastle's half-back line is the only all-Scottish combination in English football.

It is said that Kirsopp of the Gateshead Club will be picked up shortly by a first-class club.

Glennon shapes better than either of the brothers Burkinshaw, but he is not a M'Leun at centre forward.

Osborne, of Preston N. E. is regarded as the crack shot of the club, and strange to say, he is the only forward who has not scored a League goal this season.

Dawson, the clever forward from Leith, has at last got his place in the Liverpool League team.

Last season the Lincoln City half-back line was the secret of the strength that was shown in the attacking party as a whole. This season it is another story altogether.

Chelsea should persevere with Marshall. He is just a little rash at present in some of his tackling, but with more experience should make a first class defender.

Eli Bradley has returned to his native town club, Dudley, via West Bromwich Albion, Coventry City, and Heart of Midlothian. When he played for Coventry he was regarded as one of the best half-backs in the Southern League.

The Finance Committee of the Football Association have expressed their regret that satisfactory arrangements for the improvement of the football ground, to fulfil the requirements as set out by the Football Association in their resolution of July last, had not been made by the Crystal Palace authorities. The committee are of the opinion that it is essential that arrangements be made without delay for the next final tie and therefore instruct the secretary to make inquiries as to what clubs in London or the provinces are prepared to bring their grounds up to the requirements of the Council.

HOCKEY

A big squad turned out for the first workout of the Peterborough Hockey Club at Brock St. Rink last night, and the bunch went through half an hour's hard drill at a combination of Rugby and basketball, after which a brisk run was indulged in. The majority of those out were juniors, the only intermediates in line being Flowers, Park and Lancefield. Most of the others will be on hand to-morrow night when the junior squad will also be augmented by the addition of a number who were unable to get out last night. All players are asked to be on hand to-morrow night as close to 7 o'clock as possible. There is no sign of ice yet, and the preliminary training is all the more important on that account.

Chinamen Must Show Photographs

The photographers of the city have been engaged during the past few days, in taking two photographs of every Chinaman in the city. This is made necessary by the new regulations governing the immigration department of Canada, and to which all the Chinese residents of the Dominion must conform.

There are upwards of fifty Chinamen in Peterborough, and all of those, who have not already done so, must fill out the new immigration forms and have them returned to Ottawa. Two bona fide photos of every one of the Orientals must also be forwarded to Ottawa.

Yesterday five Chinese invaded the office of Immigration Officer Miller, to comply with the new law, and he is looking forward to having the remainder calling at his office within the next few days.

Dr. Myles Is The Candidate

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, MAN., Dec. 2.— At a meeting which lasted till long after midnight, Dr. H. W. Myles, of Treherne, was nominated to take the field as the Liberal standard bearer in the bye-election created by the unseating of Alexander Morrison. Myles is strong and very popular. The Liberals here have great hopes of victory.

THE COUNCIL CONSIDERED, ETC.

to further and consider the provision of several fire halls in the growing sections of the city. We are spending money for the people as we would do for ourselves. If we make a mistake let them put us out.

Alderman Duffus stated that if there had been any bad fire when the water mains burst he considered the Council would have had to blame themselves for not providing auxiliary apparatus. The chemical engine would relieve the damage done by the flood of water that has to be turned on a fire even in its incipient stages.

Alderman Buller—When I was on the Fire, Water and Light Committee I considered this machine was necessary and I still think so.

In regard to the poor man I think the argument is weak. If one of the factories were burned out, and sometimes a fire may get the start of us by delay caused by distance, it would be a loss to more than one ratepayer.

Alderman Anderson—I have always contended that the factories have good equipment to fight fire until the brigade could reach the scene. But the average householder has nothing, and it is of the utmost importance that the brigade gets to house fires as quickly as possible. Hence the chemical engine looks like an apparatus that will be of greatest use to ratepayers removed from the centre of the city.

The report of the Fire, Water and Light Committee was carried on motion of Alderman Gillespie, seconded by Alderman Gordon.

Alderman Langford voted nay.

LIBERALISM IS MILITANT

Liberalism, in Ontario, Though Behind in the Count of Representation Noses is Not Weak, Depressed Nor Discouraged

Within the last month, beginning with October 31, four bye-elections have been held in Ontario, two for the Legislature, and two for the Parliament of Canada.

In the South Bruce election for the Dominion, a Government majority of 103 was converted into a Liberal majority of 124.

These figures indicate a very remarkable increase in the strength of Liberalism in this Province; and we believe that this increase will be gratifying to all who do not take a narrow partisan view of politics. So long as we live under party governments both parties ought to be strong, especially in a Province which contains more than one-third of the people of Canada. One party ought not to be so strong that it will be careless, nor the other so weak that it will be depressed and discouraged.

Evidently the Liberal party is not weak, it is not depressed, it is not discouraged. It has sustained some severe defeats, but it is full of hope, of vitality, of the spirit of progress. It has confidence in its leaders, it is faithful to them in adversity, and it is willing to work and to fight until better days come.

Especially cheering is the interest that young men are taking in public affairs. At the Hamilton banquet, organized by young men, presided over by a young man who is the head of a federation of forty-five associations of young men, there was displayed an intense eagerness to hear public questions discussed. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Rowell talked of measures and principles, not small politics. Then, although it was midnight, the young men clamoured for more speeches, and kept the meeting going until two o'clock in the morning.

Let the young men and old men keep up the interest, not only listening to speeches, but talking. Responsible government, more abundant food, social reform. There are matters of the deepest interest, fit to engage the highest faculties of the mind and to enlist the sympathies of all true Canadians.—Toronto Star.

LAST DAY FOR APPEALS

To-morrow is the last day for appealing to have names inserted on the new voters' list. His Honour Judge Huycke will sit to hear the appeals at a date to be determined.

The possibility of the important question of the proposed Dalhousie Street bridge by-law, and also a by-law to purchase additional fire apparatus, should be incentive enough for every ratepayer whose name is missing from the list, to have it duly entered.

Last year there were nearly three hundred appeals, due largely to the fact that a local option campaign was in progress and that each side worked assiduously to have as many names entered as possible. The number of voters on the new list to date is 5,668.

ASKS FOR ORDER TO TAKE POSSESSION.

The following report of the Power committee, read by Ald. Johnston at the Council meeting, indicates that the progress is being steadily made:—

"That the City Solicitor be directed to apply at once to the County Judge for an order authorizing the City to take possession of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., which the City has authority to expropriate."

SALESMANSHIP AN ART.

Salesmanship is certainly an art worth cultivating; and the number of our storekeepers who do not realize the power of printers' ink as a factor in selling their goods, is becoming smaller every day. If skillfully done, plenty of judicious advertising rarely fails to find a market at profitable prices for the man who has the right goods to offer. Salesmanship is oftentimes the weakest point in connection with the business of some of our merchants. Oh, yes! as before remarked, salesmanship is an art well worthy of cultivation.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The advance this morning was rapid and if it had not been checked would have weakened the technical position by driving in part of the short interest without attracting buying of the better kind. The brakes were put on however and prices were slowed down, with the result that at 11 o'clock the tone was strong, although prices were a little under the last. The rumour about the change of control of Erie was so evident as to make Can. Pac. the purchasing Company, but there was nothing original in either part of the story, one of them being twelve years old at last and the other, three or four. The real fact is that the stock has been accumulated by large interests.

THANKS HIS MANY FRIENDS

Peterborough, Dec. 2, '13.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Would you be so kind as to allow me through your columns to thank the very many kind friends who assisted at the bazaar. To thank them personally is almost impossible, as they number in the hundreds. It would mean two or three columns in your paper, a favour I presume, that would be too great to ask. But I wish to make one exception, and that is to thank the congregation of St. John's for their great efforts on our behalf. Without St. John's there could have been no bazaar.

Once more I tender my sincerest thanks to all.

J. PRICE,
Rector St. George's Church.

BIRTH.

COLEMAN.—On Monday, Dec. 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Coleman, 426 George Street, a son.

OBITUARY

MRS. W. C. TAYLOR.

The death occurred this morning of an old and highly respected resident of Peterborough, in the person of Isabella Hall, wife of the late W. C. Taylor, who passed away at 10:30 o'clock, at her residence, 176 London street. The late Mrs. Taylor, who was born in Smith Township, and had lived all her life in that township and in Peterborough, had been ill about a year. The deceased was widely known in the district and had a very large number of friends. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Isabella, and one son, Mr. Wm. H. Taylor, of Peterborough, and by three brothers, Messrs. William, John and Richard Hall.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon, the service at the house at 2:15 o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. WM. DOHERTY.

At the family residence, Kinmount, on Friday, Nov. 21st, the death occurred of Mrs. Wm. J. Doherty after an illness extending over several months.

Th late Mrs. Doherty, who was born in Galway on April 30th, 1884, was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Collins.

The deceased was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and was highly respected by all who knew her.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband and son, Neil, her parents, two sisters, Mrs. Maurice D. Hickey of Galway, and Mrs. Wm. D. Doherty of Somerville, and five brothers, Lawrence of Galway; James and John of Peterborough and William and Leonard, at home.

The funeral, which took place on Monday, left the family residence followed by a large cortege and proceeded to the Church of Immaculate Conception, where a requiem high mass was sung by Rev. J. J. Guiry, after which the remains were interred in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, Galway.

THE ODDFELLOWS' OPEN MEETING

On Thursday of this week the Oddfellows will hold their first open meeting. There will be an interesting programme and a lecture on the delay of the Hebrews in the Wilderness. A great interest is being shown in this matter, and a bumper audience is assured. There will be no charge.

The doors will be opened at 7.45, and the trouble will begin at 8.15.

Less than Four Weeks Till Christmas.

GARBAGE WANTED FOR NEW INCINERATOR.

Ald. Duncan states that the incinerator will be ready for operation within two days and twenty tons of garbage are wanted for the first firing. Light fires have been drying out the plant and the entire structure is now practically completed. It is likely that the garbage collected in the rounds of the City will be augmented by clearing out refuse in the vicinity of the incinerator.

SALE OF WORK AT PARK STREET CHURCH.

Will Take Place on Tuesday, December 9th in the Basement.

Sale of work by the Delta Alpha Ladies' Bible Class of the Park Street Baptist Sunday school will take place on Tuesday, December 9th, afternoon and evening, in the basement of the Church. This will afford a grand opportunity to secure Christmas presents. Mrs. (Rev.) F. A. Conners' class will serve tea.

BISHOP IN COBOURG.

For Ceremony in Connection With Father Murray's Appointment.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien went to Cobourg to-day to invest Rev. Father Murray with the robes of Domestic Prelate, or Monsignor. The function will take place this evening and will be attended by a number of the clergy of the diocese.

A REVOLUTION IN PHOTOGRAPHY

We have just installed what is unquestionably the most powerful and scientifically designed Electrical Lighting Apparatus in Peterborough.

At the turn of a switch the sitter is flooded with a soft mellow light that will not even injure the delicate eyes of a baby, and yet is so powerful that it is as speedy as daylight. The results are indistinguishable from day pictures.

No more need to wait on account of dull weather or inability to come in the daytime. Electricians, Opticians and the general public are cordially invited to inspect the new machine.

FRENCH PREMIER DEFEATED ON LOAN PROPOSALS

Effort of Government to Exempt New Military Loan From Taxation Fails by Reason of Coalition of Radicals and Socialists.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Premier Barthou was defeated, 299 to 165, in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon, on the question of whether the new loan of $260,000,000 should be subject to taxation or immune like the existing rentes.

As soon as the vote placing the Government in the minority by 25 was read, the Ministers left the chamber in a body and proceeded to Elysee Palace, where they handed their resignations to President Poincare.

The Ministry, headed by J. Louis Barthou, after a long and vigorous defence, fell as the result of the combined attacks of the recently reorganized Radicals, under ex-Premier Caillaux, and the Socialists, led by M. Jaures. The Government, by a narrow margin Monday, was victorious in a trial of strength against the Opposition, the new loan being approved by a vote of 291 to 270.

The debate yesterday was on the question of extending to the new loan the same immunity from taxation as enjoyed by the old rentes and the Government again made it a question of a vote of confidence. The Opposition urged that to exempt the new rentes would enable those investing exclusively in these to evade unfairly the projected income tax.

Premier Barthou and M. Dumont, the Minister of Finance, made eloquent appeals to the chamber to respect the traditional immunity of the rentes. To tax rentes, they declared, would deal a deadly blow to the financial prestige of France. But their appeals fell on deaf ears. The sitting grew more uproarious, and frequently the President rang his bell in vain attempt to obtain order. The result of the vote was greeted with wild cheering by the members of the Opposition, while the Government forces appeared greatly depressed.

All the parties agree that the Ministerial crisis precipitated by the vote in the chamber creates a situation of exceptional gravity. The first immediate consequence is indefinitely to postpone the issue of the loan, which the necessity to meet the extraordinary military expenditure makes indispensable. It is also generally feared that the prospect of a tax on rentes will seriously affect the national credit. Some of the political leaders declare that it is not a mere Ministerial crisis but an economic, financial and social crisis, such as France has not seen in many years.

In finding a successor for Mr. Barthou, President Poincare is faced by a task of unusual difficulty and delicacy on account of the radical divergence on capital questions existing between the various groups composing the Republican majority.

Among those most prominently mention for the Premiership are Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber of Deputies; Jean Dupuy, former Minister of Public Works, and M. Doumergue, former Minister of Education.

URGE NAVAL RECESS.

WASHINGTON, D.C. Dec. 3.—The House for hours yesterday debated the Hensley resolution to commit the United States to the Winston Churchill plan for an international year's holiday in naval construction, and last night the advocates of the project predicted passage of the resolution in the House by Friday. Consideration of the matter will be resumed Thursday, with both sides, the advocates far outnumbering the opponents, prepared to continue the debate.

The idea of suspending naval construction for a year, first proposed to the British Parliament by the first Lord of the Admiralty, has since been commended by leaders of all parties in the American Congress. Representative Hensley of Missouri, author of the measure, in urging its adoption, pointed out that only two per cent. of the United States revenues is devoted to the benefit of agriculture, while 60 per cent. goes to defray the cost of the past war and to prepare for future wars. He declared that all over the country there was going up the cry of the high cost of living, while enormous expenditures were being made for military and naval purposes.

Representative Foster of Illinois said the time had come when the United States should take the lead of all the world nations in the movement for peace, to lift the burdens from the people and to leave the settlement of differences to arbitration.

Representative Decker of Missouri declared that the United States built battleships "because, forsooth, our neighbors build them." He suggested that a year's naval holiday might be extended indefinitely.

Railway Cartage Service.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—The council of the Board of Trade yesterday appointed a deputation to go to Montreal to interview the officials of the Grand Trunk and C. P. R. to ascertain if it has yet been decided definitely to discontinue in January the present cartage system and if so what arrangements have been made to accommodate merchants. Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and London are affected by the proposed change.

Body Found in River.

QUEBEC, Dec. 3.—The body of Charles Gagnon, Bridge street, was found hanging over the side of a skiff, which was floating in the St. Charles river, near the Dorchester bridge, yesterday. It is thought that Gagnon toppled over the side of the boat as a result of faintness. The remains were removed to the morgue and an inquest will be held.

Kingston Shows Progress.

KINGSTON, Dec. 3.—For eleven months ended Nov. 30, Kingston's building operations totaled $571,267. The fire loss on buildings within the same period was $39,187.86.

May Limit Skyscrapers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Eighteen storeys may be the limit for skyscrapers to be erected in New York in future. The committee on building height restrictions, which reported to Borough President McAneny yesterday, recommended that no building be higher, and that they should not have towers.

Cure For Typhoid Fever.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—A Paris cable says: A successful new method of curing typhoid fever was announced yesterday by Dr. Josue Bellar. It is called auto vaccination, the vaccine used being the culture of eberth bacilli, made of the patient's own blood. After two days' culture in sterilized heat, two hundred million germs are injected into the patient three times at intervals of twelve hours.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

COULD NOT PUT HANDS IN WATER

Salt Rheum Began with Itching and Burning, Watery Pimples, Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured In Two Weeks.

L'Anse à Brillant, Que.— "I suffered with salt rheum for nine months. It began by itching and burning and my hands broke out in watery pimples and I could not sleep, only scratch my hands and they would bleed. The pimples were small and white, about the size of pin heads filled with water. I could not put my hands in water at all.

"I tried ——, —— and —— but found no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I put the Cuticura Ointment on my hands after washing them with the Cuticura Soap and in two weeks they were perfectly cured." (Signed) Miss Bridget A. Briand, May 17, 1913.

FOR PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

The following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold everywhere. For liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

STEER WINS PRIZE

J. D. McGregor's Animal Captures Grand Championship

ONTARIO HAS BEST SHEEP

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—J. D. McGregor of Brandon, Man., has pulled off the grand championship of the International Live Stock Show of Chicago, the biggest show of its kind on earth.

Glencarnock Victor II. has downed all comers in the steer classes, and there were scores of them. He was first in his class as a grade yearling, then champion of all grades and cross-breds, and then champion of all yearlings, and finally grand champion over all pure breeds and grades. He was bred by J. D. McGregor, his sire was Golden Gleam, and he is out of the same dam as last year's grand champion. His grand-dam was an ordinary red nurse cow. He has been fed on nothing that cannot be grown on any Canadian farm—barley and oat chop, turnips, ensheaves, prairie hay and a very little linseed meal. He would not know corn if he met it.

It is the first time in the history of the International that the sweepstakes grand championship of the show has been won twice in succession by an individual breeder. Once previously Ames College won two years in succession. It is the third time the championship has gone to Canada.

A feature of the Percheron show was the magnificent silver cup, presented by the Canadian Percheron Society for the best Percheron stallion and four mares owned by one exhibitor. This class will not be decided until Friday and competition will be keen. The International Show's board of management and the American Percheron Society directors are loud in their expression of gratitude to the Canadian Percheron breeders for this token of goodwill.

In cattle classes there was something doing every minute. The elder breeding classes of Aberdeen Angus were judged. The classes were large and competition keen, but there were no Canadian exhibits. During the afternoon it was announced that the championship and reserve in the car lots of fat steers had been captured by Escher and Ryan of Irwin, Iowa, with Aberdeen Angus yearlings and two-year-olds. The showing of shorthorns is enormous. In the aged bull class, Leslie Smith of St. Cloud, Minn., secured first with his famous bull Ringmaster.

Over in the sheep barns Ontario continued to do herself proud. The grand championship to John Campbell of Woodville was awarded almost at the moment when the McGregor steer topped the cattle rings and was an exact repetition of the performance of last year. In 1912 Campbell won with a pure-bred Shropshire wether; this time with a very handsome grade of the same breed. Experts pronounced him superior sheep, and certainly he has a back like a table.

J. D. McGregor refuses to have Glencarnock Victor auctioned at Chicago. He will be shipped home and loaned first to the agricultural schools of Alberta and a demonstration trip through that province and possibly through Saskatchewan will be made, and later Mr. McGregor declares he will be slaughtered at Brandon and presented to his friends to eat.

PLAN MISUNDERSTOOD.

Privy Council Not Intended To Go on Circuit.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Prof. Morgan, in his final Rhodes lecture at University College last night, had an important correction to make on the authority of Lord Haldane, regarding his recent suggestions for development of the judicial committee. Prof. Morgan said his lordship never intended to convey that the committee should go on circuit through the dominions.

The suggestion was that, in cases of great and exceptional importance, where circumstances were such as to give a sitting in a particular dominion, particular value, a number of the judges should be selected from the enlarged panel to go and sit there. It should be remembered, as anyone who looks at the statutes of 1833 and 1844 may discover for himself that the judicial committee is a body possessing as an appellate tribunal exceptional powers of directing the examination of witnesses on oath and of directing enquiries into issues of fact in particular cases and, one can well conceive that there might be cases in which such enquiries were best held in the Dominion itself.

FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

Are Told How to Regain Strength and Vigour.

As one grows old the waste of the system becomes more rapid than repair, the organs ace more slowly and less effectively than in youth, the circulation is poor, the blood thin and digestion weak.

Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil is the ideal strengthener and body-builder for old folks, for it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. Vinol also fortifies the system against colds and thus prevents pneumonia.

Mrs. Mary Ivey, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, I am sure you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

If Vinol fails to build up the feeble, old people, and create strength we will return your money.

HUERTA TOTTERING

COMPANIES REFUSE HIM OIL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3. — "We shall not, I believe, be obliged to alter our policy of watchful waiting," said President Wilson yesterday in dealing with the Mexican situation in his message to Congress. He predicted that the collapse of the Huerta regime would take place speedily as a result of the internal troubles of Mexico.

In his message the President said: "There is but one cloud upon our horizon. That has shown itself to the south of us, and hangs over Mexico. There can be no certain prospect of peace in America until Gen. Huerta has surrendered his usurped authority in Mexico; until it is understood on all hands, indeed, that such pretended governments will not be countenanced or dealt with by the Government of the United States.

"Even if this usurper had succeeded in his purposes, in spite of the constitution of the republic and the rights of its people, he would have set up nothing but a precarious and hateful power, which could have lasted but a little while, and whose eventual downfall would have left the country in a more deplorable condition than ever. But he has not succeeded. He has forfeited the respect and the moral support even of those who were at one time willing to see him succeed.

"Little by little he has been completely isolated. By a little every day his power and prestige are crumbling and the collapse is not far away. We shall not, I believe, be obliged to alter our policy of watchful waiting. And then, when the end comes, we shall hope to see constitutional order restored in distressed Mexico by the concert and energy of such of her leaders as prefer the liberty of their people to their own ambitions."

No Oil For Huerta.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 3.—Preferring to incur the displeasure of the Huerta Government to a very practical manifestation of the rebels' wrath, the producing oil companies of the republic yesterday cancelled their contracts for supplying the National Railways with fuel oil.

This is regarded as one of the most serious blows dealt the Government, because it is likely to bring about early suspension of railway traffic, which would interfere greatly with military operations and would strike vitally at the commerce of the country.

Most of the oil used by the railways is produced in the coast region of Tampico and southward.

Huerta's Generals Yield.

JUAREZ, Mex., Dec. 3—Seven generals of the Mexican regular army are ready to surrender, and the backbone of the Huerta dictatorship in the north has been broken. A peace commission arrived in Juarez last night bearing terms of the surrender.

CLASHES WITH MOB.

Indianapolis Strike Already Results In Rioting.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 3—An effort to call a general strike in sympathy with the teamsters' and chauffeurs' strike was started at a meeting of the teamsters' union late yesterday. No definite action was taken, it being decided to wait until the union officers had conferred with the leaders of the Central Labor Union.

The first fatality of the strike, which was started Sunday night, occurred yesterday when a crowd interfered with an ice wagon, in charge of six men, on whom special police powers had been conferred.

Another crowd was fired upon yesterday by William Wharton, a negro, when the wagon owned and driven by himself was attacked. Jack Long, a teamster, was wounded. Wharton was arrested.

Fifty business men with horses were sworn in as the citizens' cavalry yesterday. They volunteered to assist the mounted police.

Churchill's Comrade Killed.

EASTCHURCH, Kent, Dec. 3.—Captain Gilbert V. Wildman-Lushington, commander of the British naval flying corps, with whom Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, made a long flight Saturday, was killed yesterday at the naval flying ground here by a fall with his biplane.

The well-known aviator was flying with a brother officer, Capt. Henry Fawcett, of the Royal Marines, who was piloting the aeroplane and who suffered slight injuries while the machine crashed to earth and was splintered to matchwood.

Texas Town Flooded.

BELTON, Texas, Dec. 3.—Ten persons were reported to have perished in a thirty-foot wave which came without warning down Nolan Creek before daybreak. The creek runs through the centre of this city.

Fifty houses along the creek's banks in Belton were swept away. In the heart of the town Mrs. W. C. Polk and her four children were caught in their home and drowned. Polk, carrying the fifth child, an infant, escaped to high ground.

BREAKS ALL RECORDS.

With 143,000,000 Bushels Marketed Grain Still Pours In.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 3.—Figures obtainable at the Winnipeg Grand Exchange show that up to Dec. 1 the farmers of Western Canada marketed 143,000,000 bushels of grain, for which they received in actual cash $90,000,000.

This is the greatest movement ever known, and it is but part of the story of western prosperity, for the grain is coming along more rapidly than ever and there is no sign of abatement. The excellent weather makes conditions ideal for shipment. Monday every record in the history of the local grain exchange went by the board when a total of 1,873 cars of all kinds of grain was inspected in Winnipeg. Yesterday there were 1,200 cars in sight.

CRITICAL, SAYS M'BRIDE.

B. C. Premier Considers Hindu Situation Very Grave.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3. — "This judgment has brought about a critical state of affairs and one which will be given every possible consideration by the Provincial Government in order to protect the interests of the province in so far as the Government's constitutional authority will permit," declared Premier McBride, in discussing the turn of affairs on the Hindu immigration question following the issuance of Chief Justice Hunter's written judgment.

"We have always tried to make it clear that objections which the Government of this province entertains toward the entry of Hindus are not upon race grounds, but are of an economic and social nature," said Sir Richard.

Premier McBride intimated that he did not desire to express any opinions upon the judgment itself, but added that he believed the question would probably occupy the attention of the courts for some time.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

This was something she could understand. She brightened immediately and before she was through her expressions of delight I had quitted the room and in a few minutes later the shop.

I hope the two women had their cup of tea after that.

XX.

Miss Butterworth's Theory.

I was so excited when I entered my carriage that I rode all the way home with my bonnet askew, and never knew it. When I reached my room and saw myself in the glass, I was shocked, and stole a glance at Lena, who was setting out my little tea-table, to see if she noticed what a ridiculous figure I cut. But she is discretion itself, and for a girl with two undeniable dimples in her cheeks, smiles seldom—at least when I am looking at her. She was not smiling now, and though, for the reason given above, this was not as comforting as it may appear, I chose not to worry myself any longer about such a trifle when I had matters of so much importance on my mind.

Taking off my bonnet, whose rakish appearance had given me such a shock, I sat down and for half an hour neither moved nor spoke. I was thinking. A theory which had faintly suggested itself to me at the inquest was taking on body with these later developments. Two hats had been found on the scene of the tragedy, and two pairs of gloves, and now I had learned that there had been two women there, the one whom Mrs. Boppert had locked into the house on leaving it, and the one whom I had seen enter at midnight with Mr. Van Burnam. Which of the two had perished? We had been led to think, and Mr. Van Burnam had himself acknowledged, that it was his wife; but his wife had been dressed quite differently from the murdered woman, and was, as I soon began to see, much more likely to have been the assassin than the victim. Would you like to know my reasons for this extraordinary statement? If so, they are these:

I had always seen a woman's hand in this work, but having no reason to believe in the presence of any other woman on the scene of crime than the victim, I had put this suspicion aside as untenable. But now that I had found the second woman, I returned to it.

But how connect her with the murder? It seemed easy enough to do so if this other woman was her rival. We have heard of no rival, but she may have known of one, and this knowledge may have been at the bottom of her disagreement with her husband and the half-crazy determination she evinced to win his family over to her side. Let us say then that the second woman was Mrs. Van Burnam's rival. That he brought her there not knowing that his wife had effected an entrance into the house; brought her there after an afternoon spent at the Hotel D—, during which he had furnished her with a new outfit of less pronounced type, perhaps, than that she had previously worn. The use of the two carriages and the care they took to throw suspicion off their track, may have been part of a scheme of future elopement, for I had no idea they meant to remain in Mr. Van Burnam's house. For what purpose, then, did they go there? To meet Mrs. Van Burnam and kill her, that their way might be clearer for flight? No; I had rather think that they went to the house without a thought of whom they would encounter, and that only after they had entered the parlours did he realize that the two women he least wished to see together had been brought by his folly face to face.

The presence in the third room of Mrs. Van Burnam's hat, gloves, and novel seemed to argue that she had spent the evening in reading by the diningroom table, but whether this was so or not the stopping of a carriage in front and the opening of the door by an accustomed hand undoubtedly assured her that either the old gentleman or some other member of the family had unexpectdly arrivd. She was, therefore, in or near the parlour door when they entered, and the shock of meeting her hated rival in company with her husband, under the very roof where she had hoped to lay the foundations of her future happiness, must have been great, if not maddening. Accusations, recriminations even, did not satisfy her. She wanted to kill; but she had no weapon. Suddenly her eyes fell on the hat-pin which her more self-possessd rival had drawn from her hat, possibly before their encounter, and she conceived a plan which seemed to promise her the very revenge she sought. How she carried it out; by what means she was enabled to approach her victim, and inflict with such certainty the fatal stab which laid her enemy at her feet, can be left to the imagination. But that she, a woman, and not Howard, a man, drove this woman's weapon into the stranger's spine, I will yet prove, or lose all faith in my own intuitions.

But if this theory is true, how about the shelves that fell at daybreak, and how about her escape from the house without detection? A little thought will explain all that. The man, horrified, no doubt, at the result of his imprudence, and execrating the crime to which it had led, left the house almost immediately. But the woman remained there, possibly because she had fainted, possibly because he would have nothing to do with her; and coming to herself, saw her victim's face staring up at her with an accusing beauty she found it impossible to meet. What should she do to escape it? Where should she go? She hated it so she could have trampled on it, but she restrained her passions till daybreak, when in one wild burst of fury and hatred she drew down the cabinet upon it, and then fled the scene of horror she had herself caused. This was at five, or, to be exact, three minutes before that hour as shown by the clock she had carelessly set in her lighter momonts.

She escaped by the front door, which her husband had mercifully forborne to lock; and she had not been discovered by the police, because her appearance did not tally with the description which had been given them. How did I know this? Remember the discoveries I had made in Miss Van Burnam's room, and allow them to assist you in understanding my conclusions.

Some one had gone into that room; some one who wanted pins; and keeping this fact before my eyes, I saw through the motive and actions of the escaping woman. She had on a dress separated at the waist and finding, perhaps, a spot of blood on the skirt, she conceived the plan of covering it with her petticoat, which was also of silk and undoubtedly as well made as many womens dresses. But the skirt of the gown was longer than the petticoat and she was obliged to pin it up. Having no pins herself, and finding none on the parlour floor, she went up-stairs to get some. The door at the head of the stairs was locked, but the front room was open, so she entered there. Groping her way to the bureau, for the place was very dark, she found a pincushion hanging from a bracket. Feeling it to be full of pins, and knowing that she could see nothing where she was, she tore it away and carried it towards the door. Here there was some light from the skylight over the stairs, so setting the cushion down on the bed, she pinned up the skirt of her gown.

When this was done she started away, brushing the cushion off the bed in her excitement, and fearing to be traced by her many-colourd hat, or having no courage remaining for facing again the horror in the parlour, she slid out without one and went, God knows whither, in her terror and remorse.

So much for my theory; now for the facts standing in the way of its complete acceptance. They were two—the scar on the ankle of the dead girl, which was a peculiarity of Louise Van Burnam, and the mark of the rings on her fingers. But who had identified the scar? Her husband. No one else. And if the other woman had, by some strange freak of chance, a scar also on her left foot, then the otherwise unaccountable apathy he had shown at being told of this distinctive mark, as well as his temerity in afterwards taking it as a basis for his false identification, becomes equally consistent and natural; and as for the marks of the rings, it would be strange if such a woman did not wear rings and plenty of them.

Howard's conduct under examination and the contradiction between his first assertions and those that followed, all become clear in the light of this new theory. He had seen his wife kill a defenceless woman before his eyes, and whether influnced by his old affection for her or by his pride in her good name, he could not but be anxious to conceal her guilt even at the cost of his own truthfulness. As long then as circumstances permitted, he preserved his indifferent attitude, and denied that the dead woman was his wife. But when driven to the wall by the indisputable proof which was brought forth of his wife having been in the place of murder, he saw, or thought he did, that a continued denial on his part of Louise Van Burnam being the victim might lead sooner or later to the suspicion of her being the murderer, and influenced by this fear, took the sudden resolution of profiting by all the points which the two women had in common by acknowledging what everybody had expected him to acknowledge from the first, that the woman at the Morgue was his wife. This would exonerate her, rid him of any apprehension he may have entertained of her ever returning to be a disgrace to him, and would (and perhaps this thought influenced him most, for who can understand such men or the passions that sway them) insure the object of his late devotion a decent burial in a Christian cemetery. To be sure, the risk he ran was great, but the emergency was great, and he may not have stopped to count the cost. At all events, the fact is certain that he perjured himself when he said that it was his wife he brought to the house from the Hotel D——, and if he perjured himself in others, and his testimony is not at all to be relied upon.

Convinced though I was in my own mind that I had struck a truth which would bear the closest investigation, I was not satisfied to act upon it till I had put it to the test. The means I took to do this were daring, and quite in keeping with the whole desperate affair. They promised, however, a result important enough to make Mr. Gryce blush for the disdain with which he had met my threats of interference.

WOMAN'S ILLS DISAPPEARED

Like Magic after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Bangor, N. Y.—"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with great benefit I feel it my duty to write and tell you about it. I was ailing from female weakness and had headache and backache nearly all the time. I was later every month than I should have been and so sick that I had to go to bed.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and these troubles have disappeared like magic. I have recommended the Compound to many women who have used it successfully."—Mrs. JAMES J. STACY, R.F.D. No. 3, North Bangor, N. Y.

Another Made Well.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me. For years I suffered terribly with hemorrhages and had pains so intense that sometimes I would faint away. I had female weakness so bad that I had to doctor all the time and never found relief until I took your remedies to please my husband. I recommend your wonderful medicine to all sufferers as I think it is a blessing for all women."—Mrs. L. E. WYCKOFF, 112 S. Ashley St., Ann Arbor, Mich.

There need be no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to remedy woman's diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical. Why don't you try it?

Linguistic Whimsicalities.

The following are a few linguistic whimsicalities: The Germans call a thimble a "finger hut," which it certainly is, and a grasshopper a "hay horse." A glove with them is a "hand shoe," showing evidently that they wore shoes before gloves. Poultry is "feather cattle," whilst the names of the well known substances oxygen and hydrogen are in their language "sour stuff" and "water stuff." The French; strange to say, have no verb "to stand," nor can a Frenchman speak of "kicking" any one. The nearest approach a Frenchman makes to it in his politeness is to threaten to "give a blow with his foot," the same to the recipient in either case, but it seems to want the directness, the energy, of our "kick." Neither has he any word for "baby" or for "home" or "comfort." The terms "upstairs" and "downstairs" are also unknown in French. The Hindus are said to have no word for "friend." The Italians have no equivalent for "gumption." — London Tatler.

Queer Resemblances.

That persons who live together for a very long period not only acquire the same mannerisms, but grow a strong facial resemblance, is an established fact. But it is little known that the same condition often exists from mistress and servant being associated together for a long period of years. There is usually a strong desire on the part of most servants to ape their mistresses, and this, added to the fact of constant nearness, often extends to facial resemblances.

There are in a small town in New York state two unusual instances of this kind. Two widows live there each of whom has been attended by a woman servant for more than forty years. In both cases the servants have become so like their mistresses that they are often mistaken for them, and their cases have attracted attention far and near. Their voices over the telephone are so alike that friends of the women have given up the method of communication.—New York Sun.

The Contrasts.

An auto is a goodly sight
As smoothly it goes gliding.
And motoring is quite a treat
For those who care for riding.
But when it turns a somersault,
Breaks bones and eats up money
And muses landscape right and left
It isn't quite so funny.

To see an auto climb a hill
A sight is worth beholding.
The little engine chugs along
And does a deal of scolding.
But when it tries to climb a tree
And on the leaves goes grazing
When gasoline should be its food
The sight is more hair raising.

To tear off forty miles or more
In just about a minute
Is ment and drink and exercise
To persons seated in it.
But when a man is much in haste
And his machine tries balking
He envies then the humble chap
Who takes his out in walking.

A solace for the old and young,
A comfort for the lazy,
And joy unspeakable, sublime,
For persons plumb speed crazy.
All these and more the auto is,
The snail and race horse shaming,
But those who love it most admit
It needs a lot of taming.

SPECTACULAR CAREER OF CONFEDERATE WAR SPY

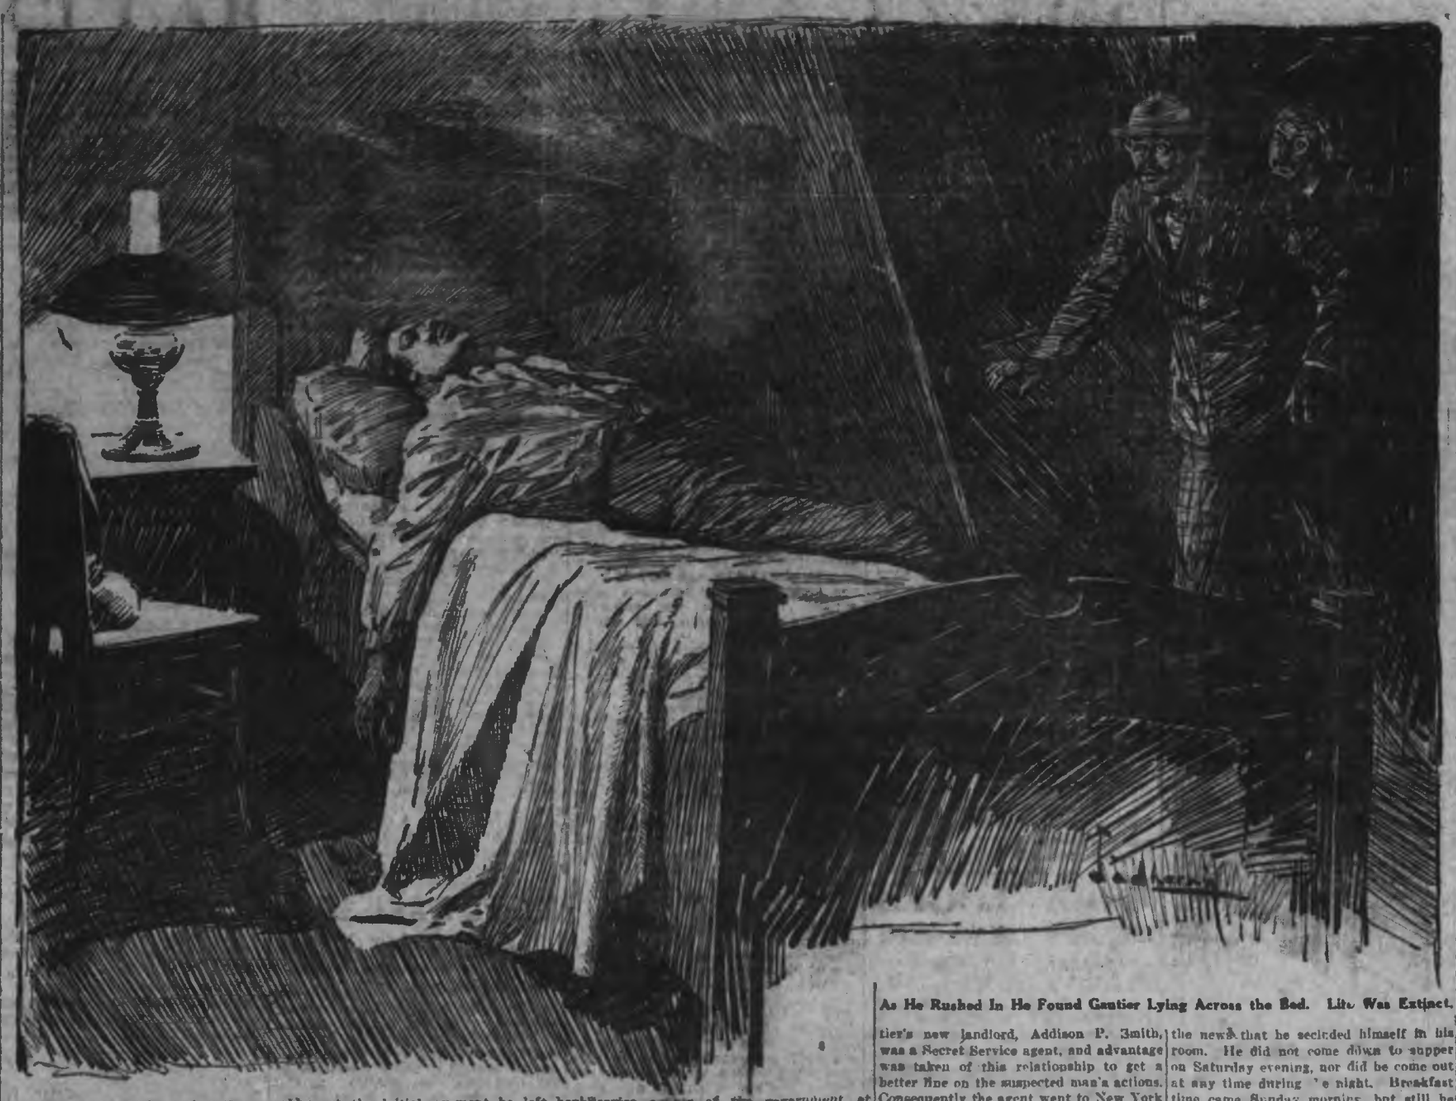
At the present moment there are in the safe-deposit vaults of the Chamberlain of the city of New York two canvas bags which contain $6,000 in gold. This fortune is waiting for the heirs or next of kin to Rene Gautier to come forward and claim it, but unless some one can be found who can tell who this Rene Gautier was it is unlikely that the heirs will ever be discovered and the money will eventually be escheated to the State and turned over to the State Treasurer at Albany.

Rene Gautier was a Frenchman who operated as a spy for the Confederate government during the War of the Rebellion, and the story of his career, as it has been unearthed by investigators who have been trying to find the legitimate claimants to what he left, reads like that of a character in a "shilling shocker." He was born somewhere in France, but the exact location of the place cannot be given, because little or nothing is known of his early life or of his family. In fact, it is not even certain that "Gautier" was his right name. He turned up in New York in the summer of 1864 and presented himself, unrecommended, to a boarding house kept by Mme. Sophie Picateer at No. 1,267 Broadway. She took him without question as a lodger. The fact that he was a Frenchman was recommendation enough. Toward the other lodgers the new boarder was at all times friendly, but never intimate, and they knew him only as a pleasant mannered and intelligent man who was interested in a patent or something of the kind. He did not work, but he had plenty of money, nevertheless.

Mme. Picateer, in the way of most landladies, was inquisitive about her new boarder and in a tactful manner she set about finding out something definite concerning his past. She learned that he was a widower whose wife had died two years before he arrived in New York, and a child had also died previous to, his leaving France. He was, he said, twenty-nine years old. His reason for coming to this country was to dispose of the American rights to a new French invention for the manufacturing of an excellent imitation of stained glass at a very reasonable figure.

By way of digression he told her that a brother of his had been killed by a bomb explosion that was part of an attempt on the life of Louis Napoleon in 1848. Besides the knowledge that he was in correspondence with a sister who was living in Paris, these were all the facts that Mme. Picateer was able to obtain concerning him. His statement in regard to a patent was truthful, though she had no means of verifying it at the time. It has since been learned, however, that he negotiated with a company in Boston for the sale of the patent and made an agreement the terms of which provided that he was to receive for it $6,000. One-half of this sum was to be paid to him on January 1, 1865, and the other half on July 1 of the same year.

When the new year came around he received the first payment from Boston,



As He Rushed In He Found Gautier Lying Across the Bed. Life Was Extinct.

$4,000 in gold, which at that time was almost equivalent to $8,000, because gold was at a premium. Mme. Picateer knew that the money had come to him, but he did not tell her its source, and her curiosity was further aroused when he told her that he expected another sum of money in six months. He said that after receiving the second sum he would return to Paris and would make his home with his sister. But immediately after he got the initial payment he left her boarding house and moved to that kept by Mr. Addison P. Smith, at No. 219 West Forty-eighth street. Not long after this he called at the office of William S. Charnley, a broker, doing business at No. 34 Wall street, and arranged to buy through Charnley some government bonds. By February 10 the broker had sold him $7,000 worth.

It was about this time that the Secret Service agents of the government at Washington became possessed of information that led them to suspect that René Gautier was a Confederate spy. From then on they closely watched his movements and intercepted his mail. Gautier was a clever man and it did not take him long to discover the scrutiny under which he was living. This discovery made him very nervous.

It so happened that a brother of Gautier's new landlord, Addison P. Smith, was a Secret Service agent, and advantage was taken of this relationship to get a better line on the suspected man's actions. Consequently the agent went to New York from Washington ostensibly to spend a month's vacation at the home of his brother in the Forty-eighth street house. He arrived there on Saturday, February 14, 1865. Only a few hours after his arrival every one in the boarding house knew that a Secret Service man was living under the brother's roof. Among the first to learn this fact was the young Frenchman, Gautier, and he was so affected by the news that he secluded himself in his room. He did not come down to supper on Saturday evening, nor did he come out at any time during the night. Breakfast time came Sunday morning, but still he remained closeted, and then toward noon came the sound of two pistol shots from behind his door. Every one in the house immediately made for his room. The Secret Service man was the first to reach the door, and, finding it locked, he battered it down. As he rushed in he found Gautier lying across the bed. Life was extinct. There were two wounds in the body, one in the head and another in the breast. A smoking revolver had slipped from his right hand and lay on the floor, and beside him on a chair lay two bags containing more than $4,000 in gold.

Some of the above facts were brought to light at the Coroner's inquest, which was held one week after the suicide, but others were discovered only recently when detectives unearthed the almost forgotten case and found new evidence. Before the body was buried search was started for relatives of the dead man, but nothing came of it. No one was found then or since who had a legitimate claim to the cash that was found beside the body, and when it became apparent that no one would be traced, at least for some time, the Public Administrator took charge of his effects. After funeral expenses and other bills were paid there still remained $3,337. This sum was banked and has increased materially during the intervening years. The Boston company which had bought Gautier's patent, ruined by his death, for when the second payment fell due, there was no authorized person to receive it. Should the man's heirs ever be found a large sum can be collected by them from this company for the use of the stained glass process since 1865.

The fact that the government's Secret Service agents had been on his trail was not made public at the time of Gautier's death. Publicity was something to be avoided, because they wanted to trap the persons with whom the man had been cooperating. The letters in the series that he had been receiving at Smith's boarding house, and which had been intercepted, were all unsigned and were postmarked at Philadelphia, Paris, Troy, New York, Montreal and other places, but the evidence that they furnished had not quite constituted grounds on which to base his arrest. For a week or so after he killed himself, they continued to arrive at his Forty-eighth street address, and ceased without the authorities having been able to identify or trace their senders. Thus all chances of finding out who Gautier was were ended in so far as that line of investigation was concerned.

The search for his sister or other heirs has been carried on extensively in France. Many families bearing the name Gautier have been canvassed and many church and municipal records have been gone over, but these efforts have not been fruitful. The mystery surrounding his identity is as much a mystery to-day as it was on February 15, 1865. Who was he? Who and where are his heirs? Who were the persons with whom he was in communication as a spy?

NEXT WEEK.

The missing Desmond family. Daniel J. Desmond, Papal Consul, died leaving $20,000. His family moved to New York from Philadelphia, but the estate has never been settled because his daughter, who had possession of the will, dropped out of sight. Six other members of the family have also mysteriously disappeared.

Reformed Bank Burglar, Reared in Luxury, Who Once Answered the Call of the Underworld

RECORDED as one of the most desperate bank and post office burglars that ever blasted a safe, a man known to the authorities the country over as "Gentleman Sam" is now holding a responsible position in a New York hotel, his reformation, according to himself and friends, full and complete. Sam, as he will be called here, has buried his past and the many aliases under which he operated so effectually that even the police, who so relentlessly pursued him for years, are eager to give him a chance to prove that he intends to stick to the straight and narrow path, and guard zealously the secret of his identity.

The reformed bank burglar and slayer—for he once killed a man while seeking to escape from a posse that pursued him—is now employed by a big hotel within a stone's throw of Broadway. There he was found by the writer a few days ago in the act of assigning a new arrival to the room he had just engaged.

"A long term in prison convinced me," Sam said when comfortably seated at a table, with a sparkling glass of mineral water before him, "that honesty is the best policy, after all. I have, first and last, handled thousands of dollars, all of which, until a year ago, I got by sharp practice or by violence. When I needed money I never permitted any obstacle to stand between me and its acquisition. If it was necessary to knock a man on the head to strip him of his wallet I promptly and unhesitatingly delivered the blow. If it was necessary to resort to even more violent tactics I still went ahead with the job—but I always got the money. That was the paramount issue, and in those days I needed lots of it, for it was 'come easy, go easy,' and I always was regarded as a big spender.

"But those days are dead and buried now, and I don't want to recall them. You know my record as well as I do, so what's the use of my attempting to relate to you what you already know? You would only think I was trying to cover up or prove that there were extenuating circumstances surrounding my acts. I will tell you this much, however. I was the son of wealthy parents. I was reared in luxury and was never denied a thing I craved. Money was lavished upon me, and as I look back upon it now that seems the cause of my downfall. Educated at fashionable private schools and later at one of the big Eastern colleges, I was graduated—to learn that I had been pampered and spoiled, and when I walked forth to what I expected to be a life of pleasure, luxury and idleness I found my father had been stripped of his fortune. Evidently there was something lacking in my moral stamina, for when I realized that it was necessary for me to go to work in order to gain even a modest livelihood the thought was so revolting that I loafed and moped around until I found myself a beggar—penniless, but with an appetite and craving for all I once had possessed.

"Naturally, with such principles it was an easy step into circles of society far below that stratum in which I had been reared. I avoided my old-time associates and sought new friends, made in the underworld. The men I met there, who, I was told, were reaping harvests by nefarious means, most certainly were no smarter than I. If they could get money so easily, surely I could do likewise, and this I determined to do, and that speedily. Well, it came my way, even easier than I had supposed, and before long I was in funds again, but somehow I had no inclination to lead a double life. It would have been an easy matter for me to disappear and stay away until I had replenished my purse, and then reappear among my old college friends and hold up my end with the most affluent of them. But since I had chosen a life of crime I concluded that I would cultivate a new circle of friends, and they must all be of the same ilk—criminals just as deft as myself. It's all over now, thank Heaven, so I shan't tell you of the years that followed. Any well regulated police headquarters in this country can give you data bearing on my career fuller and more ample than I could furnish you offhand."

"Gentleman Sam" in police parlance was not only a "bad lot," but an exceptionally smart thief. When he elected a career of crime he fell in with a number of second story men and sneak thieves in Bowery resorts, and in a few weeks he was one of the most active in their clan. He prospered, but, as he later told a detective, he found this line of adventure too tame, so he drifted from their ranks into those of yeggmen, with whom he had made one or two successful sorties on post office and small town bank safes. As a yeggman Sam proved an instantaneous success.

Realizing that the ripest fields were in the South, he made a trip through Virginia and West Virginia, and as a consequence a trail of wrecked safes was left in his wake. The hunt for this little band—for there were only four in it—grew so hot that they left the balmy air of the Southland for the more rigorous clime of Canada, where they continued their operations unmolested.

But Sam was doomed to return in a new guise, for the adventures he met with on that trip resulted in his shooting his way from the grasp of the angry posse that pursued after he had shot down a bank watchman, his ultimate capture and long incarceration in prison, awaiting the trial which proved a fiasco.

Standing Over the Prostrate Body, Sent Several Shots Into It.

Having explored the banks and post offices of the South and North, Sam elected a new itinerary. He decided that he would go West and seek an entirely new field for his pending operations. This was easily accomplished, for he still had enough funds left after his farewell feast to afford a first class ticket on a fast train to Chicago.

Evidently his reputation as a successful and daring yeggman had preceded him, for he was royally welcomed into the inner circle of Chicago's criminal elect, and before many days had elapsed his operations for the immediate future were mapped out. This programme included the looting of a chain of small town post offices and half a dozen banks. The strong boxes of these various institutions readily yielded their respective hoards into his itching palms, and he was well supplied with money when he returned to Chicago. Pushing his way further West he met with equal success, until the old longing for Broadway overcame him, and he decided to return to the East. He went as far as Buffalo; decided to stop over there a day or two to meet several old cronies, and this proved his undoing.

The men he met in Buffalo beseeched him to join them in a little bank job not far away, and they gave him such glowing accounts of the big amount of money reposing in its strong box that he yielded and decided to postpone his visit to New York for a few days that he might pick up this "easy money" and thus reinforce the already big sum he had "planted" and with which he had expected to dazzle his old New York friends.

In discussing this raid, Sam beseeched the writer not to mention the name of the town where the most thrilling and at the same time the most dastardly deed in his life of crime was executed.

"There are several men in that town whose faith in me is unbounded," Sam said. "In fact, two of them made it possible for me to get the position I am now holding, and I am afraid if they see what you intend to write about me they will think I am either yearning for the old life or else I am boasting about it. They may withdraw their interest in me, and Heaven knows I don't want to fall back in the old ways."

In any event Sam and his cronies went to the little town in the upper part of New York State and close to the Canadian border. They reconnoitred and found the surroundings just as advantageous for the robbery of the bank and their flight as they had been told. According to Sam, the conditions were "ideal," and everything looked so "easy" that, as he expressed it, "it seemed like a shame to take the money."

Sam was an expert "safe man." He had mastered the intricacies of making and applying explosives, and he also was deft with the drill and jimmy. It was well toward three o'clock on the morning of a dreary and murky November day. Not a soul was stirring, even the town watchman having turned into a sheltering haven to escape the murk and chilling fog. The bank was not wired with burglar alarms, so ingress was simply a question of jimmying a rear window. Sam was the first to scramble through the opening, one man accompanying him and two remaining on the outside to do picket duty.

It required but one blast of the nitroglycerine to send the door of the safe starting from its hinges. The inner door was drilled, and in a twinkling the strong box was exposed, with its hoard of greenbacks and gold. There, before them, lay $87,000, and there was none to say them nay!

The money was quickly transferred from the safe to the pockets of the yeggmen, and "Gentleman Sam" scrambled through the window with more money in his possession than he had ever had at any one time before.

As Sam and his inside confederate stunk from beyond the shadow of the bank they noticed that the "gay cats," or lookouts, had disappeared. This did not necessarily alarm them, although they thought it strange. They had proceeded but one short block from the bank when a shot rang out, and Sam's companion sank with a groan, a bullet having pierced his arm. He was quickly on his feet again, however, and he and Sam simultaneously drew their revolvers and stood ready to fire the moment the person who had just shot allowed himself. They had not long to wait, for a head peered from behind a sheltering corner, and as a little spit of flame belched from its owner's revolver Sam and his companion both fired. Then for a few minutes a lively fusillade of shots followed, and as the man who had surprised the yeggmen fell writhing with a bullet in his groin Sam and his fellow yegg ran to his side and, standing over the prostrate body, sent several shots into it. It was afterward learned that any one of those shots would have proved fatal.

By this time scores of men came rushing from all directions, and all were armed. Shot followed shot, and Sam and his confederate sped through the streets to the outskirts of the town, and both were slightly wounded more than once by the bullets that rained in their wake. Despite this handicap, Sam's companion escaped. Left in the lurch, Sam quickly reloaded his two revolvers and, taking refuge in an old barn, stood off the posse until at an auspicious moment he made a break for the open and sped to the railroad tracks, where he quickly disappeared down a steep embankment and thence into a dense thicket.

His reformation, he asserts, was effected while in prison, and he now declares that nothing could tempt him to transgress in the slightest degree, since he has never known what real happiness and contentment were until he found he was able to earn an honest living.

He is married now, and his wife and little girl adore him. He swears that he told his sweetheart everything connected with his past before he gained her consent to marry him, and that her implicit faith in him and his adoration for his little girl are the guiding stars which will ever direct his steps in the path of righteousness.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Thrilling Tale of a Small Boy and a Great Big Fish.

A PIKE'S FUTILE STRUGGLE.

Youthful Angler Triumphs Over Grown Folks With the Rod—Various Bits of Information of Interest to Little People.

The young gentleman who is so proudly displaying the big fish is justified in feeling a little vain. He caught the fish himself, and any boy who cares about fishing knows how good it feels to capture such a whopper. The fisherman in this case is Count Alexander Hockberg, and he is one of the sons of Prince Henry of Pless, on whose country estate in Ober-Schlesien the big fish was captured. Not long ago the boy's father invited a party of guests to try their skill with the rod on a lake near his home. Alexander went along, too, and when the day was over he had the largest fish of any caught. In fact, it was one of the largest taken during the season. When the count hooked his fish he was nearly jerked out of the boat, but he hung on manfully and with the aid of the boatman succeeded in landing the big pike after half an hour's hard work. Perhaps the boatman helped a great deal, nobody knows but he and the boy, but in any event it was a great feat to bring home the best catch of the day.

Adam and Eve.

This is a jolly game when twelve or more play. A circle is formed all standing, and one is placed in the center called Eve. Eve is blindfolded and then the circle goes around a few times very quietly until Eve tells them to stop. Eve then points in some direction and the person who is pointed to must go into the circle with Eve and is called Adam. Eve then calls Adam and Adam must answer and say Eve. By this Eve is supposed to locate him, but when Eve comes toward the place where Adam answered he must run to the other side of the circle or any place within it and always try to stay out of Eve's reach, and as she is blindfolded she cannot tell where Adam is only by his voice. It is the most fun when Eve calls very fast, as Adam will have to answer fast and then she can locate him better. When Eve has caught Adam she must guess who it is. If she guesses right Eve joins the circle and Adam must be Eve. But if Eve's guess is wrong she must stand again and Adam joins the circle and the game proceeds.—From a Good Timer, Bertha Selchter.

The Parasol Ants.

In Florida and Texas there is an ant known as the parasol ant. Ants of this kind are so called because they cut off tiny bits of leaves and carry them over their heads and bodies after the manner of parasols. With these portions of leaf the ant lines its nest.

This member of the ant family is very large, and consequently it must build much larger houses than the garden variety with which we are all familiar.

His Tombstone a Baseball.

The grave of William A. Hulbert, at one time president of the old National baseball league, is marked with a tombstone in the shape of a baseball. When Mr. Hulbert died, in 1882, some of his old associates set about to show their love and respect for him, and the result was the monument in Graceland cemetery, Chicago. The baseball is made of red granite, about twenty inches in diameter, showing the seams as they appear upon the balls used in the regulation games. Across the top appears in raised letters, "W. A. Hulbert, President National League, P. S. B. C., 1876, 1882." On one side appear the names of four clubs in the old league—Boston, Providence, Worcester and Troy—and on the other those of the other four—Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo and Detroit. Also there is a headstone of white marble, upon which appears the name, together with the date of birth, Oct. 23, 1832, and the date of death, April 10, 1882.

Winds of Wellington.

Australians boast that anywhere throughout the world their national call, "Coo-ee," will always be answered by a fellow Australian. A writer in the London Chronicle reports having heard it so given and answered in a London theater. "But other people from the antipodes have their signs of origin. If you see a man walking along and although a breeze does not stir the air he involuntarily holds his hat firmly to his head whenever he comes to a street corner you should greet him with the question, 'Well, and how are things in Wellington?' Thereupon he will fall upon your neck as a fellow New Zealander in London, for in Wellington the winds are so tempestuous that the habit of holding the hat firmly to one's head when passing a side street becomes second nature and proclaims the man from Wellington all over the world."

LET the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his strength will soon fail. One's stamina—forcefulness and strength of mind or muscle depend upon the blood, and the blood in turn, requires a healthy stomach, for the stomach is the laboratory where the food is digested and such elements are taken up—or assimilated—which make blood. In consequence all the organs of the body, such as heart, lungs, liver and kidneys, as well as the nervous system, feel the bad effect if the stomach is deranged.
Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery
helps the stomach to digest food properly, starts the liver into new activity, removing the poisons from the blood, and the various organs get rich, red blood, instead of being ill nourished. PUNCH'S NEW COVER.

Britain's Comic Magazine Changes Its 70-Year-Old Design.

An item of considerably more than usual literary interest is the announcement that for the first time for nearly seventy years, there is a change in the well-known cover design of Punch.

Few now living recollect Punch in any other cover than his familiar garb. He has, however, as a matter of fact, had a number of coats, not less than seven, to be precise. For the first three years of his existence it was the custom to change the cover design of the weekly issue with each half-yearly volume.

The first number of Punch was issued on the 17th of July, 1841, in a cover design by A. S. Henning. The founders of the paper were greatly elated when the whole edition of 5,000 copies was sold out on publication, and their satisfaction was increased when a reprint order for an additional 5,000 was sold out on the following day. A sale of 10,000 copies of the first number of a threepenny humorous periodical was no mean achievement in those days.

The second cover was a graceful design containing many figures of Hablot Knight Browne ("Phiz"), a contributor to Punch for a long number of years.

A third design was a delightfully pretty one by William Harvey, the Shakespearean illustrator. Mr. M. H. Spielmann, in his interesting "History of Punch," tells of the consternation in the office when a charge of £12 12s. was sent in with the design—"nearly half the total capital with which the engraver Landells a year before had begun the concern.!"

Sir John Gilbert was commissioned to draw the next cover; a fine design which was subsequently used a great number of years as a wrapper for the Punch Monthly Parts.

Six months later Kenny Meadows produced the fifth cover, which was followed by a first design by Richard Doyle, a drawing in essential respects the forerunner of the now familiar design, which latter was produced by him for the beginning of the next volume, and was used for the first time in January, 1849. It is of interest to note that the first issue of the cover contained an advertisement of Part 3 of Thackeray's "Pendennis." Thackeray was at that time one of Punch's principal contributors, and the firm of proprietors, under its then style of Bradbury and Evans, were publishers of his works, as well as those of Dickens, both of which were issued first in monthly parts, the one published on the 1st and the other on the 15th of each month.

It is safe to say that there is no better known cover design in the whole world than the famous drawing of Doyle's, which has now been in use for more than 64 years. The addition of the second color now proposed is said to greatly enhance Doyle's design, making the delightful figures stand out with greater clearness and vividness.

Savages and News.

The mystifying rapidity with which native races obtain news of distant events has for long been a matter of discussion. For example, the British defeat by the Zulus at Isandula was well known to the Kaffirs of Cape Town hours before the receipts of the official telegraphic dispatch, and there are very many instances of a like kind. Now we have another reminder of the same fact in the refusal of the British Secretary for the Colonies to inform Parliament as to the whereabouts of the Camel Corps, which is engaged in operations against the Mad Mullah in the wilds of Somaliland. Any information that might be divulged, said the Secretary, would be known by the Mullah almost instantly. But by what means does the black man transmit his information more quickly than the white man can send it by telegraph? It is no longer superstitious to suggest telepathy, but is it possible that savages know more of this than we do? Is it possible that any one knows more about anything than we do?

England's Sinless Village.

A sinless village has been discovered in England. It is Blackwell, a snug little colliery town in the Derbyshire hills. "I know of no more model village than Blackwell," says the general manager of the local collieries. "There is no sin or wickedness here." The village policeman enjoys a perpetual holiday. A new man has just been engaged. The last one left his job through boredom. "I am wasting my life here," he said. It is all due to J. T. Todd, general manager of the collieries. Mr. Todd is a born leader of men and this, combined with the fact that he can at will dismiss evildoers, practically the whole population being employed at the colliery, is the secret of his power.

The recent visit of the Russian fleet to Portland was marked by a curious incident, as the outcome of which Admiral von Essen, the Russian commander, says Reuter, is carrying back with him a venerated ikon (sacred image or picture) of St. Alexander Nevsky, the patron saint of St. Petersburg, which has been in England nearly sixty years. The ikon, moreover, is going back to Russia through the action of a Russian political refugee, a leading Radical member of the first Duma.

This ikon belonged to the chapel of the garrison of Bermansund, a fort on one of the Aland Islands, in the Baltic, stormed by the united English and French forces on Aug. 28, 1854. It fell into English hands, was brought to England, changed owners several times, found its way into the shop of a Southampton firm of picture-dealers, was bought by a customer as a fine specimen of Russian ecclesiastical painting, and, finally fell into the hands of M. Aladin, who emigrated to England, after the sudden closure of the first Russian Parliament, and is now living at Portsmouth.

Admiral von Essen was rather astonished when he received at Portland a letter from M. Aladin, informing him that the ikon was in his possession, and that he wished to present it to the admiral "as an offering to the flagship Rurik, to be returned to its native land." The letter was written in English, not in Russian.

The Russian admiral felt himself in a position of some embarrassment. How could he enter into official communication with a political refugee? The difficulty was got over by a despatch to Portsmouth of an officer in mufti, who came back with the ikon which had been duly handed over to him.

The painting, which is on canvas, represents a handsome young warrior in an attitude of prayer with eyes uplifted. There is no signature and the only indication of its history on the picture itself is a much-faded pencilled inscription on the back, "Taken at Bermansund, 1854."

NERVES ARE SORE AND PAINFUL
Neuritis, or inflammation of the nerves, is the most painful of nervous ailments. You may feel the soreness or tenderness throughout the body, or it may be confined to certain nerves. In the head it is called neuralgia; in the hips and legs, sciatica; in the face, tiedoloreux, and in the chest, intercostal neuralgia.
The application of dry heat affords relief from the lance-like pains, but the essential thing is to build up the exhausted nervous system by the persistent use of such a restorative as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You will have other symptoms to warn you of the depleted condition of the nervous system, and this is your opportunity to restore to the body the energy and vigour of health.
While this great food cure is instilling new vitality into the starved nerve cells it is also forming new, firm flesh and tissue, and, by noting your increase in weight, you can prove beyond doubt the benefit being obtained by its use. This is Nature's way of curing diseases of the nerves, and it is the only way to obtain lasting benefit.

Rise of Joseph Pulitzer.

Joseph Pulitzer was born in the village of Mako, near Budapest, in Hungary, on April 10, 1847. His father was a Jew, his mother a Christian. At the age of sixteen he emigrated to the United States. He landed without friends, without money, unable to speak a word of English. He enlisted immediately in the First New York (Lincoln) cavalry regiment, a regiment chiefly composed of Germans and in which German was the prevailing tongue.

Within a year the war ended, and Pulitzer found himself, in common with hundreds of thousands of others, out of employment at a time when employment was most difficult to secure. At this time he was so poor that he was turned away from French's hotel in New York, for the lack of 50 cents with which to pay for his bed. Twenty years later he bought French's hotel, pulled it down and erected in its place the Pulitzer building, at that time one of the largest business buildings in New York, where he housed the World.—Alleyne Ireland in Metropolitan.

"He was ever gentle, courteous and firm. Trying as are the exactions and responsibilities of an important surgical post, Lister was never known to speak a sharp word to house surgeon, dresser or any one in his service. His scientific spirit and discovery attracted the curiosity of the students and young graduates of Edinburgh; his personal nobility won their hearts; his art of winning their loyalty was by inspiring enthusiasm and giving encouragement. 'Often in the middle of a trying operation,' wrote one of his pupils, 'a gentle smile bestowed on us young students when we were honestly trying to do our best as assistants was most encouraging.' Many of the students afterward confessed that their contact with Lister was the best and purest influence of their lives."

Brain and Bulk in School.

Two parents sat side by side at the school prize giving. They had been dragged there by their wives to see the distribution of prizes which had not been gained by their own children. It was an occasion of almost monumental dullness. Then, says the Manchester Guardian, one of them had a happy idea. He whispered to his friend, "I'll lay you two to one in six pences that the second boy in each class is taller than the first boy." He won every time till his friend repudiated the wager in disgust.

"How did you know? Had you seen the list of prize winners?" he was asked.

"Well, I noticed when at school that brain and bulk never went together, and I thought it was worth speculating on today."

Cut Off the "Mr."

The deprivation of the prefix "Mr." was one of the penalties enforced in the American colonies during the seventeenth century. The records of Massachusetts show that in 1680 Joshua Plaistowe was condemned for "stealing four baskets of corn from the Indians, to return them eight baskets again, to be fined £5 and hereafter to be called Joshua, not Mr., as he used to be." The Massachusetts penal code also provided for docking women of the prefix "Mrs.," but there is no record of this clause having been enforced.

Softening the Shock.

"Will you give me something to drink?" he asked faintly of the nurse.

"Certainly," said the nurse, offering him a glass of water.

He put up his hand feebly. "Give it to me in a teaspoon, please," he whispered huskily, "until I get used to it."—London Answers.

Puzzling the Sassenach.

We have long been accustomed to puzzling the Sassenach, says the Glasgow News, by talking familiarly about "Mulguy," which he looks for in vain even in the most reliable atlas, or if he should discover it under the disguise of Milngavie we try him with "Loch'beuch" (or Lochnyeuch, to spell it phonetically). Many Scotsmen even would fail to recognize this as Lochwinnoch. A commercial traveler has just discovered another of these peculiar local names while on his rounds up north. He had noticed at a station where his train stopped an old porter limping alongside the tram and crying out at every other step, "Ach! Ach!" and assumed, so he said, that the poor fellow was suffering from rheumatism, the pain of which caused him to complain in this guttural way. He was even commenting on the cruelty of making the man work when the other passengers explained that "Ach" was the correct pronunciation of the name of the station, "Avoch."

Few Fires In B.C.

That the past year has been the lightest in the way of forest fire loss the province of B.C. has ever known was stated by Chief Forester McMillan. Not more than five square miles of timber had been burned over, he says.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DICK TAKES CARE OF THE FAMILY

And old Dandy turned and looked at the boy. If horses can think, and I believe they can, he must have thought that Dick was a fine upstanding boy. In all the three years that Dick had cared for the horse, old Dandy had never been neglected. Water was always there when he was thirsty; Dick never forgot to feed him. So the horse followed the boy with eyes that tried hard to say "thank you."

Dick took down the harness and began hitching the horse to the buckboard.

"You just hurry back," he commanded, "because I want to go on a hike this afternoon and I can't go until you and father get back. You see when father leaves I am the only man on the place and it is up to me to take care of the family."

"All right," laughed Dick, as he climbed into the buckboard, and drove the horse to the house. "You just remember and travel a good gait coming home."

In a moment Mr. Woodson was ready. He waved good-bye to his wife and Betty who stood in the doorway. Then he shook the lines over Dandy. "Good-bye, Dick," he called. "Take good care of mother and Betty."

"Yes, sir, they will be here safe and sound when you get home. You needn't worry."

So the most exciting day of Dick's life had a most ordinary beginning. There was nothing in all this to make him think that he might have a big job on his hands when he promised to take care of mother and Betty. He fed the chickens and turned the team loose in the barnyard that they might roll about and kick in the coolness of the shade. For the day was going to be warm and sultry and he didn't want the horses to suffer in the hot barn when they might as well be standing in the shade of the yard. All the chores done he went back to the house to see how mother and Betty were getting along. Mrs. Woodson had just brought out the baking board to make the weekly supply of cookies and pies. Dick had an idea. More than that, he had a great liking for pies.

"I'll stump you to pick enough huckleberries for a pie, Betty," said Dick; "and I'll get my quart first."

"Oh, will you?" replied Betty, grabbing her sunbonnet and a pail and darting out of the door. "If I beat you I'll have the biggest piece of pie."

Across the yard they raced and through the wood lot. Betty was about three feet ahead because she had a few seconds' start—and then she could sprint. They fell to picking berries without any wasted conversation.

"This is my patch; that is yours," ordered Betty.

"All right," agreed Dick.

Not a sound disturbed them but the plop, plop as the berries struck the tin pails. Suddenly they heard the dinner bell loud and clear; then it rang sharper and more urgent.

"Why!" exclaimed Betty, "what has happened? We've only been here about half an hour. Mother said she would give us an hour."

"Drop your pail, Betty, and hurry. Something has happened to mother."

Berries, pail forgotten, they hurried home. When they struck the clearing they began to sniff. Their nostrils stung with the odor of smoke "Fire!" muttered Dick. Betty didn't say anything, but her face grew white and worried. In the barnyard the horses were sniffing and stamping restlessly. To the south and beyond the farm, the children saw a sheet of flame leap to the sky and then came creeping over the ridge of Mt. Mercer.

"Some more of those ignorant people who ought not to be allowed out in the woods without a guard," stormed Dick. He was thinking of those campers who go away without taking the trouble to put out the camp fire, forgetting that in such hot weather one spark blown into the dry trees may mean the loss of many lives and thousands of dollars. The underbrush gets dry as tinder and barns as readily; and while fifty men back-firing can stop the fire in the beginning, Dick could not hope to after such a start as this one had. When they reached the house they found their mother digging in the yard with a spade.

"Hurry," she called, but she did not stop digging.

"Harness the horse, Betty. I'll dig this hole. Mother, you put the things you want to save in the trunk and I'll bury it."

Betty was thankful that Dick had taught her to harness a team. Mrs. Woodson put some of the best clothes in the trunk; then the silverware and the most prized trinkets, and last of all the tin box containing father's papers. Dick dug rapidly. The sun seemed to scorch his back. Drops of sweat trickled into his eyes and mouth, but never for a moment did he stop his digging.

Then he and his mother lugged the heavy trunk from the house and lowered it into the hole. As they threw in the last shovelful of dirt, Betty drove up with the team. The horses were twitching and pawing. Their eyes roved wildly, and every instinct warned them to flee.

"Hurry, Dick," cried Betty. "I can't hold them much longer. They are pulling at the bits and I am not used to the team."

"Coming, Betty—just hang on a bit longer. You are a brick. I'd rather have you than any boy in the gang. Here, mother, you sit in the back with Betty. I'll drive."

Before he relieved Betty of the reins, Dick dashed into the house and returned with a pail of water and an armful of towels, which he stood in the waggon.

"You'll need dampened towels to protect your eyes," he explained.

"Are you going to try to make the town?" Mrs. Woodson asked her son.

"If I can," he replied, as they swung down the road.

Though all this had taken only a few minutes, they saw that the fire was beginning to turn in their direction. The boy leaned far out over the dashboard and called to the team—"Giddap! Go it boys, go it!" The heavy farm team plunged forward. A mile was covered at what seemd a snail's pace, and still the fire crackled just behind.

"Hurry, hurry, Dick," begged Betty.

I must save the horses for the last hard run."

The air began to darken with smoke and flying ashes. Rabbits and a fox frightened by the fire, fled toward the welcome shelter of the river. As they watched suddenly the wind blew hot on their cheeks.

"Why!" gasped Dick, turning to look back. "Why—what!" and then he leaned forward and brought the whip down across the backs of the straining horses.

For the wind had veered about and the fire was hemming them in. He turned short to the left. Mrs. Woodson leaned forward and called to him excitedly, while Betty sobbed and clung to the lurching waggon. "Dick, that isn't the way to town."

"I know, mother, but we can't make the town. The fire is gaining on us. I'll try to get to the river. I'll do my best."

"I know that, Dick," said Mrs. Woodson. She leaned over and dampened the towel to protect Betty's eyes. And Betty knew courage when she saw it. If she needed an example her brother was showing a quiet kind of bravery that made Betty sit up and stop her crying. She thought it was time for her to help by stopping her childish crying.

"Are we getting near the river?" she asked.

"Almost there," shouted Dick, as he struggled to guide the plunging horses. They were pulling on the bits until it seemed that every movement would jerk his arms from his body. And now they could see the river! But—could they make it? Could they possibly make it before the fire? Already ashes, bits of charred wood, and leaves fell on their uncovered heads. A spark lit on Dick's shirt and set it ablaze so that Betty had to beat it out with a towel.

"I'm afraid we can't make the river, son. But we've made a good fight. We did our best."

But it was for this that Dick had been driving carefully and saving the horses. One moment he looked over his shoulder and glared at the relentless monster of flame that came licking the green fields—a moment and then he stood up, flashed the cracking whip over the horses; like warring Indians, he shouted and hooted "Whoooopeee! Whoop! Whoopee!"

"Shall I help unhitch?" asked Betty.

"We haven't time. I'll cut the traces."

In a moment the team was free of the heavy waggon and Dick drove them into the river and Betty and mother followed at his heels. Hardly had they waded in when the fire was eating up the waggon and swooping toward them. Dick still clung to the reins of the horses, but at the approach of the blistering heat they reared and then gave a wild plunge that broke the reins and set them free.

"Take a good breath," ordered Dick, and when I give the word, hold your breath and duck under the water."

They kept wetting the towels, and held them over their heads to shut out the stifling heat. Dick's lungs seemed bursting.

"Take a breath—under! Quick!" And then the roaring, raging flames jumped the river. Again and again their heads came above water gasping for breath, only to plunge back to the safety of the river. For six hours they sat there waiting for the earth to cool off so they might walk to town. The breaking away of the horses left the little family to make its way on foot. The sun sank in the west a huge red ball, and one by one the stars came out.

"If you are able to, mother, I think we had better try to get to town."

"I'm all right," came the cheery reply from mother. "If only we had that pail we could take a little water with us until we get out of that dried district."

"I have the pail," said Betty. "I was so excited I carried the pail into the river with me."

They laughed a little unsteadily at Betty as she hauled the pail out of the shallow bed of the river. Then filling it half full of water they started on the six-mile walk to town. The hot ground seemed to fairly blister their feet, and every few minutes they had to stop and wet their shoes. Far down in the dusky shadows where the horizon dipped to meet the earth there twinkled the welcome lights of an auto. Betty spied them first.

"Look!" she cried. "I know that is father."

It was. Mr. Woodson was coming to them as fast as gasoline could bring him. Before the car had stopped he was out and had Betty and her mother in his arms. Now that the danger was over they were crying softly.

"Dick was splendid. Dick was splendid." Mrs. Woodson kept saying it over and over. And between hugs Betty told her father all about it. Mr. Woodson's voice was husky, and he rung Dick's hand with a grip that hurt.

And the man who had been driving the car and heard Betty's story, stepped forward and spoke to Dick. "I'd like to shake hands," he said. "You certainly made a fight, and I like grit."

SUFFERED AGONY WITH NEURALGIA

Nothing Helped Her Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., May 5th. 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of "Fruit-a-tives". For over thirty years, I have suffered from Chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottle after bottle of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but "Fruit-a-tives" proved that the doctor was wrong, by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

I would not have my present health if it was not for "Fruit-a-tives" and I am glad of the opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as "Fruit-a-tives", for the guidance of other women who may be similarly affected"

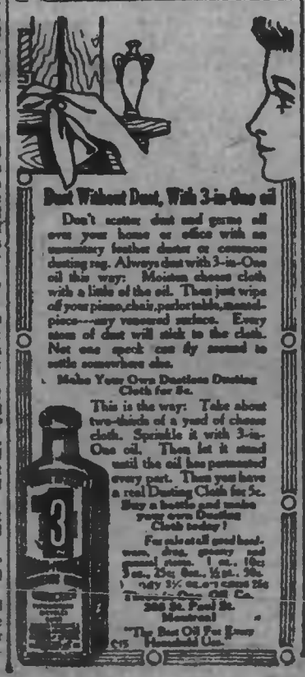
MRS. NATHAN DUNN.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine made from fruit juices and is particularly suited to women because of its mild action and pleasant taste.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A Fairly Good Reason.

Sir William Meredith, chief justice of Ontario, and Mr. Hellmuth are mutual fathers-in-law, the lawyer's daughter having wedded the son of the knight. During a rather tedious argument on a case which Sir William was hearing Mr. Hellmuth was proceeding to elaborate on a certain point of law which he thought had an important bearing on the issue. But the chief justice thought otherwise. He was impatient. For awhile he listened to the lawyer's argument; then he leaned back with an air of boredom and interrupted with: "Mr. Hellmuth, it seems to me that this is not relevant. What reason is there why I should be compelled to listen to all this?" Mr. Hellmuth's mouth had just a suspicion of a smile around its corners as he answered: "Reason, my lord? Why, $8,000 a year."



Dust Without Dust, With 3-in-One oil

Don't scatter dust and germs all over your house or office with an unsanitary feather duster or common dusting rag. Always dust with 3-in-One oil this way: Moisten chesse cloth with a little of the oil. Then just wipe off your piano, chair, parlor table, mantelpiece—any veneered surface. Every atom of dust will stick to the cloth. Not one speck can fly around to settle somewhere else.

Make Your Own Dustless Dusting Cloth for 5c.

This is the way: Take about two-thirds of a yard of cheese cloth. Sprinkle it with 3-in-One oil. Then let it stand until the oil has permeated every part. Then you have a real Dusting Cloth for 5c. Buy a bottle and make your own Dustless Cloth today!

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness" writes Mr. Wm Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lansdale Mills, Ont., "and—used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

THE INNS OF ENGLAND

THEIR GLORY WANED WHEN THE STAGE COACH PASSED.

In the Sixteenth Century the Hostelries of Merry England Were Famous For Their Comfort and Their Bountiful Fare—Friendship and Hospitable Kindness Were the Pervading Spirit.

Its country inns have always been the peculiar glory of England. Their perfection have been acclaimed by a hundred grave writers of prose, and nymned by unnumbered poets. Wherever we look in the ancient records we find ample testimony most flattering to our vanity. As early as 1558, one Perlin, a French traveler, noted that the English were lovers of good cheer and delighted in banquets. "They have many rich inns," said he, "where they can enjoy the best of fare every day with a free choice of rabbits, hares, and every kind of meat."

Harrison, a candid critic always, celebrated in 1577 the great and sumptuous inns which the traveler might use as his own house, and where he might have for his money "how great or how little variety of victuals, and what other service himself shall think expedient to call for." There was no stint of food or comfort. Well found as the inns were at all points, it was in napery that they took an especial pride.

"For beside the linen used at the tables, which is commonly washed daily, is such and so much as belongeth unto the estate and calling of the guest. Each comer is sure to lie in clean sheets, herein no man hath been lodged since they came from the laundress, or out of the water wherein they were last washed." There was as fair accommodation for horse as for man, and the host, honest soul, was bound by a general custom to restore whatever the traveler might lose while he sojourned under his roof.

In brief, wrote Harrison, "it is a world to see how each owner of them contendeth with other for goodness of entertainment of their guests, as about fineness and change of linen, furniture, of bedding, beauty of rooms, service at the table, costliness of plate, strength of drink, variety of wines, as well using of horses." The competition was honorable and honorably sustained, and so long as the high road kept its place in the life of England, its inns fell not one whit below the standard set them by Harrison, either in comfort or splendor.

And the ancient inns of England are rich and sumptuous, because they held a firm place in the social economy. They were at once the traveler's joy and his necessity. The tired horseman looked for the costly and many-colored signboards as the storm-tossed mariner scans the horizon for the welcome light of a harbor. The inns, indeed, were easy of access. They were proper stages upon the journey of life. The road wherein they were set was a place of movement and romance.

The general resort of all classes, it witnessed the tragedies and the merry-makings of all sorts of men. There roved the courtier with his cavalcade, the bagman with his budget of samples at his saddle, the ambling farmer on his stout-built cob. And on their tracks there thundered the reckless, well-armed highwayman, intent upon his supper and a bottle at the nearest inn. Thus the gay, riotous, coarse, good-humored life of England was lived on the high road and in the hostelry.

And in those days every man was sure of a welcome. As he traveled with an easy sense of freedom, so he knew that at the end of the day he would be well received. As soon as he came to the inn, Fynes Morison tells us, the servants would run to him, and one would take his horse and walk him till he be cold, then rub him and give him meat. Another servant would conduct the traveler to his room and kindle his fire, a third would pull off his boots and make them clean.

Then the host and hostess would visit him to know his pleasure. Would he sup with them, or perchance in his chamber? Everywhere breathed the spirit of friendship and kindness. If the traveler bade his hosts sit down they took it for a courtesy, and no gentleman omitted the simple favor. Thus, well fed and well housed, the guest gave in the morning a few pence to the chamberlain and coffer and had in exchange their good wishes for a happy journey.

It was this freedom from care, this security of a smiling face, which endeared the roadside inns to our roving ancestors. Let the poet speak:—

'Tis here with boundless power I reign;
And ev'ry health which I begin,
Converts dull port to bright champagne;

Such freedom crowns it, at an inn. And, as all the world sought happiness in an inn, so there were those who prayed that in an inn death might overtake them. Such was Bishop Burnet's pious hope, and piously did Sterne echo it. Nor was Sterne wholly disappointed, for it was in a lodging, own brother to an inn, that he last looked upon the light of day. So from the life of England the inn and roadside passed into English literature.

The railway came, and with a rigid tyranny put an end for ever to "Tally-ho!" and "Highflyer." The roads, perfected by Macadam, followed Palmer's lightning coaches into forgetfulness. And when the roads, narrow and grass-grown, became places of solitude and mystery, the inns shut up their doors, drew down their blinds, and mourned in dust and poverty the days that were no more.

No longer did the lonely traveler draw rein at the welcome sign of the Bald-faced Stag. No longer did the fat and smiling Boniface receive his tired and travel-stained guests. The inn, once a nation's pride, sank to the level of a beerhouse.

A Joke on Mr. Judge.

One of the best known theatrical men in Canada is Mr. H. C. Judge of Montreal, one of a trio of enterprising managers who are bringing English actors out to tour Canada. His friends are telling a little joke on Mr Judge, in connection with the recent coming of the well-known comedian, Lawrence Brough. Just before Mr. Brough was due to sail for Canada Mr. Judge left Montreal for a fishing trip on Lake Champlain. A day or so later he was informed over the wire by his secretary that a cable had arrived from Mr. Brough. It read: "Arrange substitute. Arrested for love in a railway train. Brough.

Mr. Judge was worried. He rushed to Montreal and saw his partner Mr. Horsfall.

"Oh, that's all right," remarked Horsfall cheerily. "That is a reply to my cable from New York, suggesting that Mr. Brough put on alternative curtain-raisers to 'The Lady of Ostend.' It means we are to change the announcements to read that 'Arrested' will be given instead of 'Love In a Railway Train!' Don't you see it?"

Less Loss of Life This Year.

Statistics of the Dominion Marine Department on the navigation now closing will show a considerable decrease in the number of lives lost on Canadian coastal or inland waters.

At the beginning of the season new regulations in regard to steamboat inspection and devices for the safety of passengers and crews were adopted, and it is believed that they are a large factor in the diminished toll of lives.

A Letter From India.

Strangely-constructed letters of strange diction are common enough. Sometimes it is by sheer ridiculousness that they entertain. The original of the following was recently received from India by a Liverpool shipping firm:

"Most Honored Sir,—Understanding that there are several hands wanted in your honors' department, I beg to offer my hand as to adjustment. I appeared for the Matric. Exam. in Octy, but failed, the reason for which I shall describe, to begin with my writing was illegible this was due to climatic reason, for having come from warm to a cold climate found my fingers stiff and very disobedient to my wishes. Father I had received great shock to my mental system in the shape of the death of my only fond brother, besides most honored Sir I beg to state that I am in very incomfortable circumstances being the soul means of support of my fond brother's seven issues consisting of three adults and four females, the latter being the bain of my existence, owing to my having to support two of my own wives as well as their issues, of which by God's misfortune the feminine gender predominates. If by wonderful good fortune the few humble lines meet with your benign kindness and favorable turn of mind, I the poor menial shall ever pray for the long life and prosperity of yourself, as well as your Honor's posthumous olive branches."

Rows of Yarmouth.

The Rows of Great Yarmouth are always a matter of interest to those who visit the quaint old fishing town. There are 166 Rows altogether—narrow thoroughfares which connect the main streets, with houses on each side. They are from three to six feet wide. Special carts have to be built to traverse these Rows.

Words That Speak.

Bang—"a sudden noise like that from a gun" is the definition given by the dictionary. But the explanation is be fogging and futile, for a "bang" is well, what better describes it than that simple word itself?

So many of our most expressive words seem similarly to have sprung from a desire to form with the lips a sound mimicking the thing described Why waste words on a definition of the word "splash," for example? You hear all the abrupt, restless hurling of the waters in that one word.

And does even a baby need to be told what "buzz" means when a bluebottle is leading a forlorn hope against the window?

"Tinkle," "whistle," "whine," "gurgle," "crackle," "icy"—these are only a few of our other eloquently descriptive words.—London Answers.

Not His Place to Laugh.

Hickory Wood, the pantomime writer, used to tell an amusing story of a theatrical manager who once shared his box at a provincial pantomime When the principal comedian entered and did his best the manager, with a scowl on his brow, leaned over to Mr Wood and remarked, "I want to engage that man for next Christmas in my production."

"Do you think he is funny?" Mr Wood asked.

"Screamingly funny," returned the manager.

"Then why don't you laugh?" asked Mr Wood.

"Laugh when he's got his eyes on me?" replied the manager. "And every smile means that he'll ask another fiver a week."—London Telegraph.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS

The worst feature of bronchitis is the tendency to return year after year until the system is worn out and gives way to consumption, or other disease.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine owes much of its great popularity to the fact that it positively cures bronchitis, and this is about as severe a test as can be made of a medicine of this kind.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years, had bronchitis, and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linsed and Turpentine for her, and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use, and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

In fighting diseases of the throat and lungs half the battle is in having Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine at hand to be used promptly. This is why many people prefer to buy the large family size bottle.

WAR ON SLAVERY.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The committee of the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protective Society of Great Britain has decided to take immediate steps with the object of creating a sister organization in America to co-operate with the British Society in watching all matters in which joint Anglo-American action might be desirable.

In explanation of their attempt to bring about the formation of such a society in America the British officials say it is admitted that slave-owning, slave-trading and great cruelty to native races are widely prevalent throughout the regions of South America and Mexico, but the trouble is that Great Britain cannot act without appearing to menace the Monroe doctrine, while Washington apparently hesitates to act alone for fear of creating a feeling of resentment throughout South America.

Kent Health Officers.

CHATHAM, Dec. 3.—At a meeting of the medical officers of health of Kent yesterday, Kent County Health Officers' Association was formed, to promote the general health of the county and to make a special study of sanitary surroundings. The officers elected were: President, Dr. C. R. Charteris, Chatham; vice-president, Dr. Hanks, Blenheim; secretary, Dr. Reid, Merlin.

Accident To Paper Workers.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 3.—While tending a machine at the Kimteith paper mill yesterday afternoon, George Albon, a married man, 30 years of age, was caught in a belt and dashed against a beam, falling to the floor and fracturing the base of his skull. He is in a critical condition at the General and Marine Hospital, and is not expected to live.

Surgeon Wouldn't Help.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 3.—Otto Fiala yesterday shot and killed his wife at the home of her mother, south of St. Louis, and then shot himself.

A physician who was called refused to attend Fiala, saying he deserved to die. Fiala's wound was pronounced fatal. He and his wife had been separated.

SLEEP DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief From Few Doses of Croxone

Croxone soon relieves such conditions because it reaches the very roots of the disease: It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filering cells and glands; neutralises and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; heals the inflamed membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, lifeless kidneys so they can filter and sift all the poisons from the blood, and drive it out of the system.

So sure, so positive, so quick and lasting, are the results obtained from the use of Croxone, that three doses a day for a few days are often all that is required to end the worst backache, regulate the most annoying bladder disorders, and overcome the numerous other similar conditions.

Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to refund the purchase price if Croxone fails to give desired results, regardless of how old you are, how long you have suffered, or what else has failed.

To Consider Trackmen's Demand.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The conciliation board, consisting of Mr. Justice Meredith, Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., and M. J. Irwin, Rat Portage, which is to consider the claims of the C. P. R. trackmen, will meet here to-morrow.

The men have made demands for increases in salary ranging from ten to twenty per cent., which the company thinks are too high.

Young Farmer Killed.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Dec. 3.—Fred Kramer, aged 25 years, son of John Kramer, formerly of Humberstone township, was killed almost instantly yesterday afternoon while bringing a load of wood into town. The horses started up, throwing young Kramer over the front of the wagon, which passed over his head.

Killed In Winnipeg.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 3.—Word was received yesterday morning of the death at Winnipeg of Leslie Prime, formerly of Brantford. Mr. Prime worked for the Great Northern Railway, and was killed in the yards just outside of Winnipeg. He was a son of the late Arthur Prime, a well-known Grand Trunk engineer.

WHAT'S INDIGESTION? WHO CARES? LISTEN!

"Pape's Diapepsin" Makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes

Time it! In five minutes all stomach distress will go. No indigestion, heartburn, sourness or belching of gas, acid, or eructations of undigested food, no dizziness, bloating, foul breath or headache.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in regulating upset stomachs. It is the surest, quickest and most certain indigestion remedy in the whole world, and besides it is harmless.

Millions of men and women now eat their favourite foods without fear — they know Pape's Diapepsin will save them from any stomach misery.

Please, for your sake, get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store and put your stomach right. Don't keep on being miserable—life is too short—you are not here long, so make your stay agreeable. Eat what you like and digest it; enjoy it, without dread of rebellion in the stomach.

Pape's Diapepsin belongs in your home anyway. Should one of the family eat something which don't agree with them, or in case of an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis or stomach derangement at daytime or during the night, it is handy to give the quickest, surest relief known.

Aged Physician's Death.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 3.—Dr. John M. Dee, a life-long resident of Stamford, and the last descendant of one of England's oldest families, died at his home near Stamford Green, early yesterday morning. Dr. Dee was 80 years old. He had been in poor health for some time past. He was unmarried.

Safe Blown by Yeggmen.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 4.—No trace has been found of the yeggmen who blew the safe of the postoffice at Youngstown at three o'clock yesterday morning and escaped with about $2,000 worth of stamps. They obtained no money, although the safe contained a banker's chest with more than $100 in it.

Hon. E. L. Wetmore Resigns.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3.—On account of old age, Hon. E. L. Wetmore has resigned his position as chairman of the Indian Commission.

WILLING TO CONFER.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—The anxiety of the Government to bring about if possible a settlement of the home rule question by consent is shown by the character of the speeches of different members of the Ministry last night. Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor, dilating at Birmingham on the importance of reaching such a settlement, made an appeal for one or more responsible men from each side to meet and talk together with unrestrained freedom, which would be only possible in private conference.

The Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel Postmaster-General, Sir John A. Simon, Attorney-General, and the Rt. Hon. J. A. Pease, President of the Board of Education, speaking at other places, voiced similar sentiments and emphasized the fact that Premier Asquith had not closed the door to negotiation.

Religions in Guelph.

GUELPH, Dec. 3.—A church census of the city shows the following adults: Presbyterians 3,557, Methodists 2,191, Anglicans 2,056, Baptists 426, Congregationalists 195, Lutherans 195, Salvation Army 155 Disciples 150, B.M.E. 86, Christadelphians 39, Gospel Brethren 41, Hebrews 29, Christian Scientists 5, a church in particular 500.

Dr. P. H. Bryce Will Speak.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 3.—Delegates to the third annual National Housing Conference, which begins here to-day and will continue through the week, began arriving yesterday. Former President Taft is to be one of the distinguished delegates who will make a speech. Dr. Peter H. Bryce representing the Dominion of Canada is also on the program.

Sues G. T. R. For $1,000,000.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The Grand Trunk Railway was sued for $1,000,000 in the United States District Court here yesterday by Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co., of New York.

The complaint alleges breach of a contract under which the plaintiff was to construct a terminal for the railway at Toronto.

Babe's Body Found In River.

WELLAND, Dec. 3—Hidden in the weeds at the side of the Welland river, the body of an infant child was found by Harold Putnam about a mile west of Welland shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The body was wrapped in paper and had been in the water between two and three weeks.

Arkona's Destructive Fire.

FOREST, Dec. 3.—Fire at Arkona early yesterday morning resulted in the total destruction of Robert Crawford's stove shop, W. J. Clark's harness shop and residence, William Holmes' photographic studio and a portion of Fuller Bros.' departmental store. Loss $10,000, with little insurance.

NOT PLAIN WORKMEN.

French Chefs Imported As Artists, Declare Hotelmen.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—James Mallen, chef of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, was indicted by the U. S. grand jury for violating the contract labor law in hiring eighty or more cooks through agents in France. The indictment is said to be the first fruit of a Government crusade against the importation of cooks, practised by many of the big New York hotels and restaurants. The hotelmen have taken the ground that a French cook is an artist and that by hiring them abroad they are not merely amenable to the contract labor law than the managers of grand opera are when they engage their European singers.

Shaw Awaits Officers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Mervin Shaw, the young clerk, who is accused of embezzling $70 while employed in the Toronto office of Swift & Co., packers, when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Shields yesterday, waived examination and consented to be returned to Canada to answer the charge. Shaw was committed to the Tombs to await the coming of officers from Toronto.

New Chinese Consul-General.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Mr. Yang Yeyung, the newly-appointed Chinese consul-general to Canada, has arrived at Vancouver, but being temporarily indisposed, he will remain there a few days before coming on to Ottawa. Previous to his appointment he was consul-general in the Philippine Islands.

New Army in Sweden.

LONDON, Dec 3.—King George provided a surprise for Queen Mother Alexandra in observance of her 69th birthday Monday by depleting 36,000 officers and men of the British army in Sandringham House on the morning picture [illegible]

AN ARTFUL ELEPHANT.

He Deserved the Dinner He Got With So Much Cunning.

Here is an amusing tale of an elephant's artfulness told by Mrs. A. M. Handley in "Roughing It in Southern India:"

"One very bright moonlight evening while camping on the Brahmagiris we were sitting out in the cool air after dinner when one of the elephants somehow contrived to unhobble himself and walked away from his own quarters into ours. We saw him go up to a sleeping native, snuff at his pillow and then ever so gently draw it away with his trunk. At the same time he edged his own foot under the man's head and shoulders that no jerk might be felt.

"The pillow was a bag of rice, put there for safety against pilferers. Although tied up in a knot, the bag was deftly opened and its contents devoured to the very last grain, the thief looking watchfully round him the while.

"We were not likely to disappoint him of his cleverly won feast, as he seemed to know, for, just letting his tiny eyes rest on us unconcernedly for a second or two, he fell to considering his next move.

"He drew a stone toward him with the ever handy trunk and got it under the empty sack. Then he worked both together under the man's head. Finally he stealthily withdrew his own foot, and, having waited no longer than was necessary to make sure he had left all safe, he moved off."

Sage Tea Puts Life And Colour In Hair

Don't Stay Grey! It Darkens so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m., second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

Full particulars from any Canadian Pacific Agent or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Worth Looking At.

A man who was something of a gourmet ordered a dinner for himself and his party which, from the menu, should have been very palatable, but apparently it was not so. Course succeeded course, and toward the end of the meal the host could restrain himself no longer. He called up the waiter and expostulated. "I ordered a good dinner, and we have waited patiently for some satisfactory dish. The soup was a failure, the fish was a disappointment, the entree uneatable, and I am sorry to tell you that during the whole dinner there has been nothing worth looking at." The waiter looked frowned for an instant, and then, brightening up, said, "If you wait a moment, sir, I will bring you the bill."—Chicago News.

Servants in Bogota.

The domestic problem is reduced to a minimum in Bogota. Good domestics are plentiful and cheap. Five to ten dollars a month is high pay. In the houses of the well to do the servants are well treated and lead happy lives. They have ample quarters of their own, centering round their own patio, and enough of the old patriarchal regime survives to make them really a part of the family.—"Colonizing."

A harmless cure for sick headache biliousness, sour stomach, constipation, indigestion, coated tongue, sluggishness—take "California Syrup Figs." For the cause of all such misery comes from a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful to-night means all constipation poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Dont think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even the most delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel cleanser, regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine, so ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company. This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

OPENS UP NOSTRILS CLEARS HEAD, ENDS COLDS OR CATARRH AT ONCE

Instantly Relieves Swollen, Inflamed Nose, Head, Throat—You Breathe Freely—Dull Headache Goes—Nasty Discharge Stops.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw, sore, [illegible] but truly needless.

Put some [illegible] at once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Horrible Disaster--Boston Hotel was Burned

TWENTY-SIX PEOPLE LOSE LIVES IN FIRE

Men's Hotel in Boston Swept by Flames and Many Occupants Are Caught Like Rats in Trap.

SOME NARROW ESCAPES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BOSTON, MASS., Dec. 3.—Twenty-six dead, three or four fatally hurt, dozens of men driven naked on to the roofs and streets in a cold temperature, was the tragedy here early this morning, when a fire destroyed the Arcadian hotel in the south end. The exact number will not be known until the ruins cool. There were 175 occupants of the rooms trapped in the tiny cells and tiers of bunks in the hotel men's fifteen cent lodging house. The men fought for their lives. At ten oclock this morning twenty-five bodies had been taken from the ruins and one man died in the hospital. Nearly all the bodies were terribly burned and mutilated, making identification almost impossible. The victims were men in poor circumstances, who had resorted to the place for a night's lodging. Many of them were negroes. Caught in the crowded bunks on the top floor of a five storey brick building, and in small rooms on the fourth floor, they were helpless. When they were aroused the stairways were in flames and there was a mad rush for the fire escapes at the rear. Practically all th men were naked. Many were rescued by the firemen and policemen. Others escaped by walking a shaky plank stretched to an adjoining building or jumping across a five foot alley to the neighbouring roofs. More than fifty men were taken to the nearest police station. When the firemen arrived thirty of them stood silhoutted against the burniny flames of the roof. Most of them were saved by the use of scaling ladders.

Entertainment At The Home

A very pleasing entertainment took place at the Protestant Home on Tuesday evening, when about seventy-five young people representing the Guilds and Societies of all the churches, met to hold the dedication services on the piano, which has just been purchased through the efforts of the young people. A short musical programme of the following numbers was rendered:

Instrumental duet—Mr. and Miss Kenyon.

Vocal solo—"Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold."—Mr. Morphet.

Piano solo—Miss Kendry.

Vocal solo—"Then You'll Remember Me"—Mr. Batley.

Instrumental duet — Miss Girvin and Mr. Treneer.

Piano solo—Mr. Treneer.

Mr. Williamson, Chairman of the Executive Committee, called on Mr. Baker to present the piano to the Home, and in a few well-chosen words, he asked the Board of the Home to accept the piano from the Young Peoples Societies.

Mr. Mansell, Pastor of the Charlotte Street Church, made the formal dedication and spoke of the refining influence of music in people's lives, and how pleased he was at the idea of the young people working together with such a good purpose in view, and that fifty years hence we would appreciate the value of the gift we had made, when scattered through different parts of our Dominion and listening to old familiar fireside songs. Mrs. Rogers followed Mr. Mansell's address by a short talk on the harmony and purity of music. Miss Nichols of the Protestant Home Board, spoke of her pleasure in the work, and Miss Lancaster thanked the young people for the work they had done and were doing every week at the Home.

The evening was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology.

PROSPECTS FOR BIG SHOW VERY BRIGHT

VALUABLE PRIZES

"What's the prospects for your show this winter?" an Examiner reporter asked Secretary Kelly of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night.

As a reply Mr. Kelly handed over a copy of the prize list with the suggestion to look it over. The folder looked more bulky than in former years and the contents certainly gave evidence that some extensions had been made. The list of specials includes twenty silver cups and numerous other valuable articles and cash, amounting in all to about $300. Besides these special prizes there is the regular cash prize which wil amount to over $500. A fifth prize has also been added in several of the heavier sections.

The directors have provided for further competition till now the classes number no less than 96. This is something for which the Association may well feel proud, and it should serve to show that the sixth annual exhibition to be held on January 6th, 7th and 8th, 1914, will be worth while.

Two Good Judges.

The judges will be Mears. Wm. McNeil, of London, Ont., and C. H. Wilson, of Brockville, both widely known men, who are thoroughly qualified to judge, such an extensive show as is that of the local association. Already many applications are being made for prize lists and other information from points far and wide and the directors have been very much encouraged.

Demonstrations.

Demonstrations are to be given on how to prepare fowl for market. Such demonstrations have been made before with the result that practical information was shared both by the farmer and customer. This is one of the many educational features of the show.

Meeting To-morrow Night.

The directors have called for a full attendance at their regular monthly meeting on Thursday night at 8 o'clock, and as this will be the last meeting before the show, there are several matters of importance to be considered.

A Little Epilogue Which Revealed Mrs. Josiah Kelly's Natural Preferment and a Can of Johns Tea

A large and highly appreciative audience filled the Lecture Hall of Charlotte Street Methodist Church on Tuesday evening to witness the second presentation of Clara A. Anderson's excellent production entitled 'Afternoon Tea in Friendly Village, 1862." The play was exceedingly well staged and the ability displayed by the performers was of an exceptionally high order.

The properties were handled with skill and precision and were adaptable to the occasion; even to a canister of Johns' justly celebrated blend of tea which figured in the second scene. This was the subject for a clever little epilogue which brought out Mrs. Josiah Kelly's natural preferment for that particular brand of aromatic beverage. Even though the setting was representative of conditions that existed fifty-one years ago, it is only natural and proper to assume that the taste and good judgment of the 19th century housekeeper was no less exacting than that of the 20th century type.

The real material difference between the two periods in so far as the housekeeper is concerned, is amplified in that indispensable product which in the 19th century was regarded as something cultivated from antiquity. Johns Tea owes its popularity to the universal experience of the 20th century housekeeper. It is selected from leaves which give their hearts' essence for your joy, and as Mrs. Josiah Kelly remarked during the performance, could be obtained at Mr. Johns store, 336 Water street.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, TORONTO.—This is at the present the largest Protestant Church in the Dominion of Canada. It was built at a cost of $875,000. The vaulting of the first gallery, is supposed to be the best kind of work of its kind to be found. This big church is really a product of a long standing cleavage between the Low Church and the High Church of England in Toronto. At the time for the election for Bishop in the Toronto Synod, Rev. Dr. Cody, the Rector of St. Paul's, was the Low Church candidate for Bishop against the nominee of the High Church, Bishop Thorneloe of Algoma. There were half a dozen deadlocks, and finally the parties got together and compromised an election of the present Bishop Sweeney. But the friends of Canon Cody decided at that time to creat what they considered a suitable place of worship for Canon Cody's congregation. The new St. Paul's Church is the result. Lately there has been a unification of the forces of the High Church and the Low Church in Toronto.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE GATHERING

Trouble is Expected on the Arrival at Plymouth of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

A BIG CELEBRATION

Examiner Special:

PLYMOUTH, ENG., Dec. 3.—(Special cable.)—"General" Flora Drummond, militant suffragette, who has recently become reconciled to the Pankhurst leadership, is here to-day with a large party of suffragettes to resist the expected attempts of the government to arest Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, when she lands here to-night on the Steamer Majestic. Determined looking suffragettes are coming here by every train, and it is thought there will be five hundred here to-night. Two brass bands have been engaged and a big celebration is planned to greet the revered leader. If the authorities intervene it is acknowledged that serious rioting will follow. Scotland Yard may send a tug to meet the liner and take the prisoner off before she touches port.

Results From Talent Money

Last evening, in Knox Church, a large number assembled to hear the results from the Ladies of the Church who have been using their talent and money for the good of the Church. It was found that Mrs. Lowes of Sherbrook ... had brought in the largest ... over $51. She was presented, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid, with a bouquet of flowers by Miss Vera Foster. Mrs. Goodfellow and Mrs. Gillespie of Romaine Street also received honourable mention. The efforts of all the ladies were very much appreciated. A short programme preceded the announcement, as follows:

Piano solo—Miss Ruby Carr.
Vocal solo—Miss Emerson.
Vocal solo—Mr. Miles.
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Solo—Mr. Hampage.
Solo—Mrs. Miles.
Refreshments were served by the ladies.

The evening was a great success.

Hayseed Carnival.

A Senior Class rehearsal to-night, commencing at 8:00 o'clock. Every senior member who is taking part is requested to be present in costume.

NEW CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR'S CHAIR

Ald. Duncan and Ex-Ald. Hicks Are Spoken of as Likely Starters and Neither Would Deny the Report

WHAT THEY SAY

Two new names are mentioned to day for the mayoralty contest, and it begins to look as if Ald. Buller and Ald. Gillespie will not be alone in the field when the ratepayers look over the ballots in January. The prospective candidates which Dame Rumour has produced, are Ald. Geo. H. Duncan and ex-Ald. Robert Hicks.

The Examiner called up both gentlemen on the telephone at noon to-day.

Ald. Duncan informed the Examiner that there was some truth in the rumour that connected his name with the mayoralty race. He would not say flatly that he would be a candidate, nor would he deny the report.

"I will be able to say positively on Friday," said the chairman of the Property committee.

Mr. Hicks Silent.

"There is a rumour around town to-day that you are to be a candidate for the mayoralty," the Examiner remarked to Mr. Hicks.

"I have said nothing," returned the ex-Alderman.

"Well has anyone said anything to you about it?"

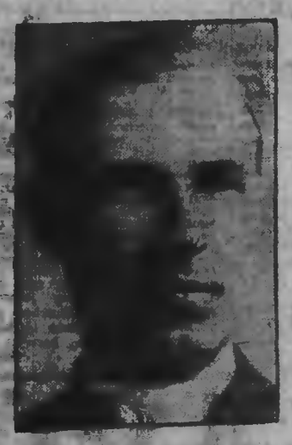
"Naturally people have spoken to me about it."

"Who will we say about it to-day?"

"I have nothing to say."

"Will you deny or confirm the report that you will be a candidate?"

"I have nothing to say to-day," was Mr. Hicks' final answer.



CANON CODY—Rector of the new St. Paul's Church in Toronto. He is reputed to be the greatest preacher of the Anglican Church in Canada.

MISSING MAN SEARCHED FOR

Peterborough Police Furnished With Description of Prof. Lavell

Chief of Police Thompson is in receipt of a circular offering $500 reward for information leading to the discovery of Prof. Lavell, the Columbus, Ohio, educationalist, whose mysterious disappearance in Hamilton a week ago, has resulted in a province wide search.

Rev. A. E. Lavell, of Brantford, is a brother of the missing man and with the rest of the family is prosecuting a thorough search throughout Ontario in the believe tha Professor Lavell is still alive.

The description given the local police is as follows: Age, 41 years; height, 5 feet 10 inches; slight build; large ears; thin face; dark hair and dark moustache; prominent cheek bones; highly educated and an ac complished pianist. He was wearing a grey suit and grey sweater without an overcoat.

Relatives of Professor Lavell declare that he is subject to mental lapses, during which he has no recollection of former events, and it is the belief that he may be boarding on some farm.

Forger Gets Three Years

LINDSAY, Dec. 2.—Mathias Blau, alias Max Brown, the youthful forger from Bancroft, who endeavoured to leave the northern country for the States, after forging two cheques for $10 each, but who was detained at Lindsay, has been sentenced to three years in each case, or six years in all, to run concurrently. He will be removed to Kingston penitentiary at once.

It will be remembered that Blau after forging in two cases then proceeded to elope with another man's wife. He was cool and collected at all times, even when arrested at Lindsay, and took his sentence without a quiver.

MEDICAL INSPECTION IN THE CITY SCHOOLS

Board of Education At Its Meeting Last Night Decided to Appoint a Nurse For This Purpose.

OTHER BUSINESS DONE

It did not take the seed sown by the Women's Council a month ago long to blossom into fruit. At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night, the requests of both deputations of ladies, who waited on the Board at the last meeting were granted.

The Supervision committee, which has been considering the matters of mother's meetings and medical supervision, reported as follows:

Your committee beg to report and recommend as follows:

1. That a graduate nurse be appointed from January 1st, 1914, whose duties shall consist in medical supervision of the pupils of the Public schools and that the Committee of Appointments be authorized to advertise for such nurse.

2. That the Board approve of the "Mothers" meetings in the schools as suggested by the deputation of the "Women's Council" at the last meeting of the Board and the use of class rooms in each school be granted for the purpose, the necessary arrangements in connection therewith to be satisfactory to the Inspector.

3. That the existing arrangement with the Y.M.C.A. for use of their gymnasium and instruction for the pupils of the Collegiate Institute for a term of five months from November 1st, at $125.00 payable monthly, be continued.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN CRANE,
Chairman.

The medical inspect ion will begin in January.

In connection with this matter Mr. W. H. Hill spoke in favour of the innovations. They would result, he said, in incalcuable good to the public school system in the City. In taking this step the Board of Education were making one of the greatest advances they had ever effected.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., asked if it were regular or advisable for the Board to pass such an important measure at its last meeting. Would it not be wiser, he suggested, to refer the matter to the first meeting of the new Board of Education.

(The chairman explained that it was advisable, so as to have the new system commence at the first of the year.

WILL SPEND CHRISTMAS IN COUNTY GAOL

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT

Christmas comes but once a year. This year it will come to Brock Wright in the County Gaol where he was committed for one month by Magistrate Dumble. Wright pleaded guilty to the charge of being under the influence of liquor while on the prohibited list. He was fined ten dollars with an option of thirty days in goal. The latter alternative will prevail.

Accused criminated an Englishman who is said to be employed at a local livery stable and who responds to the cognomen of "Old Cock" as the man who supplied the red eye.

A Public Exhibition.

William Torrance prostrated himself on the street car track at the corner of George and Hunter streets on Tuesday evening. For this exhibition and the consequent disturbance which he is alleged to have created, a fine of two dollars and costs was imposed. The charge sheet read "drunk and disorderly" to which Torrance pleaded guilty.

William Childs for a similar charge was assessed a similar amount. Childs' performance was staged at the corner of George and Charlotte streets.

Suspended Sentence.

John Tivey was liberated on suspended sentence with a promise of six months' residence at the prison farm should he appear in court again. Tivey is said to have been drinking heavily of late and for the past week has been incarcerated in the County Gaol. There is evidently al ack of tonsorial ability at the gaol judging by Tivey's appearance in Police Court this morning.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Special Cable to The Examiner:

Calves—Market firm, prices unchanged. Choice veals, $9 to $10.50; common to good, $6 to $8.

Sheep and Lambs—Light receipts caused a firm market at steady prices. Sheep, $5 to $6; culls and rams, $3.00 to $4.50; lambs, choice ewes and wethers, $8.25 to $8.70.

Hogs—Market easy at following prices. Selected, fed and watered, $8.00 to $8.15 f.o.b. cars, and $8.75 weighed off cars.

MARRIAGE DISSOLVED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, P.Q., Dec. 3. — Though married in Ontario at Prescott, because Edgar Gentry Thompson and Maude Baker, minors, had not obtained the consent of the young man's parents, Judge Brunean has dissolved their marriage. The petitioners for the dissolution were Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, parents of the groom. It would appear that both the youthful ones had represented to the minister that they were of age, but they were not.

AS TO EGGS.

As to eggs, why should there be a tax upon them of three cents per dozen when brought into the country? Some of us charge the cold storage companies with hiding eggs and keeping them out of market till crying demand raises the price. They defend themselves against such a charge. The egg dealers of Montreal assert that cold storage of eggs is not responsible for their high price. They have issued a statement that 34,706 cases of eggs are in cold storage in Montreal and that Montreal's daily consumption of eggs amounts to 7,000 cases, or 210,000 dozens a week, and that the fresh supply of Canadian eggs cannot be expected till March 1st, so that Montreal, whose stored supply will not last till January 1st will, between that time and March, have to go without eggs for two months—between Jan. 1st and March 1st—when the stored supply is exhausted, and the Canadian hen, discouraged by cold weather, is not laying. Assuming that similar conditions prevail throughout other large centres, these conditions are a retroactive argument for reciprocity, with Uncle Sam, for the removal of the duty upon eggs. In the eggless interval of two or three months we shall have to import eggs from the Southern States of the United States, where the mild climate encourages cheap egg production. But if we can lay down southern eggs at the boundary line at 28 cents, they will be met by the Canadian duty of 3 cents which will have to be added to the cost. Three cents is a small amount of money by itself, but when it is added to the price of the eggs we use and a proportionate amount is added to every article we use, its importance becomes great. Even on the principle of protection there is no justification for the duty. Last year we imported 14,456,328 dozen of eggs on which a duty of nearly half a million dollars—$438,469—was paid; half a million added for a useless duty as far as protection was concerned; for Canada had no eggs to export, our total exports amounting to only 147,413 dozens, making 14,308,919 dozen that had to be imported to supply our needs. Why is the duty retained and the people compelled to add three cents per dozen to the prevailing extortionate price of eggs? Why should the invalid poor, to whom eggs might mean prolongation of life, or life itself, be taxed to raise money to build drill sheds and public buildings promised to bribe constituencies in by-elections?

A LESSON IN FORESTRY.

In another place on this page is found an article dealing with conditions in the northern parts of this and the adjacent counties, on each side of Peterborough. The conditions described have their origin in pre-Confederate days. We can't undo the human suffering and moral degradation and physical degeneration that have resulted from peopling lands unfit for cultivation and unable to bear population. But we can to a very large extent make value of the lesson taught. These areas that will not now support men, at one time bore a stand of the finest pine in Canada, whose destruction has put millions into lumbermen's pockets and millions into the treasury of the province. Lands that once bore a crop of valuable timber can be made, by, reforesting and protecting from fire, to bear a similar crop. Here is an opportunity for our government to undertake a valuable work of reforesting. In a generation these lands planted to forest would, if protected from fire, hold timber of a value hundreds, if not, thousands of times beyond the cost of planting and protection. If the government will not undertake this, there is an opportunity for our county council to purchase these lands—at six cents an acre, the cost would not be great—plant them to timber; and in the course, at the furthest, of half a century, the county would have a source of revenue that would practically obviate the necessity of imposing local taxation for county purposes. This is not a chimerical proposal, but a perfectly practicable suggestion. Our county councillors may say that such an undertaking would not bear fruit in their day. Perhaps not; but that is a supremely selfish view to take. If our rulers fifty years ago had not put in motion the forces that have swept away our forest wealth without any accompanying conservation and planted the devastated areas with candidates for struggling starvation, we should not have the deplorable state of things that now exist. If at that time governments had insisted that, after the German way, a tree should be planted for every one cut, the present generation would be enjoying the possession, on now desert lands, of a stand of timber almost equal in value to the original crop. Governments, municipal or provincial or other, never die; they persist with varying personnels, and the duty of a legislature or a province or a county, includes care for the interests of posterity as well as for the present generation.

The Blight Upon The Beautiful Trent Region

The Watershed of Our Bright Rivers and Sparkling Lakes, the Abode of Poverty and Wretchedness

Within one hundred miles of Toronto, in a territory covering the northern parts of Victoria, Peterborough and Hastings counties, and the southern townships of Haliburton county, a rural slum condition exists which for sordidness and degeneracy, judging from reliable information received by The Globe yesterday, has not a parallel in any city in Canada.

The Globe's informant spoke in reference to the speech of Dr. B. E. Fernow, Dean of Forestry in the University of Toronto, at New Liskeard on Saturday, when he told of one hundred and ninety farms in the above-mentioned areas being on sale at six cents per acre; and also of the degeneracy which prevails amongst the people of that section of Ontario.

"What Dr. Fernow said is all too true," was the introductory comment received by The Globe. "Those one hundred and ninety farms which he speaks of in the Trent Valley district comprise some 18,000 acres which have been deserted, and are now being offered for sale at a price equal to three years of unpaid taxes.

"But," added the gentleman, "the most appalling feature of the conditions in that wasted section of the Province is the vain expenditure of energy on the part of the people, who, through lack of means to enable themselves to move away, have been obliged to continue their efforts at farming sterile land. And this condition has brought about a state of physical and mental degeneracy which as a sociological problem invites close investigation with the hope of some kind of relief being extended.

Met Twelve Degenerates One Day.

"On a single day last summer four of us walking through a part of Glamorgan township saw, simply as the result of cursory observations, no less than twelve degenerates along the way. There are, as Dr. Fernow intimated, some 150 families, so mentally and physically defective, as well as being economically incapacitated, that they are unable to leave their barren surroundings. They should never have been allowed to go on the land there. And now it is the duty of some institution to see that they are removed to better land and into more healthful influences."

The basic difficulty in connection with the particular section of the Trent Valley district in question is that its most valuable resource, red and white pine, has been ruthlessly wasted. There are some 600,000 acres in the Trent Valley, which in the early seventies formed one of the finest pineries in the Province. Between 1870 and 1880 vast areas were taken up by timber licenses, and lumbering was the only activity in that part of the country. Unscientific cutting and depletion later by fire left that area of 600,000 acres to be described and classified by the Government as "waste land." Furthermore, those people who went in to cut lumber remained to eke out an existence on the land. A poor, unproductive soil, consisting principally of gravel and sand, with solid rock underneath, has done very little else than deteriorate the character of the families which have endeavoured to cultivate it.

Sold Farm for Mess of Turnips.

The Globe was told of one case where a man, after spending twenty years on a farm of one hundred acres and endeavouring to rear a family of six children, finally sold the hundred acres for six bushels of turnips. During the past summer one farmer, after harvesting forty acres of hay and gathering in the very last wisp of timothy that he could find, discovered his crop to bulk in weight 1,500 pounds, or 37 1-2 pounds per acre. Five or six bushels of oats per acre is regarded as a satisfactory crop in that section of the Province; and a dairy cow that can glean enough nourishment from her scanty pastures to return her owner $20 a year in the form of butter or cream is doing all that can be expected of such an animal.

Eighty Abandoned Farms.

Along the Hastings road in Hastings county, which was settled by Scottish and English people, a visitor last summer in one day passed by eighty abandoned farms; and the same person, examining one of the townships included in the waste portion of Trent Valley, found the light sandy soil to be lying over an underbed of solid rock to a depth of no more than eight inches, and people were endeavouring to raise crops there.

The loss of the pine forests by fire on the 600,000-acre area of the Trent Valley, according to The Globe's adviser, will amount to $12,000,000 to the Province of Ontario, not to mention the effect which the devastation of that district has had upon its people. In August of this year the ninth fire in the history of the upper Trent Valley country swept over the so-called "waste land," or "slash," and though regarded by the Provincial Department of Crown Lands as a trivial matter, it involved a loss to Ontario in the destruction of young pine trees of an asset which in twenty years would have been worth at least two million dollars—The Globe.

Poultry Notes

Laying hens like variety in their grain ration quite as well as we like a variety of food on our own tables.

"The Farmer" says that "every hen house must have ventilation enough to keep it comparatively dry and free from frost on the walls." Quite right; and this condition is best obtained in the open front house.

A visit to any produce house and a glimpse at the unfinished poultry that are there is enough to convince anyone that the producers are losing thousands of dollars that might have been saved by a little extra feeding.

Fight the vermin. A little liquid lice killer on the roosts and on all wood work in conection therewith, will do away entirely with the little mites that feed on the hens during the night and hide on the wood work during the day.

If you have a mongrel flock why not select the best of the females and purchase a strong, vigorous, pure-bred male to mate with them. It will increase the value of next year's flock 25 per cent.

—Farm and Dairy.

SAVING SPACE.

Two little South Side laddies who visited in the country recently were sent to bed in a small room that contained a small cot, on which both were expected to sleep.

The largest of the boys got into bed with his underclothes on.

"Here," protested his companion, "ain't you going to put on your night shirt?"

"If I put on my nightshirt," the other replied, "there will not be room for both of us in this little bed."

A Ten-Minute Talk
BY
Byron H. Stauffer

"I Can Economize in Everything Else, But I Do Like a Little Tenderloin For My Lunch" Said the Lady With the Air of a Martyr--Savings That Were Never Duly and Religiously Converted Into Coupon Bearing Bonds.

"I can stint myself in almost everything else, but I must have cream on my porridge."

It seemed hardly worth while mentioning, for Mrs. Bunting's husband was getting three thousand per year. So what was seven cents a day for cream on the dear hearts porridge? But she said it with an air of a martyr, and as if she really believed that the little half-pint bottle was the solitary luxury of her poor life. All else was miserliness, you would suppose. The bread was unbuttered, the tea unsweetened. In the dreary desert of stern frugality and meagre fare was this one oasis of cream on the porridge. From the heroic little announcement the visitor might well imagine that of the three thousand dollars salary, twenty-one hundred and seventy-five of it was unrelentingly shovelled into the savings bank, to be duly and religiously converted into coupon-bearing bonds.

A Little Fib.

But as a matter of fact, the savings bank rarely sees any of the Buntings' money. The lady was unconsciously telling a little fib. She absolutely forgot that only twenty-four hours ago she had gravely informed her other neighbour: "I can economize in everything else, but I do like a little tenderloin steak for lunch." She was perfectly honest at the time, too, her stock remark about cream on the porridge never crossing her mind to trouble the surface of her consistency. Neither did it occur to her that when the parson and his wife complimented her on the tenderness of the fowl last Sunday, she solemnly announced: "I can starve all week, but I do like a fowl for Sunday dinner."

Many Exceptions.

Not for a moment would I object that the three thousand dollars could not carry the breakfast cream, the lunch tenderloin, and the Sunday chicken combined. But those three items are not the only exceptions to the rigid economy programme that the Buntings imagine they are carrying out. Fact is, that when the Jones' were over to play five hundred last week, and the new brass bedstead was very much admired by the visitors, my Lady Bunting apologetically remarked: "The best of it is, the Moorooster mattress that came with it, it cost a good deal more than I ever thought I'd pay for a mere mattress, but I told Charlie that I didn't care what I had on my back daytimes, if I could only have my back on a good mattress at night. We spend a third of our time in bed, you know."

And so the little items of exceptional expenses slink into our lives, never in companies, but one by one, until we are harbouring and feeding a whole regiment of the little rascals. Do not misunderstand; I am not rebuking, but merely commenting upon a universal situation in which society finds itself to-day, when so many luxuries are becoming necessities.

The Telephone.

There is the matter of the residence telephone. How wonderful it was to have the first crude instrument screwed up on your walls. But along came the desk 'phone, and though an extra charge was made for it in most cities we had to have it, for we estimated that the comfort of sitting down while talking to our neighbour was worth the investment. Then, after spending an evening with the Buntings, you wanted to call a taxicab to take you home. That expense, by the way, you and your wife justified by the fact that you had denied yourself an automobile and the three hundred dollars annual expense connected with that luxury. Certainly a little taxi bill of five dollars a month was justifiable and would leave you still winner by two hundred and forty dollars on automobile account. Well, you were just starting down the stairs towards your host's telephone, which you had noticed in the back hall, when Bunting said: "Use this extension 'phone right here in the den," and lo, you sank into the leather rocker and ordered your taxi without descending to the ground floor. That 'phone extension germ worked about a week in your brain before the fever caused the delirium during which you added sixteen dollars to your annual telephone bill. But you argued that it was a good investment; this running up and down stairs to answer 'phone calls might produce heart failure or a paralytic stroke. And incidentally, though unconsciously, the fact that your neighbours with less income had this extra convenience helped you in coming to a decision.

Fought the Auto Craze.

The Buntings fought the automobile craze tenaciously. A year ago, however, they suddenly succumbed. "We will save it all in street car fares," said my neighbour, buoyantly, when he informed me of his decision to buy an eight hundred dollar runabout. His wife added that she was going to forego the purchase of a contemplated set of furs, and would do her own work, in order to make up the extra outlay of the year. "And besides, instead of going on our vacation by train, we shall use the machine and save expense there." It sounded good, and it would have needed a Professor Jevons to prick a hole in the logic. But in November my neighbour confidentially told me—he whispered it so the women folks would not be disturbed in their conversation in the next room—that an auto is a rich man's luxury. The Sundays and holidays in the country eat up the gasoline, tyres are expensive, suppers at country hotels ditto, and they rob a fellow for emergency repairs. Just then his wife called to the maid to bring up the fur collar and muff which she had bought at a snap at the clearing sale. I would have been an eternal shame to miss such a bargain, even though she had not intended spending the money. As for the presence of the maid, she merely expected to keep her until the electric vacuum sweeper was installed, when she was quite sure that the housework would be so easy she could do it alone. And think of it, the new device displacing the old-fashioned, woman-killing carpet sweeper would cost only three-quarters of a cent an hour to run. The new electric iron would cost a half a cent per hour, and the electric toaster another half. The whole thing would add a mere bagatelle to the electric light bill.

"Selling Herself In."

It is these little bagatelles that bring up the cost of living. The Buntings put on a new front door lock last week. Mrs B. wanted brass and the thing cost fifteen dollars and fifty cents. And Mr. B. said: "Doesn't it beat all how much it costs just to bolt yourself in at night." And as he handed me a cut-glass tumbler full of water after I had finished it bit of Neapolitan ice-cream which I had eaten from a hand-painted saucer with a solid silver spoon, the Lady Bunting said: "I can stint myself in a good many things, but I do like a little ice-cream about bedtime."

OPEN WATER ALLOWS MUSKRAT TRAPPING UNTIL FROST COMES.

If Has Been Many Years, Trappers Say, Since Present Weather Conditions Existed.

For the first time in the memory of the oldest trappers muskrat trapping can this year be legally pursued.

By law muskrat trapping commences December the first but can only be done in the open winter around the rat houses and other seasons the rivers and lakes have been frozen over two or three weeks by the first of December and even then was no ice in the deeper channels still the marshes have invariably been frozen solid and it was therefore impossible to set traps or get near the houses in a canoe.

It is always illegal to spear the rats of the houses or to destroy the homes which is the only way it is possible for man to take them once the ice forms.

It is going to make it pretty hard for inspectors and dealers to distinguish between rats caught legally in December and those that poachers have taken during the fall, for all can be sold together without detection.

DEER BAY ALMOST EMPTIED OF WATER

Let Through Lovesick Lock in Order to Make Repairs.

A few days ago the water was all let off Deer Bay through Lovesick lock and dam in order to make repairs. The drop is only four feet and the area of the basin is small. The water is now so shallow that even small boats would have difficulty in getting about in Deer Bay.

Navigation on the Kawartha Lakes has been closed officially for some weeks, but steamers have been passing up and down doing late work.

Snow And Blizzards Promised Around The 13th Of December

Rev. Irl Hicks' Weather Predictions for the Month of December--What May Be Expected

A reactionary storm period will be central on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, with the disturbances probably extending over the 6th, the date on which the moon passes over the celestial equator at it apogee. Squalls of winter rain, wind, and thunder will be natural on and touching the 6th, followed by rising barometer, westerly gales, and cold, clearing weather.

A regular storm period extends from the 7th to the 13th, being at its centre on the 9th. Let it be remembered that this period is at the annual time of magnetic and electric excess, growing out of the inclination of the earth's magnetic pole to the sun's electrical equator. Auroral perturbations, earth-currents of natural electricity, through the earth and along all conducting substances, often interfering with telegraphic operations, reach a maximum activity from about the 5th to the 15th of December. Such disturbances will pass a crisis this month from the 10th to the 15th, notably on the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th. A marked earthquake period is also central on the 13th, involving the 10th to the 16th. About the 9th, the barometer, will show approaching storm conditions in the west, and these conditions will increase as they move eastward, breaking into active storms of wind, rain, and snow on the 16th, 11th, 12th, and 13th. These storms will culminate in a crisis of snow and blizzard within forty-eight hours of Saturday, the 13th. Prolonged boreal storms, with high and perilous gales, will be encountered on the Atlantic Ocean and coasts, throughout this part of the month.

A reactionary storm period falls centrally on the 15th and 16th. And the general disturbances of the preceding period will, in all probability, continue over into this period. The December solstice is at the crisis, with a Mercury period beginning at this time; hence prolonged inclement and storm weather may very reasonably be figured on. We would repeat the fact that disagreeable weather, with dangerous storms of wind, snow, and sleet, will baffle voyagers on the Atlantic Ocean at this time. Watch for reports from vessels landing at ports on either side of the ocean, telling of their battles with the elements. The "wireless" will also be heard from on sleet-laden, storm-driven ships. In the interest of weather science, while we "landlubbers" will not be in danger from these ocean troubles, let us make up our minds to watch the outcome at this time.

A regular storm period covers the 18th to the 24th, being central on the 20th. This period is at the central crisis of the winter solstice period. It is also at the centre of the Mercury equinoctial period. All we have said above of storms on sea and on land will apply with greater force at this period. Phenomenal flights of the barometer will likely appear early in this period, showing the presence of great cosmic perturbations, out of which will grow wide and forceful atmospheric convulsions. On and next to the 20th, 21st, and 22nd, a very low barometric area will develop storms of possibly rain and thunder. Will pass eastwardly over the country, but rain will turn into sleet, snow will follow sleet, and genuine blizzards will sweep out of the northwest and reach all northern to central parts of the country by the evening of the 23rd. The barometer will rise very rapidly to very high readings, immediately on the western sides of these storms, causing high north-westerly gales and change to very cold weather. This cold wave will reach far into the southern states and South American coasts, endangering tropical plants and fruits. With very low barometer in the south, and steep gradients reaching back to high barometer northward, there will be danger of frost and freezing all the way to the Gulf Coasts, and precautions should be taken accordingly.

A reactionary storm period will bring renewed storm conditions on the 26th, 27th, and 28th. The new moon on the 27th will excite higher temperature and tendency to low barometer, especially in the southern sections. Storms of rain, snow, and boreal winds will pass in regular order over the country, all followed by change to much colder from the northwest. Earthquakes 24th to 30th, central 27th.

It would seem needless to call attention to the fulfillment of our special warning of severe autumnal storms and weather, at the close of October, and the opening of November. In the closing paragraph of our October forecasts we gave a special warning to the public to harvest and house all perishable products, with all possible care and haste, to save them from destruction by freezing and frost at the close of October. On the days specified, unprecedented storms of snow, followed by killing frosts and freezing, swept the country from Canada to the southern States. Apples and late peaches, by the thousands of barrels, were caught on the trees and destroyed, as far south as Arkansas. Twenty-five per cent. of the northern Minnesota potato crop was ruined by the freezing in the ground, while authentic reports say that fifty million bushels of undug potatoes were ruined and lost in Canada. The records for low temperatures, for so early in the season, were broken in most parts of the country.

The regular and reactionary storm periods at the opening of November have brought us boreal storms almost without parallel for so early in the season. Sleet, snow, and destructive gales have swept over all the northern, central, and eastern states, destroying telegraph and telephone poles and wires, in some places causing a suspension of traffic by sleet and snow blockades. Many lives have been lost, and ships destroyed, in the tempestuous storms that swept over land and lake and sea.

While the general outlook for October would seem to be normal, the presence of a Venus disturbance, combined with those of Jupiter and Earth, make it entirely probable that some very severe autumnal storms and generally inclement ewather may prevail. This is especially true over the great northwestern states and over the great northern lakes. Navigators of our wide and stormy lakes, who do not take account of the fact that October often brings dangerous gales, with early sleet and cold, always pay the forfeit in exposure, suffering, loss of ships, cargoes and human lives. We advise, earnestly, that care and haste be exercised, in all northerly states, in the harvesting and housing of perishable products.

Surprising dashes of early winter, with boreal gales, sleet and snow, may very reasonably be anticipated over much of the country northward, as the western sides of storm areas push the tropical features of the storms out of the way to the eastward. An extremely cold wave will wind up this period, 9th to 12th, sending much cooler weather and frosty nights very far into the south. This is a time when we would warn every navigator and shipper on the northern lakes against danger. Watch storm warnings, keep your eye on your barometer, take no reckless risks.

BORROWER LIBERALLY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—It is understood that the Dominion Government of Canada has borrowed forty-five million dollars in London during nineteen thirteen and that Finance Minister White proposed to secure fifty millions more during 1914. New year's borrowings will likely cost at least five per cent.

Wants Pass or Money Back

Peterboro' Woman Enters Action at Osgoode Hall

Mrs. Jean Hamilton commenced action at Osgoode Hall yesterday to recover $245 from W. F. Hamilton, which she claims she loaned him. She also asks for $190, the value of a set of furs which it is claimed was converted by the defendant to his own use. The parties who reside at Peterborough, were concerned in an alimony case which was to have been tried in Peterborough some months ago, but was settled out of court.

CAPTAIN IS BLAMED FOR THE DISASTER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—Severe censure for the captain and recommendations for the adoption of a load line and safety appliances for vessels plying on the Great Lakes, are features of the report made to the government by the Dominion wreck commissioner, who has just concluded an inquiry into the wrecking of the Turret Chief. This is the first of a series of reports which Captain Lindsay will make on the lake disasters. The Turret left Fort William at 4 a.m. November 5th, and was wrecked off Copper Point. Captain Lindsay finds that the Turret Chief was unable to head up and that her peculiar construction was a contributing cause to the disaster.

He finds that Captain Thos. Paddington did not do all he might have done to save his ship. He did not make the proper allowance for leeway. He is also censured for errors in judgment and his ignorance of the essential duty of a master, that of the knowledge of the position of vessel at all times. The Turret Chief should not go out in such weather as prevailed when the vessel left port.

LANSBURY SAILS FOR U.S.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., Dec. 3.— George Lansbury, a former member of Parliament, who has been jailed for his suffragette activities and hunger strike and was released, sailed from Southampton to-day for the United States and Canada. He will probably address meetings in the Dominion. He will try to interest labour men in the industrial situation in the Old Country.

HALIBURTON MAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

By the explosion of a gun he was repairing James Peterson, a well-known blacksmith, and general repair man at Haliburton, had his mouth and lower part of his face shot off Friday morning about nine o'clock.

The gun was an old one and had been brought to the shop for repairs. It was necessary to unscrew the breech and Mr. Peterson, who did not know it was still loaded, put the rear end of the barrel into the fire to try if heat would make it come apart more easily. The muzzle, as he worked with it in the fire, was pointed directly at him, when suddenly it exploded and he received the full charge in the mouth. It was not known whether the shotgun contained a blank cartridge or shot, as the victim's face was so badly injured that although three doctors were in attendance very little could be determined, and it was found necessary to send him to Toronto for treatment He passed through to the Toronto General Hospital on this morning's train. Mr. Peterson is about seventy years of age.—Lindsay Post.

NEW NOSE AND MOUTH FOR THIS MAN IN HOSPITAL

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—Ioss Allen, a young Canadian, has entered St. Joseph's Hospital to get a new nose and a new mouth.

The whole front of his face, including nose and lips, were shorn away in a saw mill accident five years ago. The young man will undergo a remarkable series of skin grafting operations, whereby a new nose and two new lips will be built upon his face.

When he came to the hospital from his home in Whitby, Ont., his face was nothing but a mass of scarred flesh. In four months' time, if the operations are successful—and the physicians at St. Joseph's are confident that they will be—Allen will go forth with a face as normal and as regular as anybody's. There will be scars, of course, but his lips will be there and a straight nose.

The first steps taken by the doctors in charge wil lbe to build up the two lips. The flesh of his arm will be cut just the shape of the lower lip. One side wil remain attached to the arm. The flesh around the mouth will be cut away utnil fresh tissue is exposed. The arm will then be bound across the patients face and remain two weeks.

The arm will then be cut away from the patient's mouth, and the new lip trimmed up. Practically the same slow, careful operation will be gone through in building up the upper lip. When that is healed or perfectly, Allen will be given a rest until he feels strong enough for the final and most difficult of the series—putting on the new nose.

oT do this the man's chest will be laid open a piece of fresh cartilege cut away fromon e of his ribs, where it joins the breast bone. The flesh of the forehead will be opened down to the bone. And in this slit the nose cartilege will be placed, being pushed under the skin of the forehead bone. All the wounds will then be sewed up and left for seven weeks until the cartilege nose hardens into the bone there on the forehead and attaches to itself fresh skin.

The new bridge will then be brought down and placed in position on the man's face, just where the nose ought to be. The side flaps wil lbe shaped until the nose is normal and shapely.

The scarred skin will be cut away so that the new nose will grow on and then the whole face will be bandaged for several weeks.

RESENT INTERFERENCE OF U.S.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, Dec. 3.—The Mexican Congress this afternoon received a note from the Government of Columbia couched in the most positive language, hotly denouncing the United States for interferring with the Central American Republic. Consideration of the note was postponed by the Senate. The Mexican newspapers friendly to Huerta to-day print President Wilson's Congress message in big headlines, and indicate keen resentment at his prophecy that Huerta's dictatorship is nearing an end.

A MAGNIFICENT REWARD FOR HIS HONESTY

CALGARY, ALBERTA, Dec. 3. — The munificent sum of one dollar was the reward given a Calgary working man by a local woman for the return of jewels valued on her own estimate at $3,700. The working man picked the jewels up in a suit case which had fallen from a taxi cab and on returning them to the owner was rewarded with a dollar. The finder of the jewellery then sent the dollar to the Associated Charities, telling the story of the incident in a letter to that organization and in this way it was made public.

Paid 45c a Dozen and Eggs Were Rotten

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me a small space in your valuable paper. I am a young housekeeer and just learning the ways of Peterborough's honest merchants and local farmers. I visited your well-appointed market on Saturday morning. I was in a hurry, so did not go around to ascertain the price of eggs, but went to the first woman I saw had them for sale. I asked if they were new laid. I was assured they were. I then inquired the price. Forty-five cents was the answer. As they were forty the previous week, I thought they had risen five cents, but by your paper of Saturday night I see they were only thirty-five cents a dozen. But what surprised me more was when I broke an egg on Sunday. It was rotten, and another must have been several weeks old. What I want to ask is, cannot something be done to stop the sale of bad food? It certainly makes the cost of living very high when not only the price is run up, but you get bad stuff for your money. I have been done several times by the merchants in this town.

Yours, etc.,
HOUSEKEEPER.

SUCCESS OF FOUR CONTINENTS FOR US

"The Glad Eye," which had a run of one year and three months in London, Eng., has opened its Canadian tour, and was magnificently received in Montreal, where it was described by press and public alike as one of the best comedies and one of the best companies ever sent over from the other side. "The Glad Eye" is an adaptation of the French Farce by Armond and Nancey, and, in addition to being the biggest success of the past three years in England, it has a considerable run at the Nouveautes Theatre in Paris. It is also doing great business in Australia and South Africa. Mr. Louis Meyer, who produced it, and who owns the Strand and Garrick Theatres, London, has sent out an entirely British company for its presentation, and every article of the production is travelled complete.

The date at the Grand is Tuesday, Dec. 9th, and after one or two other cities, "The Glad Eye" goes direct to the Alexandra Theatre, Toronto.

TWO BROTHERS OF SANITARY INSPECTOR C.A.G. SPENCE BARELY ESCAPED MEXICAN BULLETS

Fell Into an Ambush Planned by the Rebels, But Were Eventually Released--Tell Tale of Danger and Real Unrest Even in Northern Mexico--Hand to Hand Battle Between Mr. Spence and a Dangerous Looking Mexican

The brothers, Spence, referred to in the appended article from the Montreal Daily Star, will be of local interest as the gentlemen in question are brothers of Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Sanitary Inspector of Peterborough:

"What the situation in Mexico is like is illustrated by what has recently befallen a well-known Anglo-Canadian Mining Engineer, Harold Spence, of Nova Scotia, who has just arrived at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, after escaping from a Mexican ambush with no worse results than a lacerated forearm.

Mr. Spence, with his brother, Eustace Spence, recently left Montreal to superintend arrangements with regard to a large consolidation of Mining properties in Arizona, involving a $5,000,000 deal, in which men in this City are heavily interested. Mr. Spence was invited by the Mexican General, Salaza, to visit him at Juarez, Salaza being once employed in Mr. Spence's mines. Ignoring advice tendered that the journey was one of some risk, the brothers left El Paso with a number of American miners and crossed the bridge over the Rio Grande river into Juarez, accompanied by an escort which General Salaza had sent to conduct them in safety. The visit over, the Spence brothers and their companions left with the escort to make the return journey at about 7.30 p.m., but they had not proceeded far when they fell into an mbush planned by rebels.

At the first shock Salaza's escort bolted, half going over to the rebels, believing that they had fallen into th hands of General Villa's army of 7,000 warriors, and the other half a hasty retreat, leaving Messrs. Spence and their American companions to get out as best they could. There was still a distance of 300 yards before reaching the bridge, and a fierce struggle took place in the moonlight.

Harld Spence, unarmed, got to grips with one of the Mexicans who, flourishing a knife, made a lunge with its ugly blade, but his wrist was caught by Mr. Spence. A moment later, the weapon dropped from the Mexican's hand and the latter himself fell before Eustace Spence, who, armed with a six-shooter, sprang to his brothers rescue. Harold Spence sustained only a superficial wound on the forearm, but Eustace Spence and others of the party got ugly flesh wounds.

Mr. Spence says that the mining region in Mexico is in a state of ferment, and nobody seems to know exactly what is going to happen. In the great mining properties even on the United States side of the line fast numbers of Mexican miners are employed and all of them carry arms Moreover, the Indian element adds to the anxiety and the uncertainty complicates matters.

Acquainted with rich mining regions for twenty years, Mr. Spence is familiar with the great romances of the mining fields. He has seen some companies and men sink fortunes in ill-starred poorly directed ventures and others like Ernest Craig, now a member of the British House of Commons, acquire vast fortunes in a short space of time. Ernest Craig, coming straight from the South African mines to the well-known Mogollons gold and silver properties in 1909, applied the cyanide process, extracting enormous wealth from mines, where his predecessors had failed. In a short time Craig was drawing from the mine $500,000 per annum and he sold out eighteen months ago at a huge price.

The consolidation of mining properties in which influential Montreal men are interested embraces about 2,000 acres in which are interested the Rothschilds of London and Paris, the presidents and general managers [illegible] and thirty companies of the United States Steel Corporation, and other important mining companies."

FRIEDHEIM AND CARUSO

Those in the audience at the Friedheim concert in Conservatory Hall last night, who had never heard great pianist, or had heard many so-called great pianists, never heard the piano at its best till they heard Arthur Friedheim. He is a pianist, not a poseur. Any attempt to analyse his wonderful performing, or critically examine his numbers would give no idea of the splendid artistic equipment he brings to the literal charming of his hearers. He is simple, unaffected and natural in bearing; he waves no leonine locks, affects no poses. His is pure piano playing. His tone is superbly grand and pure; his cantabile effects are the essence of exquisiteness; his technique is so practically perfect that improvement seems to be impossible and it is splendid medium for the expression of the soul of the music he performs. His forte passages are not mere noise but magnificent musical tone. In his wonderful tours de force, the musical resonance was never lost; and in his piano passages the most exquisite delicacy of sound maintained a purity and liquid sweetness of the most delicious character. It was worth a great deal to hear one of his crescendo or diminuendo roulades, fall to silence or rise to musical thunder with the smoothness and evenness of a string of perfect pearls. To all his technical equipment for heroic piano playing Friedheim adds the innate quality of ability to artistically extract the soul of the music performed. His programme of contrasting selections gave ample play to his versatility of genius of execution and interpretation. He had grouped the Tannhauser overture, by Liast, and Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata; and Mendelssohns Spring Song and Polonaise in A-flat by Chopin, Friedheim was heard with a crescendo of delight and enthusiasm—the longer he played the greater the enthusiasm. He was repeatedly recalled, and his repeat numbers were as delightful as his programme entries. If there are greater pianists than Friedheim, the audience last night is not anxious to hear them — to have marred the memory of a delightful and perfect artistic treat. The tenor, Agostino Caruso, gave three selections and sustained the family reputation—he is a cousin of the great Caruso. His first number was Puccini's "E lucevan le stelle," and as "the stars shone," the star shone too, in its production. He was very warmly recalled and sang in response, 'How So Fair' from Martha. His other numbers, "Vesti la Giubba," Leoncavallo, and Verdi's "Aida," were sung with equal art in equally magnificent voice, and style Mr. R. J. Devey very capably supplied the accompaniments to Caruso.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT FARMERS' INSTITUTE MEETINGS

Which Were Held in Lakefield Yesterday—Increase in Membership

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES

Splendid addresses given by practical men marked the third and fourth regular winter meetings of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute held yesterday afternoon and evening in the Lakefield Town Hall. The Ontario Department of Agriculture indeed favoured the local body for better speakers could not be collected together. Both meetings, which were presided over by the president, Mr. C. E. Moore, were attended by very large audiences and as the secretary, Mr. Wm. Collins remarked, the number who renewed their membership and the number who joined gave promise of better things.

The afternoon meeting was opened by the president, Mr. Moore, who in a few words explained the purpose of these meetings which was to acquaint the farmer with up-to-date methods and also for the answering, by men of authority, of all questions that yearly present themselves. After thanking the members for their large turnout, he called on Mr. J. N. Paget, of Canboro, the first speaker.

Mr. Paget remarked that he was not there to give them a lecture, and answer any question with which they are confronted. On the programme, the title of his speech was "Handling Finished Products Until It Reaches Consumer." He stated, however, that he wished to change that subject and bring before them the same question with which he dealt the day previous at Ennismore, that was the question of "Profit and Loss in Dairying." To illustrate his remarks, Mr. Paget had charts hung up before the audience on which statistics were placed to show in actual figures the results obtained by the methods he was agitating.

"Profit and Loss" is a question that is not only of interest to one class of farmers, but rather to everyone. Many men are losing money in dairying, and sometimes losing it when they think they are making something, this is attributed to the fact that farmers, not all farmers, but the average farmer does not understand his cows. Some farmers have cows giving an abundance of milk, even as much as 4,000 pounds per annum, and imagine that better results could be obtained by better feeding. That is where they make the mistake for it is not the feeding that regulates the flow but rather the capacity of the cow. Then, what is capacity? For this we must go outside our own Dominion.

To that little country of Denmark, which has been noted for dairying for many centuries, do we give the credit for the discovery and the development of the capacity of the cow. They had been dairying for centuries and this matter received their careful attention. They found that the average cow was not giving enough milk to pay for her keep, which is generally quoted at 3,000 pounds per year. They then set about to weed out, so as to speak, the poorly milking cows and to keep only the best class. Thus it was discovered that good breeding and that alone was responsible for a cow giving abundance of milk. A poorly milking cow can be fed on the very best of food and yet she cannot give the amount of milk expected because she has not the capacity. This is obtained by good breeding.

Hon. Sydney Fisher was visiting in Denmark some eight years ago, and he became well versed in this new idea. He introduced it into Canada and the first step taken was to take a census of the amount of milk given by the cows. The average was found to be some 3,000 pounds. About five years ago testing associations were formed and since then by the new method the average has increased to 6,000 pounds. Surely then the flow of milk depends not on the feeding, but rather on the capacity of a cow and since this is developed by good breeding, this should receive a respectable amount of the farmers' attention.

Business Principles.

The fundamental principle of the prosperity of the country is agriculture. It is the greatest industry in the world and one upon which all others depend. Every other industry depends on agriculture for success. Then why does not the men who are engaged in this great industry apply business principles to the conduct of their business? That question has never been answered, although year by year and mainly through the instrumentality of the Farmers' Institutes are farmers beginning to put a few more business principles into their work. The farmer has ceased to be a back number. Years ago he was accosted as a clod-hopper, hayseed, etc., but this has passed and the people of the world are seeing more plainly every day that the farmers are the men who are working as the greatest of all sciences. Since this is true, then the farmers must study and learn to understand the elements of the soil. The day when it was the strong man who made money on the farm has passed and it has given place to the day when it is the man who is educated scientifically along the lines of farming, is the successful one.

It was by putting business principles into their work that the people of Denmark were able to increase their average of milk received from 3,000 to 14,000 and 15,000 per cow inside of twenty-five years. Therefore, why not begin this work in this section? The first thing to do is to find out just what your cows are doing. Are your cows producing 6,000 pounds of milk per annum, and thereby equalling Canada's average? If you are getting only 5,000 pounds, how much are you making out of them in money? This is what the trouble is, there isn't enough figuring done. That is where the business principles come in. Mr. Paget cited one instance where a farmer had twenty-six cows. When a testing association was formed in his district and he gave it a trial, he found that he had only six cows among his herd that were actually paying for their feed. He weeded his cows out and at the end of three years he had sixteen cows giving 10,000 pounds more milk than the twenty-six he formerly had. This was done by intelligent advocating of business principles

MR. J. J. HARTLEY MAY BE A CANDIDATE

Has Not Decided Yet in Answer to Request of Many Friends—Will Have Statement in a Few Days

In another column there is reported the possibility of Ald. Duncan and ex-Ald. Hicks becoming candidates for the Mayoralty, and since that information was received it was learned that Mr. J. J. Hartley was regarded as having a good chance for the chair if he would permit his name to go before the people.

The Examiner held a brief telephone conversation with Mr. Hartley at 3 o'clock. He said that a large number of citizens had requested him to consider a candidature for the mayoralty, but he had not been down town for several days and he had not come to any decision. He remarked that he would have a definite statement in a few days.

CAR KILLED A DOG.

Shortly after 1 o'clock to-day an Albert Street woman, while sweeping the front door step, shook the broom at a little brown dog of some unknown breed. It was in a playful mood, barking and pretending to worry the broom. Just then a street car passed and the dog romped noisily out at it. It ran full tilt toward the front of the car and was caught by the fender. Before the motorman could stop the dog rolled off and the front wheel passed over his head. The pup apparently realized its danger while on the fender and yelped until the wheels crushed out its life. Just another nameless dog lost, but its passing from playfulness to a few spasmodic kicks in two or three seconds left a little impress although the victim was only a dog.

STREET RUMOURS BRINGING OUT CANDIDATES

A week ago there was a dearth of mayoralty candidates and although it was rumoured that the curtain would be lifted the process was delayed somewhat. However, since the stage was bared the "loft" has teemed candidates, and every second man you meet springs something new.

"I see there's a dark horse in the field," says your friend with the habit of getting in on the ground floor, or thereabouts.

"I thought they were going to give it to Mayor Bradburn," you say.

"Oh, no, this Gillespie-Buller so is scheduled as a knock-out and will go to the limit, but I understand that there is another man that might make things interesting."

"Well, you might as well come across with the news; no harm will be done by telling me."

"Well, J. J. Turner, Jr., will be trotted out to the scratch and, I believe he will make it an interesting go."

Hours later you meet Mr. Turner who looks as normal as usual, and Bourassa and Bishop Fallon Cross Swords. — At London Henri Bourassa and Bishop Fallon debated Imperial Federation and the destiny of Canada. In the circle is shown the French-Canadian orator and beside him the Roman Catholic prelate who declared strongly for an Empire Federation.

"I see you're going to run for Mayor," you tell him.

"Quit your joking," he says and does not grip your hand and ask you how are things.

proceeds to tell you that some one has been stringing you.

The next man you meet is interested in labour matters, and he hints at another third candidate.

"We're holding a meeting on Wednesday night and the question will likely come up there."

Not long afterwards you learn that there is a likelihood of another alderman being included in the nominations.

"You'll find that George Duncan will be announced before long," says a citizen, and when you meet one of the aldermen who has not been included as a possibility he suggests that the whole Council be put for the occupancy of the red, plush-covered chair that Mayor Bradburn is vacating. Something new every day, is the present situation, and there is still a month to go.

"I SHOULD THINK" PEOPLE

By RUTH CAMERON

Wisdom is supposed to be a difficult thing to acquire and we are often told that there is no royal road, no wonderful short cut to the possession of it; and yet there is a certain class of people in the world who seem to have become wonderfully wise without any appreciable effort.

In some strange, mysterious way such people seem to know far more about your affairs and the best way to manage them, no matter how complicated they may seem to you, than you do yourself.

I call these wonderfully gifted folk the "I should think" people because that phrase is so often on their lips.

You happen to mention to one of this class that you are going to buy a dark blue suit, and they at once point out the folly of your choice. "You are so dark that you ought to always wear light things for contrast," they explain kindly. "I should think you'd get a light grey suit. That's much better for summer too." Of course they do not know, as you do, that your wardrobe is over-stocked with light clothes already, that you really need something dark for office wear, and that you wanted a blue suit to go with your white flannel trousers. And yet they know better than you what you ought to get. Isn't it wonderful?

Such people, even when they have not a chick or a child, always know far more about bringing up other people's children than their parents. When they visit a friend who has children, the air fairly rings with "I should think." "I should think you'd stick to it when you told Harry to finish cutting the grass to-day." "I shouldn't think you'd let Gertrude wear that nice new dress to the picnic." "I should think you'd shut Frank in the closet; it's the best way to cure temper," and so forth and so on. And when you think that they don't know that Harry had an invitation to the Wild West Show and you consider that more of an education than grass-cutting; that you promised Gertrude when the dress was made that she should wear it to that particular picnic, and that Frank had hysterics the only time you ever shut him in a closet; it makes their ability to pass judgment upon these matters seem almost uncanny, doesn't it?

These are but one or two instances of the ways of the "I should think" folks, but I am sure you can supply plenty more from your own experience. For, miraculously wise though they are, they are surprisingly common, and most of us know at least one or two members of the class.

Of course you are very grateful to them whenever they take enough interest in your affairs to show you how to manage them properly. You're not? How extraordinary! Truly it's no use to expect gratitude for anything nowadays.

Ruth Cameron

VARIOUS PERSONALITIES

Sometimes the sea of faces that turns to you with an approaching crowd is a kind of insistent, overwhelming sight that haunts you with irresistible force. They are such hopeful, trusting, happy, human things — the faces of any or every street, the people who rush into railway stations, and about hotel corridors and through parks and drives and theatres and cafes.

Each represents a world of its own, a world of dreams and loves and hates and [illegible] and in whatever guise or with whatever pretence the owners of these faces affect in their more self-conscious period they are wonderfully transparent in those moments of self-revelation and self-forgetfulness, those chance, passing moments of the passing crowd.

The very strangeness of the personalities makes them more distinguishable. There are none of the illusions of intimacy, none of the deceptions of the familiar, but instead the childish tangibility of the universal type, the roughly suggestive exterior, the atom of the mob. And something about this common, crude similarity, this eager alikeness, grips you with a vague sense of the tragic. You long to break through the immobility of the faces, to discover one that is friendly and recognizable and cognizant of yourself.

It is the call of humanity to a personal identification with other atoms of humanity. It is a response to the immutable unity of existence, this strange, sad, almost fearsome apprehension of the seething oneness of the crowd. Sometimes it may be restfully amusing, sometimes grotesquely humorous, but unless you are abnormally indifferent to the heart of the world there will be moments when you thrill of the spectacle of the detached replica of yourself and long for an individualization that will identify your own being with that of the passing multitude.

And it is this sense, after all, that makes us capable of human ties. It is the ability for response to others of our kind, the cry within us that answers the like cry without, which gives meaning to existence and sanity to personal interest or effort or desire.

Shaughnessy Compares American Rugby With The Canadian Article

Coach Frank Shaughnessy's impressions of the Army-Navy game as compared with Canadian football have been published. He says the punting of the Americans is not equal to that of the average Canadian team, but their goal-kicking, which is practiced to a greater extent, is more finished. The goal from placement, by the way, was one of the bright spots in the exhibition at Rosedale from a Canadian point of view; in fact, that was the one thing that appealed to local fans.

"Shag" advocates the dropping of the side scrimmagers and the flying wing in the Canadian game, thereby reducing the teams to 11 men. He also suggests a modification of the present penalty system under which a team loses possession of the ball for every violation of the rules, whether intentional or otherwise.

"Shag" says that the American game is harder on the players owing to the interference rule and the cutting down of players on the run.

The reduction of the number of players is an old story in Canadian football. The O.R.F.U. some years ago eliminated the side scrimmagers and used the snap-kick, playing with 12 men a side, but went back to the old three-man scrimmage as a compromise to Montreal and the East so as to obtain uniformity in the rules. It stands to reason that where there are fewer players on the field, the defence is weakened that much, and there is more opportunity to pull off plays both through the line and around the end. Whatever is done, however, should have the sanction of all the unions playing the game in Canada; otherwise there will be nothing but confusion in the public mind.

RECORD TRANSFER FEE COST SHEFFEELD $10,000

George Utley, captain of the Barnsley team, who plays left half-back, has been transferred to Sheffield United, his transfer fee being $10,000. Utley is a native of Elsecar, near Barnsley, and he has played for Barnsley for five years. Tall and broadly built, he has taken part in international trial matches, and last season represented England against Ireland. Three or four weeks ago he had his benefit, which yielded nearly $2,000.

A Record Transfer.

Utley's transfer fee is an official record. The word "official" is emphasized because some highly priced transfer fees have not been officially published, and it is common rumour that Utley is not the first professional with regard to whom $10,000 or upwards has been paid. So far as my search among the records reveals the sum of $9,750 paid by the Newcastle United for Hibbert of Bury in 1911 had never been exceeded till now. Jocky Simpson of Falkirk cost Blackburn Rovers $9,000, and it has often been asserted that Shea, of West Ham, depleted the coffers of the same club to the extent of $10,000, although it lacks official confirmation.

Passing of Breslin.

Players who a decade ago were famous in Scottish football are dropping off one by one. The latest to join the great majority is Barney Breslin of the Edinburgh Hibernians. He was a great favourite in his time, and it is sad to know that he has been cut off in the prime of life. Barney was one of the brightest and cleverest half-backs that ever wore a Hibernian jersey. Everything he did was marked by a degree of intelligence and skill that is only found in the football genius. He was one of the Hibs team which won both the Scottish Cup and League championship. He was capped against Wales in 1897, and against the English League in 1898 and 1899. Breslin's first club was Carfin Shamrock, and I well remember how he and his brother, "The Dodger," used to delight the men and women who frequented the Double Dandy Row.

A New Trotter.

Bolton Wanderers have made arrangements with Blackpool for the transfer of Thomas Williamson Heslop, a left half-back, who has seen Second League service with Blackpool. Heslop prefers the left-half position, and is 23 years of age. A native of Middlesbrough, he went to South Shore from Darlington in the close season of 1912.

ARMY DEFEATS NAVY 22 TO 9

NEW YORK, DEC. 1.—The Army football team furnished a spectacular and confusing finale to the eastern football season of 1913 by defeating the Navy eleven at the Polo Grounds Saturday by a score of 22 to 9.

Completely outplayed during the opening period of the game, the cadets swept the sailors off their feet in the second half of the contest by a combination of brilliant individual and open team play that quickly rolled up an overwhelming lead.

From the standpoint of the spectator, however, the game and its setting lost nothing of its thrilling grip and interest as a result, and the 42,000 persons present gaped and cheered by turns at the kaleidoscopic scenes depicted on the muddy turf at their feet. Brown in kicking three placement goals in three tries down from an average distance of 24 2-3 yards, gained a place in the 1913 football hall of fame, as did Pritchard and Merrill for their operation of the forward pass.

President Wilson and his party followed precedent in dividing their time at the game between the contenders. The President was a few minutes late and the game did not start till he had taken his seat in an upper grandstand box almost directly over the grandstand. When the first half ended he was escorted to the middle of the field by Secretary of War Garrison. Secretary Daniels of the navy met the President in mid field, and with Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, escorted him to the navy side. There he sat with Secretary Daniels till the end of the game.

NEW AMENDMENT TO THE O. H. A. CONSTITUTION

The amendments to be considered at the annual convention of the O. H.A. at the Temple Building, Toronto, next Saturday morning, were received by the clubs to-day, having been mailed yesterday.

Designation of Players.

An Auxiliary Jumper.

Mr. Sutherland also wants a gong sounded by the timekeepers to inform the referee of any variance in the time. He also suggests the following amendment: "All clubs must have an auxiliary jumper directly opposite in colour to their regular club sweaters. The home club to wear same when referee finds regular club sweaters conflicting."

For Extra-Time Game.

All O.H.A. games must be played to a finish, but when the teams are tie at full time Secretary Hewitt proposes a definite rule, so that there will be 10 minutes' rest at full time, then 5 minutes play each way without any rest, and if similar periods are necessary, a five minutes' rest after each five minutes of play.

Mr. Hewitt also suggests that the offside line of the goalkeeper be extended to 10 feet instead of 3, as is the rule at present. This applies only to shots that hit the goalkeeer and bound off, not those played with his stick.

Amendment to Residence Rule.

A very important amendment is that proposed by H. E. Baxter of Drumbo, regarding the residence rule of the association. At present the rule is that a player residing in a "rural district" must play with the O. H. A. club in the nearest town to his residence. The Drumbo club wishes to give "a village or police village" the same privilege as a "rural district," so that players in those places would be eligible to play in their nearest O.H.A. town. The great drawback to this arrangement would be the incentive to consolidation of teams in adjoining villages to the detriment of other clubs and the hockey of the district.

It is proposed to increase the honorarium of the secretary to $760 per annum.

Junior League Will Be Formed

The junior hockey teams of Peterborough are reminded of the meeting to be held in the Boston Cafe at 7 o'clock to-morrow night for the purpose of organizing a Junior City League. All teams intending to enter should be represented by two delegates at to-morrow's meeting, when officers will be elected and other arrangements made for the season.

PRUNING FIRE BLIGHT ---A WARNING

That article, "Fall Work in the Orchard," in a recent issue of Farm and Dairy, deals with a very timely topic. There is one point at issue, however, in which I would like to sound a note of warning—the cutting out of "fire blight."

This bacterial disease becomes distributed quite readily from tree to tree, and from one part of the tree to another by means of the pruning tools used. For example, if one is doing general pruning and cutting out fire blight at the same time, then the healthy wood that is cut is liable to be infected by bacteria carried on the tools from an infected brand. I have seen whole trees badly infected with the disease, which, when closely examined, proved to have been infected almost entirely where pruning cuts had been made.

We thus see the need of thorough disinfection of the pruning tools after each cut has been made into a diseased branch. For this purpose the pruner should carry with him a pail of some disinfectant, into which the tools can be dipped. This entails but little extra labor. Without such proper disinfection as much damage may be done by spreading the disease than if it had been allowed to run its course.

Probably the best disinfectant is a solution of corrosive sublimate, one part in one thousand parts of water. A five per cent solution of carbolic acid is also good. —Farm and Dairy.

SARNIA HAS GREAT HOPES OF GOOD TEAM

SARNIA, Dec. 1.—(Special.)—A big squad of hockey players, both intermediate and junior, are working out each night at St. Andrew's Arena. The prospects for the best team in Sarnia's history are bright.

Arrangements are being made with the Kingston Frontenacs for a game on their way through to Detroit in the Christmas holidays. Games are also being arranged with the Cleveland and Detroit teams in those cities.

With the stars of last year's team and several new men to pick from a powerful defence is possible, and a forward line that for speed and aggressiveness will probably open the eyes of the teams it meets this year.

Hockey Classes Meet To-night

The two O.H.A. Hockey teams will work out to-night at 7 o'clock at Brock St. Rink, and a full turnout of both seniors and juniors is requested. With no change in the present mild weather promised, it looks as if there will be not much chance for ice practice before the opening of the season, and it is therefore important that the players should get into shape as soon as possible.

WILLIE'S BAD BREAK.

Here is one that was told at a recent banquet by Governor Francis E. McGovern, of Wisconsin, as an illustration that you can't be too careful in looking to see who is around when talking over confidential matters.

Some time since a Wisconsin man decided to invited a business acquaintance to dinner and in consulting mother about it he gave her some of the prospective guests's private history.

Came the evening of the feed and from the moment that the guest took his place at the table little Willie began to watch him.

"Mr. Smith," finally remarked the absorbed youngster, "won't you please drink your coffee? I am awfully anxious to see you do it."

"Why, yes," good-naturedly smiled the guest, "if you wish me to. Why are you so anxious to see me drink it?"

"Because," answered little Willie to the great horror of his parents, "papa says you drink like a fish."

PROFITABLE DISPOSITION OF WHEY

In disposing of the by-product of the cheese factory whey, two things must be considered. First, what is the most practical way; and second, how can it be disposed of so that it will return the most to the farmer.

In sections where the farmers keep large herds and a large amount of milk is secured in a small radius, I believe the ideal way is to pasteurize the whey at the factory and return to the patrons in their cans, as the farmer then secures a sweet, clean food, with the aid of which he can raise and carry more stock than he could otherwise be able to handle, which is a direct benefit to the factory. But in Peterboro county we are not able to do this, as all the milk is drawn in loads, and as most of the herds are small, it is necessary to cover a large territory to secure sufficient milk to profitably operate a factory.

Under these conditions it is not practical to try to get the whey back to the farmers, so it must be disposed of in some other way. Some factories have adopted the plan of selling the whey to three or four of the farmers living near the factory, and generally this works out very nicely, but in my own factory we prefer to auction the whey every year to the highest bidder, who buys and places a short distance from the factory enough pigs to take the whey. We received one dollar and one cent ($1.01) per standard (3,000 lbs. milk) for our whey this year.

We do not skim the whey, as we prefer to receive the high price for it rather than receive a low price and place inferior butter on the market. This year we sold 110 standards of whey, last year 141.—Farm and Dairy.

WEDDING BELLS

WHITTINGTON—BARNARD.

A very bright and pretty wedding was solemnized at "Hillcrest," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Barnard, Ballieboro, when their only daughter Edith, was united in marriage to Mr. James E. Whittington of South Monaghan, Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Fraserville, officiating.

At 1.30 o'clock the bride entered the beautifully decorated drawing room, with her father, who in a few well chosen words, presented his daughter for marriage.

The nuptial music was rendered by Miss Albie Emberson, a neice of the groom, while little Cathaline Bernard, a niece of the bride, acted as flower girl.

The bride was artistically dressed in cream batiste trimmed with pearls and wore a bridal veil festooned with lilies of the valley, and bore on her arm a large sheaf of white chrysanthemums.

The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace set in pearls, to the flower girl a locket set in pearls, to the organist a crescent of pearls.

The popularity of the bride was attested by the numerous useful and costly gifts she received, among them being the china tea set, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Denne of Peterborough, and a handsome clock, the gift of the gentlemen clerks of the Denne firm.

After the bridal party and guests, about fifty in number, had partaken of the wedding repast, the happy couple left amid showers of best wishes for Toronto and Willoughby, Ohio. On their return they will reside in South Monaghan and will be at home after January 1st, 1912.

DAWSON—ARMSTRONG.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride, 778 George Street, this afternoon, at 1.30 o'clock, when Miss Edna F. Armstrong, daughter of City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank H. Dawson, son of the late Adam Dawson, both of Peterborough.

The ceremony took place in the presence of about forty immediate relatives, before a beautiful bank of palms, and was performed by the Rev. R. G. Peever. The bride and groom were unattended.

The bride entered the room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Mendelssohns wedding march. She wore a beautiful gown of white chiffon lace, trimmed with satin, and carried a magnificent bouquet of roses and lilly of the valley. The wedding march was played by Miss K. Warner, of Cobourg.

After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The house was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums and palms.

On their return to the City Mr. and Mrs. Dawson will reside at 457 Downey Street.

Among the numerous presents received by the bride were a handsome mahogany clock from the men of th City buildings and heads of departments; an artistic reading lamp from the young ladies in the City offices, and a serviceable and beautiful coffee percolator from Mayor Readburn and the City Aldermen.

A fumed oak rocker from the office staff of the De Laval Company was also among the presents.

The Epworth League of George Street Church also presented the bride with a handsome silver tray.

The Rev. Mr. Grobb of All Saints' Church assisted in the marriage ceremony.

OBITUARY

MADELINE GRAHAM.

Madeline Graham, six months' old infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Graham, 92 McDonnel Street, passed away this morning.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. R. G. Peever will officiate.

MRS. ROBERT ROBERTSON.

Mrs. George Sloan, Peterborough, has received word of the death in Didsbury, Alta., of her nephew, Mr. Robert Robertson, son of Mr. Chas. Robertson, formerly of Peterborough. The deceased was twenty-nine years of age and had been living in the West for the past eight years. He was brought up in Peterborough and was a student at the public schools and Collegiate Institute, here. The family formerly resided on Stewart Street, near the corner of Rink street and the deceased was very well known in the City. He is survived by his parents, one brother, Fred Robertson, and his wife.

The funeral took place at Didsbury. Death was due to an attack of typhoid fever.

CLOSING LAW NOT IN FORCE.

A pretty little girl, in common with many others, finds theological things bewildering. When any fresh difficulties present themselves in the course of the Scripture lesson at school she is accustomed to turn to a sympathetic aunt for enlightenment. "Auntie," she observed one evening "when God made everything, didn't he work on Sunday?"

"No, dear. When He created heaven and earth in six days, He rested on the seventh day."

"Well, but Auntie, didn't he stay at 1 o'clock on Saturday?"

"Don't be silly, Dolly," interposed her brother, condescendingly with all the superiority of eight years. "That act wasn't passed then."

SLOW WORK.

It was on an East Texas train. The little coffee pot of an engine, having wheezed laboriously over serpentine rails, jolted to a restful stop at no place in particular. Time passed tediously. Some of the passengers stalked nervously up and down the aisles, while others drew their hats down over their eyes and tried to forget it. When a half hour had elapsed the conductor came through.

"Say, friend," said a querulous-voiced old man, "as near as you can, tell what's holdin' up?"

"We're taking on water," was the explanation.

"Well, why don't you git another teaspoon? That un seems to leak something dreadful!"

BANKER IS KILLED

BANDIT MAKES HIS ESCAPE

PLUM COULEE, Man., Dec. 4.—H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal here, was shot dead at noon yesterday in an attempt to intercept a masked bandit who got away with packages of money, estimated at from $5,000 to $10,000. He was shot down in the lane in the rear of the bank, where he had followed the robber.

In his hurry the robber dropped one of the packages of money, which has since been returned to the bank.

The bandit, whose whole appearance and demeanor showed him to be a man of desperate character, first held up the proprietor of a local garage and forced him, at the point of a gun, to hand over an automobile. He then proceeded direct to the bank, where a large shipment of money had been sent from Winnipeg for grain buying purposes. What happened inside is only surmised. How the bank manager reached the lane at the back of the bank is a mystery, as the back door was found locked.

The bandit is reported to have headed south at a high rate of speed. The car has been recovered, and it is, therefore, concluded that the robber is hiding in the bluffs nearby.

Arnold's body was found by the junior bank clerk on his return from lunch. He had been shot through the head, and a doctor who made an examination stated that he must have died instantly. From the position of the body there can be little doubt but that the bandit turned and fired when he saw his pursuer.

It is likely that Arnold threw up his hands when covered in the bank and was obliged to submit to seeing the money taken from the safe, which was open for business.

Water Powers Reserved.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—At the suggestion of the superintendent of water powers, the Minister of the Interior has placed under reservation all vacant Dominion land that may be valuable for the development of water power. One of these includes Vermilion Falls, on the Peace river, and there are similar reservations in the rivers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

PASSES SECOND READING.

New Zealand's Home Navy Bill Makes Good Progress.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The New Zealand naval defence bill passed its second reading in the Dominion Parliament yesterday by 31 to 21 votes.

Col. Allen, in moving, said that when he left the Dominion he supposed submarines and destroyers would be obtained according to the agreement, but the Admiralty declared that such vessels were unsuitable to New Zealand waters. He respectfully begged to disagree.

Pacific payment of a subsidy, he said, without any chance of control or right of discussion, had no educational value. Self-respect forbade definite delegation of naval defence. The clause giving the Admiralty disposition of vessels in time of war was an intimation to their Australian friends that New Zealand regarded unity of imperial control as essential.

Sir Joseph Ward quoted three successive First Lords of the Admiralty as approving a single imperial navy. Why, he asked, had the agreement of 1909 been broken if the Government merely intended a scheme of training? Why were 24 of 26 clauses of the Australian act copied? The present policy would be appropriate if they had a population of 30,000,000 instead.

The Panama Canal, he continued, would soon open the Pacific to the great navies of the world and make all that Canada and Australasia could do ridiculous. If the Minister had not talked of New Zealand navy, the Admiralty would have adhered to the 1909 agreement. What would be the use of a Bristol cruiser or training ship if the British navy were defeated? Better pay a fixed sum for protection by the greatest fleet the world ever saw or was likely to see.

WANT TARIFF REDUCED.

Farmers Will Lay Demands Before Premier on Dec. 11.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—The Agricultural Council of Canada, which consists of the Grange of Ontario, the Grain Growers' Association of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and the United Farmers of Alberta, will send a delegation to Ottawa on Dec. 16 to meet Mr. Borden. They are coming to discuss certain matters with the Government, principally the question of the tariff.

It is understood that they will ask the Government to put wheat on the free list and thereby secure free entry of wheat into the U. S., under the countervailing clause of the new U. S. tariff; that there be at least a small increase in the British preference, and that agricultural implements be made duty free.

REFUSED "TAINTED GOODS."

Engineer Dismissed and Britain Has Another Big Strike.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The Great Western Railway announced yesterday that it would accept freight for South Wales only subject to the sender's risk. This action has been taken because of the dislocation of traffic due to a strike which has developed, with amazing suddenness. It originated through the dismissal of an engine driver, who refused to handle "tainted" goods from Dublin. The company declines to accede to the demands of the men that he be reinstated. In spite of a manifesto issued by the railway union's executive, declaring that the strike was not authorized, and that no strike pay would be allowed, the movement is spreading and threats are made of a general tie-up of the Great Western system.

At meetings at Swansea and other railway centres in South Wales yesterday the men decided to lay down their tools immediately. Two big Cambrian collieries are idle because the miners have refused to travel or work in trains driven by "black legs."

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

MASTER OF NORTH

General Villa is Marching South Towards Capital

HUERTA IS STILL DEFIANT

JUAREZ, Dec. 4.—A new era began in northern Mexico yesterday. It marked the peaceful occupation by the rebels of territory abandoned by Huerta's federal troops. With 2,000 rebels, Gen. Francisco Villa, en route from Juarez to the evacuated city of Chihuahua, passed through Ahumada, 35 miles south of the border, and camped at Montezuma, 30 miles further south. Five thousand more rebels will join him on the way, and with a combined force of 7,000 men he will enter the state capital, there to establish what will be the temporary military headquarters of the Constitutionalist party.

The departure of the rebel forces from Juarez, with their equipment, was made on four trains, a garrison of 1,700 soldiers having been left behind to guard the border town. As far as Ahumada, Villa has restored the telegraph. The railroad runs to Montezuma, where it is interrupted by burned bridges. It is to be reconstructed within a few days.

Whether Gen. Carranza, the recognized head of the revolution, also will go to Chihuahua, seemed to be in doubt, although Villa said he expected Carranza's forces to cross from Sonora to concentrate the men for operations further so th.

When the rebels enter Chihuahua with the tattered Mexican flags which they are carrying as symbolical of their demands for a restoration of constitutional government they will have Zacatecas as the nearest federal stronghold on the south. It is toward that city that Villa insists he will march, and it is possible that he may enter it without striking a blow.

Still Unbeaten, Says Huerta.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 4.—The enunciation of Washington's policy appears not to alarm President Huerta especially since he long ago abandoned hope of anything but opposition from the United States. He said yesterday:

"I have no intention of yielding. Should this fighting in Mexico continue for years, I shall continue to do my part in it if I am still alive."

Gen. Huerta declared that the country was self-supporting and the forced loans, if made necessary, would enable him to resist indefinitely. So long as he was able to obtain American oil he did not regard the shutting off of native oil from the railways as vital.

OF EASTER ISLAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—The missing schooner Alvarado, which cleared from the Columbia river on April 1 for Antofagasta, Chile, was abandoned at sea June 13 and the crew of eleven made their way to Easter Island, 2,300 miles off Chile. This was the gist of a wireless message from the steamer Mosana received here yesterday. A rescue party will be sent out.

Easter Island is a peak of rock belonging to Chile. It is the easternmost of the Polynesian group, far from trade routes, with an area of about fifty miles, and scantily inhabited. Some of the castaways decided to risk another voyage in open boats. Leaving behind his two mates, the ship's cook and five sailors, N. Benson, the captain, and three volunteers again put out and after sailing for twenty-eight days reached Papeete, in the Society Islands, on Nov. 5.

St. John To Defend Potatoes.

ST. JOHN, N.B. Dec. 4.—The St. John Board of Trade is arranging to send a representative to a meeting to be held in Washington on Dec. 18 to discuss a demand made in the United States that an embargo be placed on Canadian potatoes because of alleged powdery scab. St. John will protest because New Brunswick sends large quantities of potatoes to the States.

PREMIERSHIP VACANT.

French Statesmen Are Confronted by a Difficult Task.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—President Poincare has not yet succeeded in finding a successor for M. Barthou, whose Cabinet resigned Tuesday as the result of the defeat of the Government in the Chamber of Deputies. The President was busy all day conferring with the Speakers of the Senate and Chamber and a number of other political leaders, among them Georges Cochery and M. Moulens, president and reporter respectively of the budget committee of the chamber.

All agree that whoever takes power will be confronted by an extraordinarily difficult task and some of the deputies maintain that the only satisfactory settlement lies in the immediate dissolution of Parliament.

Canada Outpoints Big Neighbour at Live Stock Show

GREAT DAY FOR HORSES

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Canada won again yesterday. After capturing the World's Grand Championship steer prize Tuesday it was expected that the Dominion would submit to a relapse yesterday and give the Stars and Stripes a chance at the International Live Stock Show, but such was not the case.

It was announced by the horse show judges in the Arena that Canadian exhibitors had captured four firsts in the Clydesdale classes to the Americans' three. Up to late in the afternoon the race between the two countries had been close. Hopes of rooters of the States, however, were downed when it was announced that Colony Lady Begg, owned by the Colony Farm, Coquitlam, B.C., had taken the blues in her class, making the score four to three for the Canadians.

Of the Canadian winners for the day, British Columbia carried off two firsts, one second, one fourth, and one sixth; Saskatchewan, one first, two seconds, one third and one fifth; and Ontario, one first and two thirds.

Stallions, three and under four—First, Lord Ullin, Graham Bros., Ontario; third, Gold Nugget, Graham Bros., Ontario.

Stallions, two years and under three—Second, Fyvie Emperor, owned by Robert Sinton, Regina, Sask.; third, Gallant Buchlyvie, owned by W. H. Bruce, Arcola, Sask.

Brood mares, aged—Second, Peggie Pride, owned by Colony Farm, B.C.; fourth, Opal, owned by Colony Farm.

J. & D. J. Campbell of Woodville, Ont., for the fourth year in succession, won the Grand Championship for Shropshire Grade wether.

Glencarnock Victor H., grand champion of the fourteenth annual International Exposition, passed a busy day holding a reception to expert admirers. J. D. McGregor, Brandon, Man., the champion's owner, announced that the great bull will begin an "all start tour" after the close of the Exposition. The start will be made at the Manitoba Agricultural College at Winnipeg.

Canadian sheep exhibitors have things all their own way in the fat classes. In Lincolns, H. M. Lee of Highgate, Ont., has won three firsts and a championship, also third and fourth. J. D. Brien of Ridgetown and John Kelley of Shakespeare each have seconds. In Cotswolds, J. D. Brien of Ridgetown has one first and two seconds and the champion wether; B. Brien & Sons, Ridgetown, have two firsts and one second. H. D. Park of Burford is also in the money.

John Kelley, Shakespeare, has a third, firsts and the championship in fat Leicesters. A. & W. Whitlaw, Guelph, are among the winners. In breeding Cotswolds, H. D. Park, Burford, Ont., wins three firsts and the champion ram; B. Brien & Sons win one second and two thirds.

BIGGEST IN WORLD.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—The largest single insurance deal in the world ever consummated is at present being put through by a Canadian concern. The policy is for upwards of $100,000,000. The property being insured is valued at between $112,000,000 and $120,000,000 and belongs to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. Five big insurance syndicates, among them the largest company of the kind in the British Empire, are interested in the deal.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said yesterday that the deal would probably be completed by to-day.

New Government Steamer.

CORNWALL, Dec. 4.—The Dominion Government steamer Scout is likely operating its last season on the upper St. Lawrence. It is expected that the new steel steamer that is to replace her will be ready for commission next season. The Poison Iron Works of Toronto has been awarded the contract to build the substitute, which will be one of the most modern vessels of that class.

Nearly a Centenarian.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—The death took place yesterday morning of Sr. Arthur Fisher, father of Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Dr. Fisher was 98 years old and was born in Montreal, which city he had seen grow from a population of 16,000 to 600,000.

Boycott Shows Little Effect.

BERLIN, Ont., Dec. 4.—The chief topic of discussion among the citizens is the milk question. The dealers are still charging eight cents per quart and will do so for some time yet; although they have lost a few customers since the City Council offered the suggestion that the consumers stop using milk until such time as the price falls to seven cents. The quantity of milk consumed daily amounts to 900 gallons. There are eighteen vendors.

Want Bill Postponed.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Great Britain has made pressing representations at Washington as the result of activities of the Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom to secure the postponement of the passage of the Seamen's Bill until after the conclusion of the international conference on safety at sea. Failing a postponement of the measure modification of the provisions of the bill will be urged by the British Government.

The Skin Troubles of Childhood

School Records Show Much Time Lost From Eczema.

Chafing and skin irritation, whether from changing temperature, rough winds, strong soap or the action of the clothing, naturally develop into eczema, spread over the body and defy ordinary treatments.

Most doctors do not give much attention to skin diseases, and, consequently, it is necessary for parents to select some treatment which has proven a cure for such ailments. If records of cures count for anything, then you can turn to Dr. Chase's Ointment with fullest assurance that in this you will have the means of controlling itching skin diseases.

By affording prompt relief from the terrible itching, Dr. Chase's Ointment puts an end to suffering, and removes the cause of scratching. As the fires of eczema die away the ointment sets up the process of healing, and brings about thorough and lasting cure. As a treatment for the skin troubles of children nothing has ever proved so satisfactory as Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

XXI.

A Shrewd Conjecture.

The test of which I speak was as follows:

I would advertise for a person dressed as I believed Mrs. Van Burnam to have been when she left the scene of crime. If I received news of such a person, I might safely consider my theory established.

I accordingly wrote the following advertisement:

"Information wanted of a woman who applied for lodgings on the morning of the eighteenth inst., dressed in a brown silk skirt and a black and white plaid blouse of fashionable cut. She was without a hat, or if a person so dressed wore a hat, then it was bought early in the morning at some store, in which case let shoppers take notice. The person answering this description is eagrly sought for by her relatives, and to any one giving positive information of the same, a liberal reward will be paid. Please address, T. W. Alvord, —— Liberty Street."

I purposely did not mention her personal appearance for fear of attracting the attention of the police.

This done, I wrote the following letter:

"Dear Miss Ferguson,—One clever woman recognizes another. I am clever and am not ashamed to own it. You are clever and should not be ashamed to be told so. I was a witness at the inquest in which you so notably distinguished yourself, and I said then, 'There is a woman after my own heart!' But a truce to compliments! What I want and ask of you to procure for me is a photograph of Mrs. Van Burnam. I am a friend of the family and consider them to be in more trouble than they deserve. If I had her picture I would show it to the Misses Van Burnam, who feel great remorse at their treatment of her, and who want to see how she looked. Cannot you find one in their rooms? The one in Mr. Howard's room here has been confiscated by the police.

"Hoping that you will feel disposed to oblige me in this—and I assure you that my motives in making this request are most excellent—I remain,

"Cordially yours,
"Amlia Butterworth.

"P. S.—Address me, if you please, at 564 —— Avenue. Care of J. H. Denham."

This was my grocer, with whom I left word the next morning to deliver this package in the next bushel of potatoes he sent me.

My smart little maid, Lena, carried these two communications to the east side, where she posted the letter herself and entrusted the advertisement to a lover of hers who carried it to the Herald office. While she was gone I tried to rest by exercising my mind in other directions. But I could not. I kept going over Howard's testimony in the light of my own theory and remarking how the difficulty he experienced in maintaining the position he had taken, forced him into inconsistencies and farfetched explantions. With his wife for a companion at the Hotel D——, his conduct both there and on the road to his father's house was that of a much weaker man than his own words and appearance led one to believe; but if, on the contrary, he had with him a woman with whom he was about to elope (and what did the packing up of all his effects mean, if not that?), all the precautions they took seemed reasonable.

Later, my mind fixed itself on one point. If it was his wife who was with him, as he said, then the bundle they dropped at the old woman's feet contained the much-talked-of plaid silk. If it was not, then it was a gown of some different material. Now, could this bundle be found? If it could, then why had not Mr. Gryce produced it? The sight of Mrs. Van Burnam's plaid silk spread out on the Coroner's table would have had a great effect in clinching the suspicion against her husband. But no plaid silk had been found (because it was not dropped in the bundle, but worn away on the murderess' back), and no old woman. I thought I knew the reason of this, too. There was no old woman to be found, and the bundle they carried had been got rid of some other way. What way? I would take a walk down that same block and see, and I would take it at the midnight hour, too, for only so could I judge of the possibilities there offered for concealing or destroying such an article.

Having made this decision, I cast about to see how I could carry it into effect. I am not a coward, but I have a respectability to maintain, and what errand could Miss Butterworth be supposed to have in the streets at twelve o'clock at night? Fortunately, I remembered that my cook had complained of toothache when I gave her my orders for breakfast and going down at once into the kitchen, where she sat with her cheek propped up in her hand waiting for Lena, I said with an asperity which admitted of no reply:

"You have a dreadful tooth, Sarah, and you must have something done for it at once. When Lena comes home, send her to me. I am going to the drug-store for some drops and I want Lena to accompany me."

She looked astonished, of course, but I would not let her answer me. "Don't speak a word," I cried, "it will only make your toothache worse, and don't look as if some bobgoblin had jumped up on the kitchen table. I guess I know my duty, and just what kind of a breakfast I will have in the morning, if you sit up all night groaning with the toothache." And I was out of the room before she had more than begun to say that it was not so bad, and that I need not trouble, and all that, which was true enough, no doubt, but not what I wanted to hear at that moment.

When Lena came in, I saw by the brightness of her face that she had accomplished her double errand. I therefore signified to her that I was satisfied, and asked if she was too tired to go out again, saying quite peremptorily that Sarah was ill, and that I was going to the drug-store for some medicine, and did not wish to go alone.

Lena's round-eyed wonder was amusing; but she is very discreet, as I have said before, and she ventured nothing say a meek "It's very late, Miss Butterworth," which was an unnecessary remark, as she soon saw.

I do not like to obtrude my aristocratic tendencies too much into this narrative, but when I found myself in the streets alone with Lena, I could not help feeling some secret qualms lest my conduct savoured of impropriety. But the thought that I was working in the cause of truth and justice came to sustain me, and before I had gone two blocks, I felt as much at home under the midnight skies as if I were walking home from Church on a Sunday afternoon.

There is a certain drug store on Third Avenue where I like to deal, and towards this I ostensibly directed my steps. But I took pains to go by the way of Lexington Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street, and upon reaching the block where this mysterious couple were seen, gave all my attention to the possible hiding-places it offered.

Lena, who had followed me like my shadow, and who was evidently too dumfounded at my freak to speak, drew up to my side as we were half-way down it and seized me tremblingly by the arm.

"Two men are coming," said she.

"I am not afraid of men," was my sharp rejoinder. But I told a most abominable lie; for I am afraid of them in such places and under such circumstances, though not under ordinary conditions, and never where the tongue is likely to be the only weapon employed.

The couple who were approaching us now seemed to be in a merry mood. But when they saw us keep to our own side of the way, they stopped their chaffing and allowed us to go by, with just a mocking word or two.

"Sarah ought to be very much obliged to you" wispered Lena.

At the corner of Third Avenue I paused. I had seen nothing so far but bare stoops and dark area-ways. Nothing to suggest a place for the disposal of such cumbersome articles as these persons had made way with. Had the avenue anything better to offer? I stopped under the gas-lamp at the corner to consider, notwithstanding Lena's gentle pull towards the drug store. Looking to left and right and over the muddy crossings, I sought for inspiration. An almost obstinate belief in my own theory led me to insist in my own mind that they had encountered no old woman, and consequently had not dropped their bundles in the open street. I even entered into an argument about it, standing there with the cable cars whistling by me and Lena tugging away at my arm. "If" said I to myself, "the woman with him had been his wife and the whole thing nothing more than a foolish escapade, they might have done this; but she was not his wife, and the game they were playing was serious, if they did laugh over it, and so their disposal of these tell-tale articles would be serious and such as would protect their secret. Where, then, could they have thrust them?"

My eyes, as I muttered this, were on the one shop in my line of vision that was still open and lighted. It was the den of a Chinese laundryman, and through the windows in front I could see him still at work, ironing.

"Ah!" thought I, and made such a start across the street that Lena gasped in dismay and almost fell to the ground in her frightened attempt to follow me.

"Not that way!" she called. "Miss Butterworth, you are going wrong."

But I kept right on and only stopped when I reached the laundry.

"I have an errand here" I explained. "Wait in the doorway, Lena, and don't act as if you thought me crazy, for I was never saner in my life."

"I don't think this reassured her much, lunatics not being supposed to be very good judges of their own mental condition, but she was so accustomed to obey that she drew back as I opened the door before me and entered. The surprise on the face of the poor Chinaman when he turned and saw before him a lady of years and no ordinary appearance, daunted me for an instant. But another look only showed me that his very surprise was inoffensive, and gathering courage from the unexpectedness of my own position, I inquired with all the politeness I could show one of his abominable nationality:

"Didn't a gentleman and a heavily-veiled lady leave a package with you a few days ago at about the same hour of night as this?"

"Some ladee clo' washee? Yes, ma'am. No done. She tellee me no callee for one week."

"Then that's all right; the lady has died very suddenly and the gentleman gone away; you will have to keep the clothes a long time."

"Me wantee money, no wantee clo'!"

"I'll pay you for them; I don't care about them being ironed."

This was a poser! But as I did not want the clothes so much as a look at them. I soon got the better of his difficulty.

"I don't want them to-night," said I. "I only wanted to make sure you had them. What night were these people here?"

"Tuesday night, velly late; nicee man, nicee ladee. She wantee talk. Nicee man he pullee she; I no hear if muchee stasch. All washee, see!" he went on, dragging a basket out of the corner, "him no ilon."

I was in such a quiver; so struck with amasement at my own perspicacity in surmising that here was a place where a bundle of underclothing could be lost indefinitely, that I just stared while he turned over the clothes in the basket. For by means of the quality of the articles he was preparing to show me, the question which had been agitating me for hours could be definitely decided. If they proved to be fine and of foreign manufacture, then Howard's story was true and all my fine-spun theories must fall to the ground. But if, on the contrary, they were such as are usually worn by American women, then my own idea as to the identity of the woman who left them here was established, and I could safely consider her as the victim and Louise Van Burnam as the murderess, unless further facts came to prove that he was the guilty one, after all.

The sight of Lena's eyes staring at me with great anxiety through the panes of the door distracted my attention for a moment, and when I looked again he was holding up two or three garments before me. The articles thus revealed told their story in a moment. They were far from fine, and had even less embroidery on them than I expected.

"Are there any marks on them?" I asked.

He showed me two letters stamped in indelible ink on the band of a skirt. I did not have my glasses with me, but the ink was black, and I read O. R. "The minx's initials," thought I.

When I left the place my complacency was such that Lena did not know what to make of me. She has since informed me that I looked as if I wanted to shout Hurrah! but I cannot believe I so far forgot myself as that. But pleased as I was, I had only discovered how one bundle had been disposed of. The dress and outside fixings still had to be accounted for, and I was the woman to do it.

We had mechanically moved in the direction of the drug stores and were near the curb-stone when I reached this point in my meditations. It had rained a little while before, and a small stream was running down the gutter and emptying itself into the sewer opening. The sight of it sharpened my wits.

If I wanted to get rid of anything of a damaging character I would drop it at the mouth of one of these holes and gently thrust it into the sewer with my foot, thought I. And never doubting that I had found an explanation of the disappearance of the second bundle, I walked on, deciding that if I had the police at my command I would have the sewer searched at those four corners.

We rode home after visiting the drug store. I was not going to subject Lena or myself to another midnight walk through Twenty-seventh Street.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $5 and Fully Guaranteed.

Sixteen ounces of cough syrup — as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Secret of Good Digestion

In perfect health, with regular and healthful action of the liver and kidneys, you need not know there is such a thing as digestion or indigestion. Unfortunately, however, modern life is artificial, and not many people avoid suffering more or less from troubles of this nature.

The great secret lies in keeping the liver and kidneys in health and vigour, for then the food is passed quickly along the alimentary canal, the nutritive portions being assimilated in the blood stream and the poisoned waste materials are passed out of the body.

When the liver and kidneys get wrong you will obtain relief most promptly and effectively by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If chronic indigestion is to be cured it must be by enlivening the action of these filtering and excretory organs. To persons who have thought only of the stomach as being the offending organ this may seem strange, but any competent physician will tell you this is correct.

IF THEY WERE WITH US NOW.

Though in his day great Homer won a crown
For drama in which demi-gods competed,
The managers to-day on him would frown,
And Helen, far too chaste, would be deleted.

J. Caesar in his time was quite a gink
At scrapping, writing, orating, and bossing;
But would he last ten minutes, do you think,
Whitehoping or bestselling or wardjossing.

Diogenes, who lanterned forth of old
An honest man to find for an example,
If here to-day with searchlight would be told
HE could not find so queer a human sample.

If Ovid and his fair flames were alive,
Complaints of their amours he'd not be jotting.
Each night, indeed, have lovers four or five;
He'd worry most about their turkey trotting.

And yet if Noah, with a weather hunch,
Should come again, another ark erecting,
He'd raise another laugh and leave a bunch
Who'd swim about, a better boat expecting.

WOULD COUGH SO HARD

Would Turn Black In The Face.

A cough cold is one of the most dangerous kind. It leaves the throat or lungs, and sometimes both, affected if not taken care of immediately.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree.

Mrs. C. J. Selig, Dartmouth, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a dreadful, hard cough. At night time he would cough so hard he would turn black in the face, and at times he would cough nearly an hour before he would stop. I tried different cough syrups, but they did him no good. The little fellow was wasting away, as he could not eat or sleep, the cough troubled him so. I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and it did him so much good I got another. Now I am only too glad to be able to write this to tell how thankful I am, and to tell every mother to use nothing else."

Be sure you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. See the trade mark; the three pine trees.

To While Away an Idle Moment

Marvellous Acrobatic and Up-Side-Down Performances of a Himalayan Goat

THE tahr is the sheep of the Himalayan mountains. [illegible] In size the animal is [illegible] resembling the mountain sheep of Mr. Roosevelt's native state. Dr. Hornaday, curator of reptiles of the park, and Mr. John Quinn, and a tree climbing feat, recently performed, which has won over even the most sceptical of the park officials to a recognition of the animal's undoubted genius.

Even the casual observer [illegible] guest the tahr for a genius without knowing its history, for the goat rejoices in a luxuriant suit of hair reminiscent of the sweeping glory of even the most temperamental of poets and musicians. One other characteristic common to the more gifted members of mankind is always to be noted in the goat's performances. He cannot adhere to any set programme. Only when the inspiration seizes him can he do anything at all. A [illegible] performing goat, producing this wonders at the behest of the outer world, he will never be, and the admiration or scorn of man moves him not at all. While this feature of his personality is at times annoying, it supplies the element of unexpectedness which, after all, adds so much to the interest of his career.

The Himalayan tahr arrived in the park more than ten years ago, but at first he seemed to be not at all unusual and lived a quiet family life in the Moose range. A few leaps and bounds there were to show that he came from the great mountains, and those who were fortunate enough to see him at times when his budding genius first began to assert itself were easily able to understand why it is that sportsmen in the Himalayas, who have been able to bring down a number of the goat's family feel that they have achieved a victory, and regard the goat's horns, not as beautiful perhaps as others of their collection, as a souvenir of their prowess not surpassed by skin or head from the most difficult hunting ground in the world. The goat haunts the highest peaks of the Himalayas and therefore again sportsmen find it exceedingly difficult to keep up with him.

It was quite by accident that Mr. Hornaday and Mr. Quinn discovered the remarkable qualities of the goat, and although this happened some years ago the rest of the world, after its usual fashion [illegible] was satisfied, received the accounts of the goat's performances rather coldly until recent occurrences forced everybody to admit their existence.

It was when John Quinn and I were trying to move the goat from the Moose range to Mountain Sheep Hill that the goat [illegible] his performances," said Mr. Ditmars, who recently gave to the visitor an account of the Zoological Park career of the tahr.

"We were about to release the goat when he leaped up on the wall of his house and ran across the ceiling and down on the opposite side. When this performance was reported to Dr. Hornaday he was not quite willing to accept the report. In order to show him how true it was we put some hay on the floor of the house and then again tried to catch the tahr. The animal naturally got the hay on his feet and again leaped up the side wall, ran over and jumped across the ceiling and down the opposite side of the room. He did this twelve times, but when we tried [illegible] to show Mr. Hornaday he refused [illegible] the hay now and refused to perform at all. For this reason we were unable to convince Mr. Hornaday that the goat had actually gone [illegible] the ceiling.

"The room in which the goat made the remarkable feat is about nine feet high and fourteen feet square. The walls and ceiling afforded [illegible] even spaces for admitting persons in which the goat could insert its feet. The principle by which the goat was able to act is what appeared to be in opposition to the laws of gravity is that of the coup-de-trap. The momentum attained through the great swift leaps of the goat enabled it around the top of the room with its feet upward. It rebounded when its feet touched the ceiling and bounded back [illegible] so that they again touched it. You could hear the feet strike the ceiling four or five times as the body of the goat bounded across the room. Of course, it was all done in a second.

"It is not unusual for the members of the cat family to make somewhat similar leaps in their cages when the rebound of the body from the side of the cage sends it up against the roof, where it strikes and also rebounds. But for a goat to make a trick and in a room [illegible] was unusual.

"After we got the tahr into his new home he seemed willing to show all the world what he could do in jumping for a while. He first jumped over the nine foot fence, and after we had put an addition to it the tahr jumped on his house and then jumped over the fence, addition and all. We then moved his house to the middle of the yard so that it couldn't be used as a halfway jump to the fence. Since then he has not found a way of jumping out of the corral.

"Interest in the goat had quieted down for a while when Mr. Hornaday had a high tree box built about an oak tree in the tahr's corral. One day, to the surprise of every one, the tahr was discovered perched on the top of the tree box, which was six feet high. The slats of which the box was made, which were in the make-up of the tree box and [illegible] from two to three feet in diameter was the tahr's [illegible] across the top were handholding places. It was after the tahr had formed the habit of leaping to the top of the tree box [illegible] that Mr. Hornaday decided to have an imitation series of peaks built for the tahr, graduated posts with platforms of board connecting them were put up in the corral, so that the goat could hop from one post to another and finally leap into the tree. It seemed to be just the thing to please the goat, but to our disappointment he refused to go up the posts at all and ignored the arrangement absolutely. No one ever saw him jump on the posts even once.

"It was just here that the tahr showed his temperament. He refused to have anything to do with the artificial mountain purposely provided for his pleasure, but when on the very day that the posts were taken down, because it was decided that they were too high and so far part, the tahr was discovered up in the tree itself, quite far out on one of the limbs. How he got there nobody knows. He was seen up there in the morning and he did not come down until night after every one had gone. It was evident that he had no intention of making a public performance of it. The limb on which the goat was seen was at least thirty feet from the ground, but by going to the other side of the tree, which extended over a rock, he would not have so high a leap to get into the tree. Since then the series of graduated posts have been erected, the posts closer together and the platforms which connect them not so long, but the goat still refuses to have anything to do with the artificial mountains, although the leaps that would be required to climb it would be much less than those he has been known to make many times. It is evident that he scorns man made substitutes for his native crags and peaks. Also it is evident that the goat is not to be coerced into any sort of performance, but acts only on the inspiration of the moment."

"Like all true geniuses," said the reporter.

"Exactly," agreed Mr. Ditmars, "and they're right, too."

Schoolboy Builds Motor Chair.

AN automobile invalid's chair built by a sixteen-year-old schoolboy from discarded dishpans, brass fenders, window sash chains, gas pipe, part of an old bedstead and various other worn-out articles has been attracting the attention of passersby in Pittsburg of late, says the Scientific American.

The miniature car was built by Charles Grunder in an amateur machine shop located in his mother's kitchen. A broken-down invalid's chair, a smashed motorcycle and household junk from the attic were the materials from which he built the chair for his crippled father.

To start with, the boy repaired the framework of the hand driven chair. A heavier axle was turned upon his lathe. The rear wheels of the hand driven chair were too light to carry the heavy machinery of the proposed new chair, while the wheels of the smashed motor cycle were too large to fit into the frame of the old chair. This difficulty held up the work for several days.

At last the boy rebuilt the motorcycle wheels, cutting them from thirty to twenty-eight inches. Pneumatic motorcycle tires, the only new things about the whole chair, were then purchased. A gasoline tank was made from a discarded dishpan and incased in a box made from the thin cherry panelling of the headboard of an old bed. Stopcocks from an old gas stove were used to regulate the flow of gasoline. A drive belt being found inadequate, the boy substituted a chain drive.

A hand brake on the left side of the motor chair, made from the iron hoop of an old washtub, works on a drum cut upon a casting. The same lever that throws on the clutch applies the brake. The iron of the front wheel is wrapped with a brass [illegible] chain to prevent skidding, the rear wheels being equipped with anti-skid tires. A dog chain was at first used on the front wheel, but it was unsatisfactory.

The lever controlling the supply of gas feeding into the carburetor is made from an old file. The cut-off valve is made from a one inch gas pipe "T," a brass curtain rod and a clock spring. The steering lever is made from a length of gas pipe and the end of a mop handle. The 3½ horse power motor is air cooled, the fan being made from an old brass feeder

Single Women in Business.

Why do single women conduct business more successfully than married women?

And, again, why do married women do better in business than widows?

I cannot definitely prove to you that single women do excel married ones in business or that those who have a husband are better business managers than widows. But I have the solemn word—and was ever the word of an English official report anything but solemnity to the 'nth degree?—that such is the fact.

Of 800 women traders who failed in business in London during the last year 156 were widows, 151 married and 81 single. But the average amount of liabilities of the three classes varied greatly. With fewer than twice as many failures the widows had more than three times the debts of the single women. The married women's obligations were two and a half times the ones of those who never knew a husband.—Philadelphia Ledger.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Flammerton Record

It Overtopped That of Silas Jones

By MARGARET LEE

"Mr. Jones," said Lord Flammerton, "I have called to ask you to do me the honor to give me in marriage your daughter, Miss Sophia."

Mr. Silas Jones, who was traveling abroad with his family and sojourning at a London hotel, looked as solemn as if his lordship had asked for his daughter to cut off her head. He slowly turned his eyes up at the ceiling, then lowered them to the floor, while his face indicated that he was suffering from a pain in his stomach. Presently, after clearing his throat, he said:

"I assure you, my lord, that I am sensible of the honor you, a peer of the realm of England, do me in asking for the hand of my daughter. But there is a reason why it would be better that you should withdraw your request. While it is true that I can make settlements upon Sophia that would enable her to restore Flammerton castle, she would bring a bar sinister to your family arms. It is not proper that so noble a lineage as yours should be marred by a marriage with one who is not only a commoner, but who has descended from a criminal."

"Yes, my lord, a criminal," continued the other. "Roger Jones, my great-grandfather, in 1708 was convicted of selling rum to the American Indians, was tarred and feathered, ridden on a rail and hanged to an apple tree."

Mr. Jones groaned not only in spirit, but audibly. Lord Flammerton sat watching him with a curious expression on his face. His lordship did not seem so appalled at receiving this information as might have been supposed. Instead of taking up his hat and bidding Mr. Jones good morning, he sat quietly where he was, fumbling with his watch chain, waiting for the paroxysm to subside; then he said:

"Permit me to commend you, Mr. Jones, for your candid confession. I will be as candid as you. I am aware that you Americans have an idea that our British aristocracy was reared from seed sent down from heaven. We who know the history of our own families from the beginning do not fool ourselves, though we permit others to fool themselves as to our honorable ancestry.

"The earliest of my ancestors mentioned in 'Burke's Peerage' was Hugh Hunker, a sort of Robin Hood without Robin's better traits, for Hugh robbed anybody, whether a bishop, a miser or a poor peasant. However, he was not considered very bad until he entered a house where a corpse was lying surrounded by burning candles and stole them for the tallow there was in them to grease his boots.

"Nevertheless Hugh Hunker was a good deal of a swell for those times and is recorded as being quite a lady killer. At any rate, he had a son and a grandson, who at a later period, when England had become more civilized, were prominent at court. One of the family is supposed to have been the man whom the Duke of Gloster employed to murder the young princes in the Tower. I have, however, looked into the matter and have concluded that he was merely an assistant at the murder."

The earl paused in the recital, and Mr. Jones gave vent to an expression of disappointment.

"The Hunkers," the former presently continued, "became noble in the time of Henry VIII. I have unearthed a bit of secret history from the records stored in the Tower of London which reveals the fact that when King Henry VIII. beheaded Catharine Howard the state executioner had just died, and no one could be found to do the job until Henry offered Andrew Hunker a baronetcy if he would wield the ax over the unfortunate queen. Hunker consented and was made Baron Worrington. Then when Henry made a wholesale confiscation of the church property he created the baron a sort of sheriff to eject the clergy and seize their belongings. The commission that my noble ancestor received for this amounted to a large fortune and entitled him to take higher rank, which was conferred upon him in the title I bear.

"I have been some time getting to the story of my immediate progenitors, but a candid statement of the case has rendered necessary the details I have given.

"Andrew Hunker made ducks and drakes with his fortune, and his grandson, Andrew, earl of Flammerton, was forced to take to the road to get a living. Don't understand that there was an especial taste in the family for robbery. The calling was at that time one that invited the more adventurous young men. The earl was one day riding alone near the estates of a country gentleman named Forbes when he met a young lady, Elizabeth Forbes, who was out hunting with her falcon. This young robber, who was more on the Robin Hood order, became at once enamored of the young lady, but unfortunately for the success of his suit he had recently plundered her home, and the father had sworn to bring him to the gallows.

"On the occasion of this first meeting between the highwayman earl and Elizabeth Forbes he took a gold chain from about her neck, saying at the same time:

"'Tell your father, who has sworn to hang me, that I will return this chain to you in his own home.'

"With that he bent low before the lady, took the tips of her fingers in his and kissed her hand. Now, this young fellow was a handsome rascal, and no calling was more popular with the ladies of that day than the profession of highwayman. Mistress Forbes straightway fell in love with the man who had robbed her and trembled at his boast that he would return her chain to her under her father's nose. Being discreet, she returned to her home and said nothing about the meeting.

"On the coming of age of Robert Forbes, Elizabeth's brother, the old gentleman gave a ball, the guests to be dressed in fantastic costumes. There was a man present who had adopted the garb of a headsman. There is no dress better fitted to show off a handsome figure than that of this official of that period. The man, instead of carrying a wooden ax, held in his hands a veritable steel weapon such as was used in lopping off human heads.

"The moment Elizabeth Forbes saw this person she recognized in his figure—his face was masked—the robber earl. He advanced toward her and, throwing a gold chain about her neck, asked her to dance. She accepted the invitation, trembling for him, for though he was armed with an ax, many of the men guests present were swords or were provided with other weapons suited to the characters they represented.

"The presence of this fantastic personage was noted by the guests, and it was not long before the host's attention was called to him. The robber perceived that he would soon be obliged to give an account of himself and in a few quick sentences begged Elizabeth to fly with him. She consented on condition that he would go at once, thinking to get him out of danger, and when they saw her father advancing to ask who this unknown guest might be she slipped her arm in his, and the two were passing out when Forbes, followed by others of his guests, pushed after them. The earl turned and, raising his ax, brought it down on the host's head, splitting his skull. Several men who wore swords drew them, and there was a combat, in which the earl put them out of the fight. Then, drawing Elizabeth with him, he disappeared in the darkness.

"There is no record of a marriage between Andrew Hunker, the robber earl, and Elizabeth Forbes, but since she was a commoner and he a noble it is quite possible that she did not expect marriage. However, she had a son—my grandfather—who was declared legitimate by King Charles II. and given his father's title and property, the latter consisting of plunder acquired on the road. It is quite possible that the king's favor was gained from the fact that Elizabeth Forbes became one of his favorites, though she is not given in the list by historians.

"You see, my dear Mr. Jones, that beside the record of my ancestors for criminality that of your great-grandfather, who sold rum to the Indians, was tarred and feathered and hanged, sinks into insignificance.

"To return to my proposition, I possess valuable estates, but I need ready cash. Your cash made by the sale of the Acme salve has been more honorably acquired than my estates, which were partly taken from the church and partly from unfortunate travelers, many of whom were doubtless murdered. Nevertheless the two together will enable me and my wife to maintain a high social position, and fortunately I am not judged by the deeds of my ancestors. On the contrary, I live in the glamour of what is supposed to be their greatness."

Mr. Jones' views having been altered by the man who would become his son-in-law, he consented, and the earl and Sophia became engaged. A few months later the London society papers printed a notice of the wedding which occurred in a fashionable church between Andrew Charles Dudley Fortescue Blake Hunter, Baron Warrington, Earl of Flammerton, of Flammerton castle, etc., and Sophia Ann Jones, daughter of a prominent American citizen. There was no mention of how the title had been obtained or of the Acme salve.

FRY'S Cocoa—A Gracious Stimulant

Not only is FRY'S a rich and delicious food beverage, but it possesses to the full that mysterious, elusive but very desirable "spirit of cocoa" which scientists call "theobromine," a quickener of the brain and nervous force, with no unpleasant after-effects. Exquisite in aroma, of sure purity, easy of digestion—FRY'S is the result of nearly two centuries' experience in high-grade cocoa making.

Died on the Way.

A certain Kaffir, having been down to the coast for the first time in his life, returned to his home with wonderful tales about the sea. He explained to his tribe that the waters of the sea were alive—they moved—jumped—splashed.

"I have brought some back in a bottle to show you," he said.

A whole crowd of Kaffirs congregated to see this wonder. However, when the water was poured into a bowl the traveler was distressed to find that it did not move at all. After examining it carefully he turned to the crowd with a sorrowful face. "It has died during the journey," he said.—Christian Observer.

HAIR COMING OUT? GOT DANDRUFF OR DOES SCALP ITCH?—25 CENT DANDERINE

Save Your Hair! Make It Soft, Fluffy, Lustrous and Beautiful

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment, that's all.

Music of the Wheat.

Wheat has a music of its own; it is different from what you hear in a barley field or oat patch. The ears are heavier and the rustling is more sonorous and more deeply musical than the swishing of the pendulous oats or bearded barley. There are often breezy days just as the wheat is ripening when you can linger and listen to the rustling music; now and then it sounds like the susurrus of the sea, and you are reminded of waves by seeing the cloud shadows flying over the wheat with a motion not altogether unlike the rising and falling of the sea. Just as painters have drawn frequent inspiration from the wheat fields, so doubt musicians have been inspired by their sweet, subtle sounds. As the breeze passes over the field, how the wheat rustles, how it sways and bends, almost sometimes bowing to the ground, but recovering itself easily in due course.—London Globe.

Keeping In the Heat.

You speak incorrectly when you say that your fur coat is warm. There is no heat in the fur coat at all, but it keeps you warm because it prevents the heat of your body from passing off into the cold air. The Bible says that God "giveth snow like wool," because snow is a poor conductor of heat, just like wool, and protects the seeds of fruits and vegetables in the soil in winter just as wool protects your bodily heat. A saucepan which has been used will bring the water to a boil more quickly than a new one because the bottom being covered with soot it absorbs heat more quickly than a highly polished new surface. The cook polishes the lids of kettles because, when bright, they do not draw the heat and in this way keep the contents warm longer than if dull.—New York World.

MILITANTS AT PLYMOUTH.

They Promise Riots If Mrs. Pankhurst Is Arrested.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, at a meeting of militants at Cannington last night, held to inaugurate the establishment of the suffrage army there, said: "If we have courage to stand together none will be able to stand against us. We will make ourselves a terror to Westminster; we will make the Cabinet Ministers shake in their shoes until they are afraid for their very lives."

Miss Patterson, who presided, said that if the police arrested Mrs. Pankhurst at Plymouth she would be sorry for Plymouth. The suffragettes there would show no respect for property, she declared.

Will Meet Mrs. Pankhurst.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 4.—It was announced last last night that the suffragettes had obtained permission to send a deputation aboard a tender to meet Mrs. Pankhurst on the Majestic. The suffragettes held a demonstration here last night, but there were no disorders.

Ready With Seven Warrants.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 4. — Bailiff Dyckman has in his possession seven warrants, which will be executed the moment the Brantford Street Railway Co. attempts to remove any of its assets. It is alleged by the municipal authorities that attempts to remove generators and other machinery from the Colborne street power house have already been made, and were only stopped when threats of immediate seizure were made. Orders were subsequently received from Toronto not to remove any machinery.

Ovation To Hazen.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 4.—Hon. Mr. Hazen, Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was one of the principal speakers at the opening session yesterday of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, attended by a thousand delegates from all sections of the United States. Mr. Hazen spoke on "The Waterways of Canada," advocating further development, and received an ovation at the close of his address.

Two Barrels of Weapons.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—On the liner Laconia, which sailed for the Mediterranean, were 2,100 steerage passengers, a search of whom, as they went on board, revealed a remarkable supply of dangerous weapons. By the time the last passenger had reached deck with his bundle, two barrels had been filled with revolvers and knives, taken from the intending voyageurs. The weapons were all labeled with the names of their owners, to whom they will be restored when the liner arrives at Naples.

Counter Charges Filed.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., Dec. 4.—The counter charges, which were promised by the Conservatives when the election petition protesting the Chateauguay bye-election was served, have been filed in the Superior Court here.

The hearing of the charges by Liberals and the Conservative counter charges will take place during the next two weeks, before Judge Charbonneau of Montreal.

DETECTED TOO LATE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—With the tale that he was her long-lost brother, who had returned after a thirty-two years absence in California with a fortune of three millions, a man whose name was thought to be Jaquet Raymond, was received with rapture by Mrs. Francis Clement, of Ile Bizard, Que. He was given the best in the house, and when taken ill, the family physician, Dr. Ladasseur, St. Geneviève, was summoned to attend to him. Before going to the hospital he visited another supposed sister, Mrs. Letage, wife of a city policeman. He made a will, leaving sums varying from half a million to half a hundred to his various supposed relatives and to charities.

At the hospital his relatives waited on him with assiduity. Two nights ago a mischievous little nephew wished to see what was in his rich uncle's purse, and stole it from underneath the pillow, to discover only worthless papers.

The discovery was too late to affect the "wealthy uncle," who died the next morning. His estate consisted of the clothes he wore and 15 cents.

Rose Goes to Penitentiary.

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—Charles Rose, alias Rosenberger, of Montreal, was sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary for attempting to defraud the Imperial Bank out of $150 Charles Kellm of New York, and William Reilly of Boston, who were held in connection with the case, were discharged.

"CASCARETS" BELIEVE SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children— their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

TO SEND IN HINDUS.

Secret Organization Busy In Philippines Says U. S. Official.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 4.—Immigration officials of the United States are busy with efforts to frustrate the plans of a secret organization with headquarters at Manila to flood the Pacific coast states with Hindu laborers, according to Anthony Caminetti, commissioner-general of immigration. Mr. Caminetti left here last night for Seattle, after having conferred Tuesday with British Columbia officials on immigration problems.

Advices had reached the immigration service, Mr. Caminetti said, that arrangements had been made at Manila to send the East Indians from the Philippines with certificates obtained from the insular government. On the strength of these certificates a party of five Hindus gained admission to the United States at San Francisco, establishing a precedent.

Must Eschew the States.

UTICA, N.Y., Dec. 4.—On condition that he never again enter the United States, Duncan J. Johnston, of Montreal, charged with smuggling Chinese into this country, was released yesterday by U.S. Judge Ray. John Statty of Malone, N.Y., paid a fine of $500 when he pleaded guilty to violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, while David Mitchell and Fred. Schrier likewise indicted, received suspended sentences.

Vertical Spiral Flight.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys. Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming trouble while it is only trouble.

Choice butchers' steers sold at $7.50 to $8; good steers sold at $7 to $7.50; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.50 to $6; choice cows, $6 to $6.50; good cows, $5.50 to $5.75; medium cows, $4.50 to $5.25; common cows, $3 to $4.25; export bulls, $6.50 to $7.25; butchers' bulls, $5.50 to $6; common bulls, $4.25 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The demand for stockers and feeders still continues to be strong and prices were firm as follows: Steers, 1000 to 1150 lbs., sold at $6.60 to $6.90; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

A fair supply of milkers and springers sold at $60 to $95 each, the bulk going at $70 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The receipts of calves were not equal to the demand and prices remained firm. Choice veals sold at $9 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; common, $6 to $6; rough grass calves, $4.40 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were light and prices remained steady. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $5 to $6; heavy ewes, at $4 to $5; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $8.25 to $8.75.

Hogs.

Hogs sold at $8.45 to $8.50 fed and watered; $8.15 f.o.b. cars, and $8.75 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—At the C. P. R. Stock Yards this morning the offerings for sale were 1300 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 150 calves.

There were no new developments in the market for cattle, prices being firm under a good demand and smaller supplies, and an active trade was done for both domestic and outside account. Shipments to the United States amounted to 10 car loads, and in addition to this twenty car loads were forwarded to the middle west and some to the Toronto yards. A feature of the market was the continued scarcity of choice steers, there being none on the market. In consequence the top price realized for the best steers was $7, while the lesser grades sold from that down to $6.50, and butchers' cows brought from $3.50 to $6.25 per cwt. There were some very choice bulls on the market, which sold as high as $7, but the bulk of the trading was done in stock ranging from $5 to $6.50 per cwt.

The trade in small meats was active, there being a keen demand for the small supplies offered, and prices in consequence were firmly maintained. Good to choice of western lambs at $6 to $6.25, and eastern at $7.50 to $7.75, while sheep brought $5 to $5.50 per cwt. The demand for calves, which were rather scarce, was good, at prices ranging from $3 to $15 each as to size and quality.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger and prices were 25c per cwt. higher than on Monday, with a good demand from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $8.30 to $8.50, and straight lots at $8 to $8.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

An Insect Samson.

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 400,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 200 times its own weight.

Or if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper you could spring over the tallest building in London without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from such observations made by naturalists that the greater is also the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for outside force.

Power of the Whale.

If the whale knew its own power it could easily destroy all the machinery which the art of man could devise for catching him. It would only be necessary for him to swim on the surface in a straight line in order to break the thickest rope, but instead, on being struck by the harpoon, he obeys a natural instinct, which, in this instance, betrays him to his death. Not having an air bladder, he can sink to the lowest depths of the ocean, and, mistaking the harpoon for the teeth of a swordfish or a shark, he instantly descends, this being the manner of freeing himself from these enemies, who cannot bear the pressure of a deep ocean, and from descending and ascending in small space he thus puts himself in the power of the whaler.

TRAVELING IN LAPLAND.

Trips on Reindeer Sledges Are at Times Journeys to Death.

Concerning the experience one undergoes while traveling in a Lapland sledge a writer says: "The Laplander's pulka is a very curious conveyance. It is a canoe-shaped wooden sledge and very difficult to manipulate. Before a Lapp can take a drive the reindeer has to be caught. Harnessing is a strenuous performance, as the creature is usually wild with fright and plunges and kicks considerably. His harness consists of a belt made of the skin of some former brother or friend, one rein, which is fastened around his nose, and the pulka is attached and drawn by means of a single trace. They evidently find it a very difficult task to drive. In fact, the reindeer always appears to go where, when and how he pleases. The Lapp hangs on to the poor, unfortunate animal's neck while his passenger scrambles in. This is generally a somewhat hasty performance and usually only half performed when, with a wild whoop, the little Lapp hurls himself on to the front of the sledge, the reindeer makes a wild plunge, and the mad rush begins.

"In and out the poor, wild creature dashes, as if to free himself from the hindering encumbrance which continually chafes him, first on one side and then on the other. If driver and passenger are skilful in the art of tobogganing and manage to remain in the pulka the reindeer soon decides that his burden is not to be got rid of, and he settles down into a more or less steady stride, and then the sensation is delightful and like nothing else on earth. They are very fleet animals and appear to fly. Their feet, being somewhat after the pattern of the camel, splay out on the snow, and thus they are enabled to travel at great speed and tremendous distances without fatigue.

"Owing to its shape the pulka is very liable to upset, even with expert driving, and when the accident occurs the driver has to be careful not to let the one rein go or else woe betide him. Away goes the reindeer with his sledge, and nothing will stop him till he reaches his herd, while, should the unfortunate driver find himself far from his companions, there is nothing for him to do but face starvation and a frozen grave amid the snow. Accidents like these are quite usual, but it has not occurred to the Lapp to alter either the method of harnessing or driving or the shape of the sledge."

What Money Can't Buy.

Money will buy a lot of things, but it can't buy the loyalty of a dog or the friendship of a baby.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Bean, Bremenberg, N.S. "Five years ago three bars of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a baby's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Chinese Blacksmiths.

The Chinese blacksmith thinks a great deal of his anatomy when shoeing horses, which are not numerous in China. He is so skittish in doing a job of shoeing and so dubious about handling the hoofs of the animal that, when shoeing is required, the horse is strung up with ropes in such a manner as to prevent kicking. No exceptions are made, even though the horse be a scrawny cart plug of advanced age.

Music.

Music is a job lot of vibrations furnished to hotels and restaurants for the purpose of adding to the discomfort of the guests. Music is also used for other purposes. It comes in pianos, harps and organs and sometimes, though rarely, in human beings and phonographs. Babies often furnish music when least expected and at hours not always approved of by respectable people.

Music at one time was called a heavenly maid. But she is now mostly clothed in ragtime and is known as flossy. In short, music has run the scale from classic to classy.

Like eggs and other historic back numbers, music is now kept in cold storage and comes in reels and cans. Handmade music is gradually being superseded by the factory made article.

At one time music, singular as it may seem, was used to make music. Now it is used to make a noise.—Life.

Semiprecious Metals.

It appears from recent geological survey publications that the "semiprecious" metals are copper, lead and zinc. Where quicksilver and tin got off on this classification we are not informed. Aluminium also sometimes sells higher than the three first mentioned and antimony far more than lead and zinc. These are probably the quasi precious metals. When we were younger the metals were classed as precious and common, we believe. Now probably iron is alone in the "common" category. What is the use anyway—if there are no privates in an army what is the joy in being a corporal, and why "semiprecious" if there is going to be only iron besides?—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Woefully Mistaken.

"I suppose," said the new saleswoman, "that you want a suit that will make you look attractive to your husband?"

"Attractive to my husband!" echoed the shopper. "I should say not. He wouldn't know if I wore a suit ten years old. What I want is something that will make my next door neighbor turn a pale pink green with envy."—Buffalo Express.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles and the doctor told me I was in a run down condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was getting very run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My trouble soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

HAIR COMING OUT? GOT DANDRUFF OR DOES SCALP ITCH?—25 CENT DANDERINE

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

Music of the Wheat.

Wheat has a music of its own: it is different from what you hear in a barley field or oat patch. The ears are heavier and the rustling is more sonorous and more deeply musical than the swishing of the pendulous oats or bearded barley. There are often breezy days just as the wheat is ripening when one can linger and listen to the rustling music; now and then it sounds like the susurrus of the sea, and you are reminded of waves by seeing the cloud shadows flying over the wheat with a motion not altogether unlike the rising and falling of the sea. Just as painters have drawn frequent inspiration from the wheat fields, no doubt musicians have been inspired by their sweet, subtle sounds. As the breeze passes over the field, how the wheat rustles, how it sways and bends, almost sometimes bowing to the ground, but recovering itself easily in due course.—London Globe.

Keeping in the Heat.

You speak incorrectly when you say that your fur coat is warm. There is no heat in the fur coat at all, but it keeps you warm because it prevents the heat of your body from passing off into the cold air. The Bible says that God "giveth snow like wool," because snow is a poor conductor of heat, just like wool, and protects the seeds of fruits and vegetables in the soil in winter just as wool protects your bodily heat. A saucepan which has been used will bring the water to a boil more quickly than a new one because the bottom being covered with soot it absorbs heat more quickly than a highly polished new surface. The cook polishes the lids of kettles because, when bright, they do not draw the heat and in this way keep the contents warm longer than if dull.—New York World.

MILITANTS AT PLYMOUTH.

They Promise Riots If Mrs. Pankhurst Is Arrested.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, at a meeting of militants at Cannington last night, held to inaugurate the establishment of the suffrage army there, said: "If we have courage to stand together none will be able to stand against us. We will make ourselves a terror to Westminster; we will make the Cabinet Ministers shake in their shoes until they are afraid for their very lives."

Miss Patterson, who presided, said that if the police arrested Mrs. Pankhurst at Plymouth she would be sorry for Plymouth. The suffragettes there would show no respect for property, she declared.

Will Meet Mrs. Pankhurst.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 4.—It was announced last night that the suffragettes had obtained permission to send a deputation aboard a tender to meet Mrs. Pankhurst on the Majestic. The suffragettes held a demonstration here last night, but there were no disorders.

Ready With Seven Warrants.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 4. — Bailiff Dyckman has in his possession seven warrants, which will be executed the moment the Brantford Street Railway Co. attempts to remove any of its cars. It is alleged by the municipal authorities that attempts to remove generators and other machinery from the Colborne street power house have already been made, and were only stopped when threats of immediate seizure were made. Orders were subsequently received from Toronto not to remove any machinery.

Ovation To Hazen.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 4.—Hon. Mr. Hazen, Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was one of the principal speakers at the opening session yesterday of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, attended by a thousand delegates from all sections of the United States. Mr. Hazen spoke on "The Waterways of Canada," advocating further development, and received an ovation at the close of his address.

Two Barrels of Weapons.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—On the liner Laconia, which sailed for the Mediterranean, were 2,100 steerage passengers, a search of whom, as they went on board, revealed a remarkable supply of dangerous weapons. By the time the last passenger had reached deck with his bundle, two barrels had been filled with revolvers and knives, taken from the intending voyageurs. The weapons were all labeled with the names of their owners, to whom they will be restored when the liner arrives at Naples.

Counter Charges Filed.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., Dec. 4.—The counter charges, which were promised by the Conservatives when the election petition protesting the Chateauguay bye-election was served, have been filed in the Superior Court here.

The hearing of the charges by Liberals and the Conservative counter charges will take place during the next two weeks, before Judge Charbonneau of Montreal.

DETECTED TOO LATE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—With the tale that he was her long-lost brother, who had returned after a thirty-two years absence in California with a fortune of three millions, a man whose name was thought to be Jaquet Raymond, was received with rapture by Mrs. Francis Clement, of Ile Bizard, Que. He was given the best in the house, and when taken ill, the family physician, Dr. Ladneeur, St. Geneviève, was summoned to attend to him. Before going to the hospital he visited another supposed sister, Mrs. Bourgy, wife of a city policeman. He made a will, leaving sums varying from half a million to half a hundred to his various supposed relatives and to charities.

At the hospital his relatives waited on him with assiduity. Two nights ago a mischievous little nephew wanted to see what was in his rich uncle's purse, and stole it from underneath the pillow, to discover only worthless papers.

The discovery was too late to affect the "wealthy uncle," who died the next morning. His estate consisted of the clothes he wore and 15 cents.

Rose Goes to Penitentiary.

"CASCARETS" RELIEVE SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Get a 10-cent box now.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, dizziness and sick headache, means a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

Secret Organization Busy In Philippines Says U. S. Official.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 4.—Immigration officials of the United States are busy with efforts to frustrate the plans of a secret organization with headquarters at Manila to flood the Pacific coast states with Hindu laborers, according to Anthony Caminetti, commissioner-general of immigration. Mr. Caminetti left here last night for Seattle, after having conferred Tuesday with British Columbia officials on immigration problems.

Advices had reached the immigration service, Mr. Caminetti said, that arrangements had been made at Manila to send the East Indians from the Philippines with certificates obtained from the former government. On the strength of these certificates a party of five Hindus gained admission to the United States at San Francisco, establishing a precedent.

Must Eschew the States.

UTICA, N.Y., Dec. 4.—On condition that he never again enter the United States, Duncan J. Johnston, of Montreal, charged with smuggling Chinese into this country, was released yesterday by U. S. Judge Ray. John Statty of Malone, N.Y., paid a fine of $500 when he pleaded guilty to violation of the Chinese Exclusion Act, while David Mitchell and Fred. Schrier likewise indicted, received suspended sentences.

Vertical Spiral Flight.

RHEIMS, France, Dec. 4. — Jean Biclovucci, the Peruvian aviator, who flew across the Alps in January this year, made a remarkably daring flight at the aerodrome here yesterday. Turning the nose of his monoplane upwards he ascended 1,091 yards in two minutes thirty seconds, making an almost vertical spiral.

Queen's Students Fined.

KINGSTON, Dec. 4. — Students again figured in the police court yesterday. A second fine of $2 and costs was imposed on John Young for being disorderly in the recent "rush," and a fine of $5 and costs on H. K. Carnochan for smashing a baby carriage on the street and tearing down a sign.

Crothers Off to Nova Scotia.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4. — Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has gone to Sydney, N.S., and he will also visit the various other industrial centres in the Maritime Provinces for the purpose of getting into touch with labor conditions in that part of the country, and obtaining first hand information from both employers and workmen.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys. Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming trouble while it is only beginning.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 88 carloads, comprising 1566 cattle, 930 hogs, 843 sheep and lambs and 175 calves.

Butchers'.

Choice butchers' steers sold at $7.50 to $8; good steers sold at $7 to $7.50; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $5.50 to $6; choice cows, $4 to $4.50; good cows, $3.50 to $3.75; medium cows, $4.50 to $5.25; common cows, $3 to $4.25; export bulls, $6.50 to $7.25; butchers' bulls, $5.50 to $6; common bulls, $4.25 to $5.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The demand for stockers and feeders still continues to be strong and prices were firm as follows: Steers, 1000 to 1150 lbs., sold at $6.60 to $6.90; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 800 to 900 lbs., at $5.25 to $6; rough eastern stockers, $4.50 to $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

A fair supply of milkers and springers sold at $60 to $85 each, the bulk going at $70 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The receipts for calves were not equal to the demand and prices remained firm. Choice veals sold at $9 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; common, $5 to $6; rough grades calves, $4.40 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were light and prices remained steady. Sheep, light ewes, sold at $5 to $6; heavy ewes, at $4 to $5; culls and rams, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $8.25 to $8.70.

Hogs.

Hogs sold at $8.45 to $8.50 fed and watered; $8.15 f.o.b. cars, and $8.75 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—At the C. P. R. Stock Yards this morning the offerings for sale were 1200 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1250 hogs and 150 calves.

There were no new developments in the market for cattle, prices being firm under a good demand and smaller supplies, and an active trade was done for both domestic and outside account. Shipments to the United States amounted to 10 car loads, and in addition to this twenty-one loads were forwarded to the middle west and some to the Toronto yards. A feature of the market was the continued scarcity of choice steers, there being none on the market. In consequence the top price realized for the best steers was $7, while the lesser grades sold from that down to $6.50, and butchers' cows brought from $3.50 to $6.25 per cwt. There were some very choice bulls on the market, which sold as high as $7, but the bulk of the trading was done in stock ranging from $4.75 to $5.60 per cwt.

The trade in small meats was active, there being a keen demand for the small supplies offered, and prices in consequence were firmly maintained, with sales of western lambs at $8 to $8.25, and eastern at $7.50 to $7.75, while sheep brought $5 to $5.50 per cwt. The demand for calves, which were rather scarce, was good, at prices ranging from $5 to $15 each as to size and quality.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger and prices were 25c per cwt. higher than on Monday, with a good demand from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.60, and straight lots at $8 to $8.25 per cwt., weighed off cars.

An Insect Samson.

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 400,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 200 times its own weight.

Or if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper you could spring over the tallest building in London without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from such observations made by naturalists that the greater in size the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for outside force.

Power of the Whale.

If the whale knew its own power it could easily destroy all the machinery which the art of man could devise for catching him. It would only be necessary for him to swim on the surface in a straight line in order to break the thickest rope, but instead, on being struck by the harpoon, he obeys a natural instinct, which, in this instance, betrays him to his death. Not having an air bladder, he can sink to the lowest depths of the ocean, and, mistaking the harpoon for the teeth of a swordfish or a shark, he instantly descends, this being the manner of freeing himself from these enemies, who cannot bear the pressure of a deep ocean, and from descending and ascending in small space he thus puts himself in the power of the whaler.

TRAVELING IN LAPLAND.

Trips on Reindeer Sledges Are at Times Journeys to Death.

Concerning the experience one undergoes while traveling in a Lapland sledge a writer says: "The Lapplander's pulka is a very curious conveyance. It is a canoe-shaped wooden sledge and very difficult to manipulate. Before a Lapp can take a drive the reindeer has to be caught. Harnessing is a strenuous performance, as the creature is usually wild with fright and plunges and kicks considerably. His harness consists of a belt made of the skin of some former brother or friend, one rein, which is fastened around his nose, and the pulka is attached and drawn by means of a single trace. They evidently find it a very difficult task to drive. In fact, the reindeer always appears to go where, when and how he pleases. The Lapp hangs on to the poor, unfortunate animal's neck while his passenger scrambles in. This is generally a somewhat hasty performance and usually only half performed when, with a wild whoop, the little Lapp hurls himself on to the front of the sledge, the reindeer makes a wild plunge, and the mad rush begins.

"In and out the poor, wild creature dashes, as if to free himself from the hindering encumbrance which continually chafes him, first on one side and then on the other. If driver and passenger are skillful in the art of tobogganing and manage to remain in the pulka the reindeer soon decides that his burden is not to be got rid of, and he settles down into a more or less steady stride, and then the sensation is delightful and like nothing else on earth. They are very fleet animals and appear to fly. Their feet, being somewhat after the pattern of the camel, splay out on the snow, and thus they are enabled to travel at great speed and tremendous distances without fatigue.

"Owing to its shape the pulka is very liable to upset, even with expert driving, and when the accident occurs the driver has to be careful not to let the one rein go or else woe betide him. Away goes the reindeer with his sledge, and nothing will stop him till he reaches his lair, while, should the unfortunate driver find himself far from his companions, there is nothing for him to do but face starvation and a frozen grave amid the snow. Accidents like these are quite usual, but it has not occurred to the Lapp to alter either the method of harnessing or driving or the shape of the sledge."

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Shaw, Summerford, N.B. "Two years ago three cakes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Chinese Blacksmiths.

The Chinese blacksmith thinks a great deal of his anatomy when shoeing horses, which are not numerous in China. He is so skittish in doing a job of shoeing and so dubious about handling the hoofs of the animal that, when shoeing is required, the horse is strung up with ropes in such a manner as to prevent kicking. No exceptions are made, even though the horse be a scrawny cart plug of advanced age.

Music.

Music is a job lot of vibrations furnished to hotels and restaurants for the purpose of adding to the discomfort of the guests. Music is also used for other purposes. It comes in pianos, harps and organs and sometimes, though rarely, in human beings and phonographs. Babies often furnish music when least expected and at hours not always approved of by respectable people.

Music at one time was called a heavenly maid. But she is now mostly clothed in ragtime and is known as flossy. In short, music has run the scale from classic to classy.

Like eggs and other historic back numbers, music is now kept in cold storage and comes in reels and cans. Handmade music is gradually being superseded by the factory made article.

At one time music, singular as it may seem, was used to make music. Now it is used to make a noise.—Life.

Semiprecious Metals.

It appears from recent geological survey publications that the "semiprecious" metals are copper, lead and zinc. Where quicksilver and tin get off on this classification we are not informed. Aluminium also sometimes sells higher than the three first mentioned and antimony for more than lead and zinc. These are probably the quasi precious metals. When we were younger the metals were classed as precious and common, we believe. Now probably iron is alone in the "common" category. What is the use anyway—if there are no privates in an army what is the joy in being a corporal, and why "semiprecious" if there is going to be only iron besides?—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Woefully Mistaken.

"I suppose," said the new saleswoman, "that you want a suit that will make you look attractive to your husband?"

"Attractive to my husband!" echoed the shopper. "I should say not. He wouldn't know if I wore a suit ten years old. What I want is something that will make my next door neighbor turn a pale pink green with envy."—Bagdad Express.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

HEALTH SUPERVISION IS PREVENTIVE MEDICINE

THE INEVITABLE PENALTY

That prevention costs less money than cure and health supervision is preventive medicine was one of the logical and cogent arguments advanced by Dr. Struthers in support of health supervision for school children. The occasion for Dr. Struthers' remark, was a public meeting held under the auspices of the Health Committee of the Local Council of Women in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Wednesday evening.

Dr. Struthers, who occupies the position of chief medical inspector of the public schools in Toronto, was introduced to a fairly large audience by Dr. M. A. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education. The latter took occasion to remark that at a recent meeting of the Board of Education, a resolution was adopted, authorising the appointment of a medical supervisor whose duties would commence at the beginning of the New Year.

Results Varied.

Dr. Struthers in his prefatory remarks announced that he would deal with the subject of health supervision in a general way. The results to be obtained from Medical Supervision, said the speaker, varied according to the size of the place. The adage which says that the "hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" bears considerable truth if carried out to a logical conclusion. The hand that rules the world must be guided by intelligence and must have a knowledge of all things.

In refering to the need for medical supervision in the public schools, the speaker said that the old idea of a school education was simply to acquire a knowledge of the rule of three. There are a great many people who maintain that idea to-day. Twentieth century education comprises three essentials, namely culturral, vocational and physical education. The success of the first two is largely dependant upon the physical condition of the child.

National Efficiency.

"Our aim," said Dr. Struthers, "should be to make the schools a stamping ground for the physical education of the child. The children of to-day will be governing the country to-morrow. National efficiency, greatness and strength after all depends to a large extent upon the personal greatness of the individual. Compulsory education was enforced some years ago as a matter of protection for the state, which realizes that an illiterate child cannot take its place in the affairs of the country. Compulsory education often meant compulsory disease because parents were compelled to send their children to schools where the ordinary laws of health were practically ignored.

Preventive Medicine.

Contagious diseases, tuberculosis and defective children are the three chief reasons that justify the establishment of Medical Supervision, in the public schools of the country. "Tuberculosis," said Dr. Struthers, "can be avoided. There is absolutely no necessity for its existence. That it exists is due mainly to neglect. Health supervision to be effective must be made compulsory. It will not amount to anything unless it is enforced. Prevention costs less money than cure, and health supervision is preventive medicine.

Parents sometimes assert that compulsory health supervision is an infringement upon personal liberty. "There is not a law in this country," affirmed the speaker, "that does not infringe on our personal liberty. Personal liberty is nothing more or less than personal indulgence. Fathers are invariably more unruly than mothers when it concern matters pertaining to the welfare and education of the children."

The Inevitable Penalty.

Very few people are conversant with the laws of the body and fewer people, perhaps realize the inevitable penalty of violating those laws. Motherhood does not confer upon the mother a knowledge of child rearing. The great difficulty to-day, is that girls leave the parental roof early in life and enter factories and other places of employment. It is not their fault that they lack the education necessary to enable them to fulfill the obligations consequent upon married life. It is our fault for not providing them with the necessary education.

Parental Authority.

"Health," said Dr. Struthers, "is a product of moderation, and if immoderation was productive of immediate pain, there would be less sickness in the world. Parental authority to-day is only exercised spasmodically and parental training is almost an unknown quantity. Parents say that they want their children to have a good time and that good time invariably takes the form of indulgence. The child obtains its ideals of municipal and national life from the factories and the streets. The object of introducing health supervision in schools, is to bring the child out of the rut into the atmosphere of health."

Dr. Struthers showed a number of steriopticon views depicting the ways and means that have been adopted to further physical education in England, Canada and the United States.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF COAT

REMANDED FOR TRIAL

William Hill of Dummr was charged in this morning's session of the Police Court with stealing a fur-lined overcoat, valued at about $20. Hill elected to be tried summarily, and pleaded "not guilty" to the charge preferred against him. As Crown-Attorney Wood was unable to be present to-day the prisoner was remanded for a week.

It is alleged that a week ago Saturday Hill stole the coat in question from where it was hanging on a hook in the hall of the Munro House. The coat was the property of Thomas McGowan, upon whose complaint the the police machinery was set in motion. Their investigation into the matter resulted in Hills arrest by Detective Meagher last night.

There is a possibility that before Hill comes before the Magistrate again, one or more other charges will have been laid against him.

A Crescent Street man was fined $2 for being drunk in a public place.

ASHES WILL NOT BE CREMATED

In the Incinerator According to Contractor's Statement

Th incinerator is about ready to commence operations. The contractors state that everything in the way of refuse and garbage will be burnt, with the exception of ashes. This will necessitate a slight change in the regulation governing the collection of garbage. Instead of as heretofore, garbage being kept separate, this provision will refer to ashes. That the number of receptacles need not be increasd, the Sanitary Inspector states that the vessels used for garbage only may now also be used for other refuse, such as paper, broken crockery, tins, etc., and the ashes kept alone in their receptacles.

CHINAMEN MAY BE "UP AGAINST IT"

Unless They Conform to New Immigration Regulations

As yet only a few Chinamen have appeared at the local immigration officer's office to comply with the new regulations. The remainder should do so at once, as they may get into uncomfortable situations in the future by not having the new immigration forms to show. They must supply, also, two photographs of themselves, to send to Ottawa.

Nassau Lodge Elects Officers

At the annual meeting the election and installation of officers took place with the County Master, J. C. Waldie, as chairman. The following officers were elected:

W. M.—Bro. Frank Lockington.
D. M.—Bro. Wm. Anderson.
Chap.—Bro. John A. Armstrong.
Rec.-Sec.—Bro. Bert Lockington.
Fin.-Sec.—Bro. Ephriam Brown.
Treasurer—Bro. Wm. Lockington.

MAIL FOR CHRISTMAS DELIVERY

In the Old Country Must be Posted Not Later Than the Fourteenth of December

EXPRESS PARCELS

In response to many enquiries from Old Country readers, The Examiner has learned that the best date for sending Christmas cards, presents, etc., to the Old Country, is the tenth day of December. Mail posted on this date will reach its destination by the nineteenth or twentieth. Mail posted on the fourteenth will not reach England until the twenty-third or twenty-fourth. Bearing in mind the tremendous rush of Christmas mail, it is advisable to mail cards, presents, etc., not later than the tenth in order to ensure delivery in time for Christmas.

Parcels will be handled by the express companies up to December the twelfth.

GREAT HARM DONE IN TEXAS BY THE FLOODS

Twenty Dead, Eighteen Thousand Are Homeless and There is a Property Loss of Six Millions

RELIEF IS NEEDED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

DALLAS, Texas, Dec. 4.—Twenty dead, eighteen thousand homeless, and property damage of $6,000,000 is estimated to-day following yesterday's floods throughout this State. Nearly all railroads are crippled and it is hard to arrive at accurate estimates and also difficult to distribute much needed relief.

CHAUFFEUR TELLS STORY

Says He Was Forced at Point of Revolver

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 4.—William Dick, the chauffeur, who drove the bandit murderers after the robbing of the Bank of Montreal at Plum Coulee, and the murdering of Manager Arnold, has returned and is under surveillance by the police. He says he was forced under the revolvers of the two bandits to drive the car twenty-five miles out on the prairie and leave them there. The amount stolen was five thousand dollars.

A Hint To The Kaiser

Special Cable to The Examiner.

BERLIN, Grmany, Dec. 4.—By a vote of 293 to 54 to-night, the Reichstag voted a lack of confidence in the Imperial Chancellor and the Government after four hours' debate. This is following the military outbursts in Alsace-Lorraine. The German Emperor was quite in accord with the government and the vote is construed as a direct hint to his Imperial Majesty that Germany is under constitutional goverament.

HILL'S PLACE SEARCHED BY DETECTIVES

Local Police Find Three Fur Coats at Home of Man Charged in Police Court With Stealing

ONE IS IDENTIFIED

This morning Detectives Newhall and Meagher and High County Constable Cochrane, made an auto trip to the home of William Hill, in Dummer. Hill is under arrest for stealing a fur-lined coat from the hall in the Munro House, and it was for the purpose of finding the stolen coat that the search was made.

At the Dummer residence the police found, after a search, three fur-lined overcoats, all of which, they suspect, are stolen. Among them was the coat stolen from Thos. McGowan, and for stealing which Hill is under arrest.

Hill's defence is that he took the coat by mistake. Now that they have found the other coats, it is likely that he may have to face at least two other charges of theft.

CHARGED WITH OBTAINING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENCES IN REALTY DEAL

It appears that Constable Walsh, acting under instructions, and armed with a warrarnt, passed through Lindsay a day or two ago for Cannington, where he apprehended Mr. Lloyd-Jones on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. Constable Walsh was expected to arrive in town last night, but instead arrived to-day in Mr. Lloyd-Jones' touring car, and the accused man, having asked to see his lawyer, was taken to the law office of Barristers Hopkins & Hopkins.

In conversation with the lawyer for the complainant, Mr. I. E. Weldon, it was learned that the plaintiff in the case is a Mr. Thos. Preston, of Haliburton, who a year ago last May purchased lots in the west from Mr. Lloyd-Jones, the total amount for the same being $600. According to a statement made Preston handed over $450 with a note for the balance, but in the meantime visited that section of the West where the lots were said to be and claims he was unable to locate his property.

Preston, it is stated, applied for a deed of the property which was not forthcoming, and subsequently the action was lodged.

Mr. Lloyd-Jones will be taken to Minden this afternoon or Thursday, to appear before Magistrate Delamere in answer to the charges. — Lindsay Warder.

LABOUR MEN TOOK REMARKS AS JOKE

Statements About the Humble Rate-Payer Who is Paying for a Home Were Not Taken Seriously

The members of the Trades and Labour Council, at their meeting last night, took a liberal helping of salt with certain aldermanic effusions that were delivered at the last meeting of the City Council. From reports of the proceedings it would seam that the labour men were not impressed, especially with election day so near at hand. While it was not asserted that anyone was seeking to win favour at the eleventh hour the general tenor of the reports of the meeting and a review of the year's work raised a few laughs. The interest in "the man with a little home," was not regarded as having a serious basis.

There was some discussion about choosing one of the members of the council for the mayoralty race, and it is understood that Mr. J. J. Hartleys name was mentioned. No action was taken, however, and if anything is to be done in this direction it will probably be necessary to call a special meeting or wait until the next regular meeting.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA ELECTS OFFICERS

The quarterly meeting of Queen Alexandra Circle, No. 136, Ancient Order of Foresters, was held last night in the S. O. E. Hall. There was a large attendance of members and four candidates were added to the Circle. The following officers were duly elected for the ensuing term:

PREPARATORY SERVICE AT KNOX CHURCH

Preparatory service will be conducted in Knox Church to-morrow evening at 8 p.m. by Rev. A. H. McConnachie of South Monaghan. Mr. McConnachie is a very attractive speaker and comes from Ayr, Scotland, with a marked reputation as a minister and preacher. The session will meet in the Vestry at 7.30 p.m.

"Trial" Day

To-day is what the old timers call "trial" day, and the wind was blowing from the west. Hence throughout the winter season you may expect west winds will prevail. Possibly you are not aware of the fact that the seasons have recently changed and that we are actually into winter. On the first Thursday of every season go look at the weather, and particularly observe the direction in which the wind blows. It seems to strike the key note for the season, so say the soothsayers of the present day.

There were not a few of those who put a certain amount of credence in this weather indication, and last night they retired hoping there would be no easterly nor north-easterly winds on the morrow. The blowing was almost directly from the west for the greater part of the morning. Many of the old saws have failed dismally during recent years, but the "trial day" has a better showing than any of the others. St. Swithen's, which was believed to forstell whether there would be forty days of rain or not after that feast is regarded as a joke, and no one gives the bear and his shadow much attention. If the weather man actually worked consistently in the olden days, the observing folk may have had good reason for setting up a law of averages, but in recent years some of the old averages have been knocked endways. Hence, if you want to test another just observe the weather during the next three months. The older people claim that the winds from the west will predominate. It does not mean that the blow will come from this quarter alone, but for the most part it will be from the west. But the question arises, is not the wind mostly from the west anyway?

Mrs. Pankhurst Taken Off the Majestic Before It Reached Plymouth, and Militants Were Disappointed.

A ROW EXPECTED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 4.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the untamed leader of the British Militant Suffragettes, was arrested this afternoon off Devonport, two miles from here, as the steamship Majestic on which she was returning, approached this port.

By a clever ruse the police took Mrs. Pankhurst into custody without disturbance, completely outwitting Mrs. "General" Drummond's militant bodyguard which was massed here to protect Mrs. Pankhurst from arrest. When the liner was sighted a police boat loaded with Scotland Yard detectives left here. This was the signal for another tug standing by laden with suffragettes to make her departure also. They arrived at the side of the Majestic simultaneously, only to be told that Mrs. Pankhurst had been taken off in another government boat from Devonport and was being rushed with all speed in a big touring car loaded with detectives and police matrons towards London.

Mrs. Pankhurst is subject to committal to Holloway jail without further trial. She held liberty in France and the United States under an expired "cat and mouse" license. Great crowds thronged the wharves at Plymouth and there was much disappointment when the promised fight between the militants and police failed to materialize.

LOUISE DUNBAR AND JOHN MILTON

Again to Be Seen in "The Light Eternal" at The Grand Opera House, Saturday, Dec. 6th

One of the best arguments that can be offered as to the quality of "The Light Eternal," the big spectacular drama to be presented at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Dec. 6, Matinee and Night, is found in the mere fact that this will be the second engagement in this City of this remarkable play during the past two seasons. The manager or producer would be worse than foolish who sought to foist upon the public an inferior offering for more than one performance in any city. A good or bad report concerning a theatrical offering is bound to spread to every quarter and a bad report following the first performance would effectually end all possibility of profitable patronage for a return engagement. On the other hand the enthusiastic commendation of the first engagement spreads as rapidly and is equally effective for good, and it is to this personal endorsement that the management of "The Light Eternal" looks for the best results. The presenting Company will be the same as in the previous engagements with Louise Dunbar and John Milton playing the leading roles.

HORSE OF ANOTHER COLOUR.

Without disparaging the enterprise and zeal of our local Federationists in denouncing by resolution the exclusion of the Orange Sentinel from the Public Library reading room in Berlin, one cannot fail to remark the entire absence of any red-hot protest against Mr. Borden including the Catholic and French Nationalist ministers in the Conservative cabinet. They were given the best portfolios. This is something the Federationists fought against, and voted against — it was an outrage upon everything they profess to hold dear; but it would injure the party to demand their rights in this regard. As Shakespere says: "That's a horse of another colour."

SHOP EARLY AND SHOP AT HOME.

It is just 21 days till Christmas; and when we remember how time flies, we should be busy with our Christmas shopping. It seems almost unnecessary, however, to suggest doing Christmas shopping early, for if it isn't done promptly, it won't be early. In your own interests, in the interests of the merchants — in keeping with the altruistic spirit of Christmas, it becomes your duty to do your shopping as soon as possible. This applies to those who have the means to do so. And there is another thing. In the interests of honesty and fair play; in loyalty to our own city and to your neighbours, who live by helping each other live, you should do your shopping at home. You can get just as good value, and can change change unsatisfatcory purchases, meeting the seller face to face, and besides, you will be doing right; you can give or get your Christmas present, without the remorseful knowledge that you and some of your friends have outraged the spirit of the Maker of Christmas, who enjoins us to love our neighbours as ourselves.

CRIMINAL NEGLECT.

The docket at the Hamilton Assizes contain a long list of claims for workingmen's damages. We can easily suggest the outcome of these suits. The workingmen or their families will be saddled with the costs, because, as Chief Justice Mulock remarked in Peterboorugh, in the trial of a similar case, he could not advise the jury to do the justice—award the damages evidently due to the widow—in the absence of an adequate compensation law. The Whitney government have been prodded by public opinion and the demands of simple justice, to pass a compensation law that would compensate; and they have refused to act. Last session Chief Justice Meredith, as a commission, submitted to the Whitney government a draft bill that, if carried into legislation, would have costituted an excellent and workable compensation law. But the Whitney government refused to submit or pass the bill. If they had done so the hundreds of wives and orphans, made by the recent terrible lake disasters, would have had a claim that could be enforced against the shipping companies and others responsible, who forced the captains of their crafts—of course well insured—to leave port in the face of a storm that meant hundreds of widows and orphans. If such a compensation law had been passed last session, the workingmen or their wives, who are seeking damages at the Hamilton assises, would have got the justice and damages, which in the absence of an adequate law, they are not likely to get. How long?

EGGS AND TITLES.

Some village Hampden who with dauntless breast,
The little tyrant of his fields withstood.

So sings Gray. Why could we not have some twentieth century Gray, sing thus?—

Some city Hampden who with dauntless breast,
The little tyrant of the coop withstands,

To wit, the humble hen, which by withholding her ovarian bounties puts the cost of living a peg or two higher. Eggs have only potential embryric wings, yet they soar higher in the inaccessable realm of high prices than any full-fledged hen could hope to do. We feel the high price of eggs in the bosom of the domestic hearth so to speak. We have a touching example of the manner in which high prices harrow the heart of the housewife. To-day in response to the request of a subscriber, we print recipes for making "pork cake." One lady adds to her recipe this pathetic foot-note:

"This is a well tried recipe; but as eggs are scarce and dear,? have used less, but it is not so good."

Could the high cost of living hit harder than that — compel the self-respecting housewife to humiliating economy—to spare the eggs and spoil the cake. This awful condition of things is a challenge to the political politician, the redresser of national wrongs. Our respected member, who, by the way, as a hard-shell celibate, owes something to the gentler sex, whose lure he has withstood so abstinately; and in compensation he owes them some substantial service on the score of eggs at 3.33 cents apiece. They feel that he can do something for them. He has done yeomen service in teaching them whether or not they are married; and he has on his programme the destruction of the blight of titles. In this he is consistent—he is fighting the battle of high prices. We know that titles come high, but we can't tell how high unless we could see Hon. Bob Rogers' little confidential pass book in which is recorded the contributions of the mighty, to the party corruption fund. In this matter, our member is cutting the Gordian Knot, with true Alexandrine decisiveness; instead of paltering with the high prices of titles, he proposes abolishing them outright. But he cannot apply this heroic treatment to eggs. Eggs we must have; and it strikes the housewife that instead of wasting his mighty intellect upon the abolition of titles whose high price only affects the favoured few, he might do something to bring down the price of eggs to the reach of the average millionaire. He could select a 3.33 cents egg and sit on it until Parliament meets. He might hatch out a scheme that would gladden the housewife's heart. Believe us the advocacy by our member of the abolition of the high cost of the domestic egg and of the other commodities that enter into the domestic menu, would win him more good will than Quixotic tilting at the titles windmill. But that is almost too much to hope—it would be doing something practical and common-sense.

THE INJUSTICE OF IT.

The decision under which Sir Henry Pellatt, of Toronto, is to be taxed at an assessment of $100,000 for a building that must have cost about half a million shows the outrageous weakness of the assessment law. The workman's cottage is taxed at its full value, and the millionaire's palace at a fifth of its cost. Sir James Whitney should beware. It is things like the Pellatt assessment that destroy Governments.—The Globe.

THE COST OF LIVING.

The Montreal Mail Conservative) says that in elevating the high cost of living to first place as the burning issue of the day, in his speech at Hamilton, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has done the people of the country a real service "Whether or not Sir Wilfrid's plan to remove the duties on food be the solution of the problem is, like the tariff question itself, a matter of opinion, around which controversy will probably rage."

All right; let it rage. But don't keep the poor consumer waiting while it rages. Remove the food taxes at once. Give us parcel post at once, so as to bring producer and consumer closer together. Get after the food combines. Then if you like appoint your commission to inquire into other causes of the high cost of living. Let us have full investigation, but do not let investigation be used as an excuse for delay. Clear aawy the taxes and other rubbish, and then it will be easier to see what lies below.—Toronto Star.

Very Dusal.

Pointing out the vanity of titles to a group of debutantes at a tea in New York, Frederick Townsend Martin said:

"On a boat returning from Europe I once heard a pretty girl say enthusiastically to a young man:

"'And so you met a duke—a real live duke?'

"'Yes,' he answered yawning.

"'Oh, tell me,' said the girl, with a rapt look, 'what was the duke doing?'

"'He was engaged,' said the young man, 'in a high-kicking contest with a chorus lady.'"

BOTH BAD.

Elbert E. Martin, the young athlete who saved Col. Roosevelt's life at Milwaukee by disarming the assassin, is noted for his sound common sense.

Mr. Martin, discussing election probabilities with some Democratic and Republican correspondents, said the other day:

"Well, we must all work hard. We must be neither optimists nor pessimists: for the optimist won't work because he thinks there's no need, and the pessimist won't work because he thinks there's no use."

"Optimism, in fact, is the creed of fools. Pessimism is the creed of cowards.

HASTINGS ITEMS

Mr. F. Miles Met With Accident —Other News

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, Dec. 2.—Once again death has entered our town, claiming as his victim, Mrs. R. C. Doxsee, who passed away at her home on Monday morning after a lingering illness.

The late Mrs. Doxsee was a very highly respected citizen, and a devoted member of the Methodist Church, where she will be much missed, more particularly as a member of the W. M. S. of which she was an active member, and at the time of her demise was treasurer of that society. She leaves to mourn her loss besides her sorrowing husband, one daughter at home, who will have the sympathy of all in this their time of sorrow.

The Ladies' Aid held their monthly meeting on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. M. Baker. Important matters of business were discussed after which luncheon was served by the hostess.

An accident which might easily have proved fatal, happened last week to Mr. T. Miles, when his horses took fright and ran away, throwing him out with force and striking his head against a stone inflicting an ugly gash, as the result of which he was unconscious for some time. Latest reports say that the unfortunate man is improving and hopes are entertained for his recovery.

The 7 o'clock train was delayed for several hours on Monday morning by a wreck which took place below Campbellford in which two or three cars jumped the track.

Mr. Wm. Baker was a recent visitor at Warkworth.

Mr. Roy Watson, of Norwood, spent Sunday with friends here.

Mr. Moore, of Toronto, a representative of the J. Deere Plow Co., gave us a call last week in the interests of the firm.

Mr. Joe Trotter has disposed of his fine team of horses, for which he realized a handsome sum.

Mr. Henry Beavis, of Lakefield, visited friends near town last week.

Mr. E. J. Laing, of Norwood, and Mr. J. S. Laing, of Havelock, spent Friday last at the home of their sister, Mrs. Nelson Beavis.

Messrs. Kohler and Walker are making another tour of this district, picking up cattle for the Chicago market.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cuffe, of Norwood, visited in town last week.

The Sunday School of the Methodist Church have begun their practice for their annual Xmas entertainment, which will be held in the Town Hall on Xmas night.

Mr. W. Simpson and Mr. Hanna, of Dummer, were in town on Saturday.

Mr. W. Philips and daughter, Winnie, spent a day during the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oakman.

Mr. Wm. Lynch took a trip to Peterborough on Saturday.

The patrons of Ormonde Cheese factory held their annual meeting on Saturday last which was well attended.

Mr. Wm. Moore and party motored to Norham on Wednesday last and spent the evening.

Miss Ruby Comstock, of Peterborough, spent Sunday under the parental roof.

Mr. F. Stark, of Dummer, gave us a call on Saturday.

Mr. Thos. Cardwell, of Westwood, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. John Taylor visited Peterborough last week.

We are pleased to learn that the condition of Mr. J. Richardson is somewhat improved.

ENSURING A GOOD FIT.

For every person who wonders why the slippers he gets on birthdays and holidays fit so atrociously, there are two more who wonder why their slippers fit so well. Many of the latter class could obtain enlightenment from the clerks in shoe stores.

Thoughtful persons who wish to give slippers for presents do not buy indiscriminately without regard to size. They find out where the recipient usually buy shoes and make to the dealer for the size.

"During the month preceding Christmas we receive dozens of letters soliciting information as to the size of customers' shoes," a dealer said. "In the case of regular customers these figures are easily obtainable, but if the person is only an occasional buyer the job is difficult. We go to a good deal of trouble to supply the information whenever possible, so if some folks' slippers do not fit it is not our fault."

Tea and Coffee Drinking

Tea and coffee are not foods. Anything not a food which is taken into the system makes the eliminative processes work overtime to throw it off. Often the unprofitable thing, when taken regularly, accumulates faster than it can be eliminated, and becomes a destroyer.

Besides, tea and coffee contain caffeine, a subtle, poisonous drug—from 1½ to 3 grains to the cup. It is well known that caffeine frequently causes heart trouble nervousness, sleeplessness and biliousness — serious handicaps to progress and comfort.

If something is hindering your efforts, try the simple test of leaving off tea and coffee for ten days and using Postum.

If after a few days you begin to feel better—sleep well, nerves steady up and brain gets clear, you will know how to avoid that kind of trouble.

Postum, made only of prime wheat and a small per cent. of New Orleans molasses, is a pure food-drink wholesome, nourishing and delicious. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

Postum now comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled to bring out its delightful flavour and food value.

Instant Postum—(the new form) is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delicious beverage instantly. Add sugar and cream to taste.

MORE ABOUT THAT DEER DISPUTE

Lakefield, Ont., Dec. 3. 1913.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Owing to the different stories published in The Examiner about a deer shot in the Beaver Lake section of the back woods, I might say the stories I have read has been falsely reported. A party composed of Russel Ball, J. Albert Ball and James Grant, while staying in a camp on Beaver Lake, which having shares in and hunting on the same ground as the Bridgenorth party. The dogs took scent to a large buck which was shot by J. Albert Ball one-half mile from Sucker Lake ahead of our dog and one of the Bridgenorth party's dogs. After the chase my brother and I started to carry the deer to camp, but was stopped by one of the Bridgenorth party, saying that if we claimed that deer there would be a fight, so instead of fighting my brother and I went to camp. Next day we took a tent and camped on Catchacom Narrows. And the Bridgenorth party engaged in running of a narrow strip of land were baffled by the dogs running a deer between them and coming over four miles to Catchacom Narrows and my brother finished the chase.

The deer which I shot at Sucker Lake was brought to Bridgenorth, but was lawfully claimed by its owner.

J. A. Ball.

Lakefield Ratepayer Calls Down Sexsmith For New Post-office Delay

Sundry Other Short-comings in Lakefield Life Touched Up --The Only Public Thing That Seems to Grow is the Taxes.

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is said that "eternal vigilence is the price of success," and we see the truth of this adage strikingly exemplified in all departments of life and business from one end of our country to the other, not only in large, popular centres like Toronto, but also in smaller places such as Fergus, Elora, Burford, etc. some of which are not half the size of Lakefield; nor are they endowed with the natural advantages that we have.

We read daily in the public press and we listen with delighted expectancy to speeches at election times about the wonderful development of our country and th amazing things that are coming our way, and when we see the vast expenditures for public works that other municipalities are readily securing, we begin to wonder what is the matter with Lakefield. The only thing of a public nature that seems to grow here is our tax rate.

Our Federal member, Mr. Sexsmith, seems to have so far made a good beginning by having an appropriation of ten thousand dollars put in the estimates for a new post office, and an excellent and central site has been bought for it; but, like the object of the Good Samaritan's solicitude, he seems to have met with unexepcted opposition, and since government-owned property does not pay taxes, the net result so far is that one of the best business lots in Town has thus been removed from the taxable list, and the rest of us have to make up its taxes. And this seems to be the only part in this whole transaction, apart from the privilege of voting to place their candidate at the head of the polls, where the general taxpayers are taken into confidence (?). Yet, even this is but a small part of the price they are condemned to pay, submitting to clique rule, where those who assume to lead lose sight of the general good of the municipality and assume a selfishly jealous and apathetic attitude towards anything that might tend to benefit one person, or section more than another.

Now that labour in Lakefield is far too scarce let our member see to it that our new post office is no longer delayed and the labouring men will be much more likely to regard him with favour when he needs their assistance, for they have memories as well as votes.

The fact is that Lakefield is far too heavily loaded with the curse of party politics. It enters into almost everything. It benefits nobody but scheming politicians and self-seeking wire-pullers, and neither party is free from it, and the degree of their guilt seems to be limited only by their opportunity. One dare hardly say his soul is his own without being boycotted, and it does not adjust the load to be told that other municipalities are as bad. No matter what our general politics may be, as citizens and well-wishers of our own Town, and best interests, we should stand unitedly by the men who work consistently and unselfishly for our industrial development—who are always doing something tangible for the best interests of our municipality.

It is said that "in union there is strength," and if the industrial masses would do their own thinking and stand together for their own best interess, and value at their true worth the genial smile and proverbial handshake of interested politicians and self-seeking wire-pullers about election times, then instead of favouring and rewarding the few men of influence (?) at the expense of the many, the members of our Legislatures and Councils would strive to benefit by legislation and otherwise, every department of the great labour interest, which not only forms the backbone of every community, but without which any community must retrograde.

Lakefield is undoubtedly a pleasant place to live in for those who have a sufficient and assured income from stable and remunerative business or other sources, and its natural advantages to enable it to become a thriving industrial centre—an ideal home also for the labouring man—are much above the average. But industrial development, which would improve all kinds of business, increase the values of real estate, and greatly help everybody, is the one thing we lack. The very thing that all of us are wishing and hoping for, but, like the proverbial frog on the bank of the stream, we all seem to be waiting for something to turn up"—waiting for our Council to take the initiative in a matter of such vast importance to every interest connected with the material progress and industrial development of our Village, involving, as it does, the electric power question. Also the franchise for our electric lighting system expired about a year and a half ago and considerable improvement is needed there in the interests of the ratepayers.

The municipalities that are forging ahead the fastest are the ones that are making the most strenuous and united efforts to help themselves through the medium of their live Councils and Boards of Trade. Some four years ago our Board of Trade was a very active organization, but in the Fall of 1910 it passed into its hibernaculum, and has ever since been dreaming of the great advantage to be secured by keeping things quiet, but whatever may be the advantages of such a course from the individual standpoint, it is clearly not conducive to the best interests of the municipality.

Let us wake up and try the other way.

Yours respectfully,
Ratepayer.

HOURS OF AGONY PRECEDE DEATH

Slight Cut Results in Tetanus, With Awful Suffering

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINDSOR, Dec. 4.—Death in one of its most terirble and excruciating forms came to Alexander Reaume, aged twenty-eight, a young Windsor man, at his home here to-day. For nearly thirty hours Reaume suffered the keenest troture from tetanus, and when at last worn out by his struggles and the advance of the disease through his nervous system, he sank into unconciousness, the attending physicians assured those waiting at the bedside that he would suffer no more.

About three weeks ago Reaume, who was employed as a pressman on one of the Detroit newspapers, cut his thumb slightly with the blade of a penknife. The wound was not considered serious at the time, and no further attention was paid to it until inflammation developed. Then medical aid was called, the wound was given attention and soon healed up.

Three days ago, while attending to his usual duties Reaume suddenly began to display a marked antipathy at the sight of water, and soon he was snapping like a dog and foaming at the mouth. Doctors who were hurriedly called at once diagnosed the case as one of tetanus, and Reaume was rushed to his home, where antitoxin was administered, but the virus had apparently thoroughly permeated the system, and the victim did not rally.

Last night his struggles became more furious and the combined strength of three men was required to hold him in bed. In his lucid moments the sufferer begged piteously for water, but when he caught sight of it the deadly convulsions began afresh. Death finally ensued from exhaustion.

Reaume leaves a wife and one young daughter.

THE BOOK ROOM ON BEVERLY HOUSE SITE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—The Methodist Church of Canada book room will be built on Beverly house site, about which there has been so much criticism and question of suitability. The sub-committee appointed recently to look into the matter, reported this morning that there was no evidence of irregularity or suspicionof graft in the selection of this site. The syndicate which sold the site to the Methodist Church is anxious to take it back at any time.

HOUSE TO MEET ON JAN. 8

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—A Cabinet Minister was this morning responsible for the statement that Parliament will meet on Thursday, January 8. The date has not yet been discussed by the Cabinet Council, but the Government is anxious to get down to business as soon after the New Year as possible.

This Will Remove Hairs From Face

(Toilet Talks)

Many beauty experts have discarded the electric needle and are now using a plain delatone paste to remove hairy growths because this method is almost instantaneous and is entirely devoid of pain. The paste is made by mixing some powdered delatone with water and this is applied to the hairy surface for about 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin soft and spotless. Be sure to get the delatone in an original package.

LONGBOAT MAY NEVER RUN AGAIN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 4—Tom Longboat, the great Indian long-distance runner, may never race again. He fell yesterday while in the bush, and broke one of the bones in his right leg. Every attention is being given to the injury at his home at Caledonia Reserve, but the doctors fear the Indian may never come back to form.

MASS MEETINGS WILL PROTEST

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 4.—Newspapers are booming the Sunday mass meetings to be held all over Germany to protest against the fiery utterances of Chancellor Von Gethmann Hollwegg and the governments attitude of military dictatorship.

WILL DISCUSS FREIGHT RATES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 4.—It was announced this morning that when Hon. Geo. E. Foster goes to England in January to attend the sittings of the Dominion Trades Commission he will urge the desirability of at once taking up the question of Atlantic freight rates as advised by Chairman Drayton of the Railway Commission.

And Then There's

The Unique 4 Day's Sale

Commencing Friday Morning

UNIQUE it is in every respect, for each department has contributed genuine price reductions on lines of sound merit, and placed the sale prices so low, that on paper we are at a loss to give you a fair representation of the magnificient values that hold sway till Tuesday night. . .

The folders distributed through the City will convey a good idea of what we are offering, while a visit to the store itself will convince you that this is indeed a "Unique" Event.

Of Course You Will Be At

The Reception This Evening?

And be one of the many who will spend a pleasant hour, in our spacious, newly extended store.

WHAT a change it will be indeed, to wander through the store with no thought of buying, but just to gaze around at the beautiful and varied lines of merchandise, and listen to the strains of the Orchestra.

What a splendid opportunity to see what there is, that one can give for a Christmas Box.

The Store will be in Gala attire, and business will be forgotten for this one evening upon which The Cressman Company will be "At Home" to the Public.

The Store of Superior Service

AND it is all on account of our fifteen years of successful merchandizing in your midst, and the opening of the two new departments:—"Furniture and Fancy Goods." With these two, we have now fourteen different and complete stores under one roof. The Furniture is displayed on 3rd and 4th floors, and the Fancy Goods Section is in the centre of the Main Floor.

The Store of Superior Service

Then between 7.30 and 9.30 p.m. let us have the pleasure of making your acquaintance, and showing you the extensive business that has been built by giving "Superior Service" to the growing population of this City and District.

Deep Breathing And Rosy Cheeks

It is very true that a great number of women do not breathe deep enough. And the loss of a fresh rosy appearance, and the lack of vigour are the consequences.

Generally, the Corset is to blame, especially when it is not properly boned, or properly fitted.

To breathe deeply there must be expansion, but if one's Corset binds or restricts, expansion is well nigh impossible.

Therefore it is a matter of health when you choose a Corset correctly made and fitted, like the American Lady Corsets.

Peterboro' Protestant Federation Pass Resolution Condemning Action Of The Berlin Library Board

Local Organization Records Exception to the Exclusion of the Orange Sentinel From the Shelves of the Berlin Public Library--Matter Was Referred to the City Council.

Among the communications received by the Berlin City Council on Monday evening, and which was listened to with almost breathless attention, was one from the Secretary of the Peterborough Protestant Benevolent Federation, condemning the action of the Berlin Library Board in banning The Orange Sentinel. It was accompanied by a resolution. The letter and resolution are as follows:

Peterborough, Nov. 24, 1913.

The City Council of Berlin:

Gentlemen,—The enclosed resolution was unanimously carried at the last public meeting of the Protestant Benevolent Federation of this city. It expresses as such the opinion of 1,200 of the citizens of this city, of all ranks and professions, who are members of the Federation. We feel that an enlightened body of gentlemen such as you are, will pass a fair and unbiased judgment on the action of your Library Board in banning the Sentinel from the Public Library. We, who have been readers of the Sentinel for years, feel sincerely that it is a paper that should have a place in all libraries, as its discussions on questions of importance are always conducted in a fair, just and impartial manner. In submitting this resolution to you, gentlemen, we do so in confidence that this question will receive at your hands the impartial and honest consideration it deserves.

PERCIVAL G. S. WEBB,
Fin. Secretary.

Moved by W. Batten, seconded by W. Johnson.

That the action of the Public Library Board of Berlin in banning The Sentinel and a free press be condemned as eminently dangerous to freedom and public rights, and

That the Secretary notify the City Council of Berlin that in permitting this outrage it is placing Berlin in a most unenviable light before the whole world and in a position that cannot in the public interest be allowed to continue, and

That this Federation also puts on record its request that newspapers, etc., of all religious faiths whether controversial or not, be placed on the files of public libraries for the public to read since the suppression of discussion or controversy would have meant not only the suppression of the Reformation but of Christianity itself, and

That copies of this resolution be sent to the City Council of Berlin, to The Sentinel and to the Provincial Government.

Referred to Finance.

"What does the Council want to do with this communication?" asked Mayor Euler.

"What does the resolution want us to do?" enquired Ald. Hahn.

The Mayor replied that the resolution made no request to the Council, but simply condemned the action of the Library Board in banning the Orange Sentinel.

"Better refer it to the Library Board," suggested Alderman Dietrich, amid laughter.

"The Council will have to deal with it in some manner," His Worship intimated as he referred it to the Finance Committee.

Fire Brigade Had Busy Day

The Fire Brigade had three runs yesterday, but very fortunately none of the fires they were called to resulted in any serious damage.

A blaze that came very close to starting a disastrous conflagration, broke out in Matthews-Laing factory, yesterday morning. Defective wiring, it is said, set fire to the ceiling of the packing house, but very fortunately it was noticed soon. The employees worked hard to extinguish the flames, and by the time the Fire Brigade arrived, the fire was practically out. The brigade was summoned by telephone by the office staff.

The second fire was yesterday afternoon. An overheated chimney set fire to the rafters and joints in the home of Mrs. Dolly Succee, at the corner of Sherbrooke and George streets. The Fire Brigade was called and by the use of pails of water and chemicals, the fire was soon put out. There was very little damage done to the house which is the property of Mr. Fred Hurley.

At ten o'clock last night, a chimney fire at the home of Mr. Jas. O'Toole, 226 Perry street, caused some excitement. The fire did not last long after the arrival of the brigade, and was extinguished before it did any damage.

RISQUE, BUT NOT TOO NAUGHTY

When one speaks of French Farce Comedy, it is to be careful. "The Glad Eye," however, contains nothing of the vulgar. It is spirituelle to a degree, with a little spice of the daring, which makes the grotesque situations so very acceptable. Nowhere in the world has the farceur the trick of his trade at his finger ends as in Paris, where it does not suffice to have originality, but wit as well, and a knowledge of literature.

"The Glad Eye" is the story of a little deception. Two husbands live with their respective wives near Paris. The little Village is their home, but they often sigh for the haunts of their student days in the gay Montmartre and La Vilette. Just as Oscar Wilde invented "Earnest" in the "Importance of Being Earnest," so our two humbugs invent a balloon, The Zebra. Whenever they wish to take the little Jaunt to Gay Paree, the Zebra is to make an ascent. Their little deception is discovered by means of various comedy entanglements, which, to describe, would spoil the play for intending patrons. Suffice it to say they are "Found Out" and it required all the wit of which the two are capable to extricate themselves.

MISS MAY MARLOWE

Mr. Meyer has sent over a full all-star British Company, and the entire beautiful productions in three scenes.

"The Glad Eye" has had a run of one year and three months in London, and nine months at the Nouveautes Theatre, in Paris. It is also a record success in South Africa and Australia. It was produced in Canada for the first time last week, and the reception it met with was most gratifying, both Company and play being described as of the best that have ever been sent over here. After Peterborough and one or two other of the larger cities East, the play goes to Toronto, and thence to the Coast. The seat sale opens Saturday.

THE BROPHY WILL CASE.

Is Likely to be Heard by Toronto Courts.

KINGSTON, Dec. 4.—It is altogether likely that the dispute in connection with the will of the late Father Brophy, formerly of Peterborough, who died at the Orphanage at St. Mary's-on-the-Lake, will be threshed out before the courts at Toronto. The case came before Judge Price a short time ago.

Since that time the case has been taken out of the hands of the county court and will in all likelihood come before the supreme court of Ontario at Toronto.

SOME RECIPES FOR PORK CAKE

Readers of the Examiner Tell How to Make the Delicacy

That the Examiner is widely read is illustrated by the response made by its readers in reply to a request from a subscriber for a recipe for pork cake. A number of good housewives responded and very kindly sent in their way of making this delicacy. Here are four of them:

Pork Cake.—1 lb. of salt pork, 1-2 pt. of boiling water, 1 lb. of raisins, 1-4 lb. of citron peel, 2 cups of sugar (brown), 1 cup of molasses, 1 teaspoon of soda, 1 tablespoon of nutmegs, 1 tablespoon of cloves, 1 tablespoon of cinnamon. Flour to thicken.

Take salt pork, without any lean or rind and chop as fine as lard and pour boiling water on it. Seed and chop raisins. Bake in slow oven.

Mrs. A. Mc.

Fat salt pork, 1 pound, chopped very fine; 1-2 point of boiling water poured on it; 1 lb. raisins seeded and chopped, 1-4 lb. citron peel cut fine, 1 lb. brown sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 teaspoonful soda dissolved in molasses. Mix all together and stir in sifted flour, enough to make like common cake, nutmeg, ground cloves and cinnamon, 2 ounces. Bake slowly.

L. H.

2 cups sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup sour milk, 1 lb. fat pork minced fine, 1 lb. raisins, 4 eggs, 1 nutmeg, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon soda. Stir flour enough in to make a good, stiff batter and bake slowly.

This is a well tried recipe, but as eggs are scarce and dear I have used less, but it is not so good unless you use lots of flour and add nuts.

Mrs. M.

1 lb. fat pork chopped fine, 1 lb. raisins, 1 1-2 lbs. currants, 2 tablespoons of cinnamon, 1 tablespoon soda, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 tablespoon cloves, 1 nutmeg grated, 2 cups brown sugar, 1 cup molasses.

1 pint of boiling water on the pork and let it cool. Then add the other ingredients; add about 8 cups flour 1-2 lb. of lemon peel, 1-4 lb. citron peel, 1-4 lb. orgone peel, pinch of salt. This makes two good loaves.

A Reader.

1 lb. currants, 1 lb. raisins (seeded), 1 lb. brown sugar, 1-2 cup black molasses, 1-2 cup sour milk, 1-2 teaspoonful baking soda, 5c. worth mixed spice, 10c. worth mixed nuts, 10c. worth mixed peel, 1 lb. fat salt pork (chopped fine.) Boil 15 minutes in 1 cup boiling water, 3 cups of flour and more if needed. Bake for about three hours.

A Subscriber.

1 lb. of pork chopped fine, 2 cups molasses, 2 cups boiling coffee, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 lb. raisins, 1 lb. currants, 2 nutmegs, 1 tablespoon allspice, 5 cups flour, 2 teaspoons of soda.

Mrs. L.

THE MARKET SENATE.

Question of Auction Sales Was Discussed By Members.

The argument at the market this morning revolved around auction sales. A drover claimed that if a farmer advertises that he will sell certain goods he is bound to put them up at auction. To get down to a specific case, supposing the bill announcing the sale included five fat cattle and the drover travels ten miles to the sale he claims that the farmer should put up the cattle unless he announces a reserved bid, or that he has withdrawn them from sale. The question was whether the farmer had any duty toward those who attended the sale with the object of buying. It was pointed out in the discussion that the farmer may change his mind and need not sell anything, that he does not contract to sell his goods, and that the prospective buyers have no rights from the simple fact that they drive to the scene of the sale. The reporter who was present asked a lawyer his opinion and it was given that the farmer may do as he pleases, that the mere announcement places no particular obligation upon him in regard to what articles shall be put at auction. Hence the drover may be disappointed but he has no legal redress.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT SHOWS APPROPRIATION NEARLY SPENT

City Expenditure is Well Inside the Money Set Aside But Margin is Small in Many Cases

The statement of the City's receipts and payments from Jan. 1 to Nov. 30 was presented to the Council on Monday night in a report from City Treasurer Adams. It will be seen that many of the appropriations are almost spent. Interest, insurance and street watering have passed their allowance by slight margins, but the total payments are well within the appropriations. The list is as follows:

MORE COMPLAINT ABOUT THE CITY'S EXPENDITURES

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The taxpayers of Peterborough must be very much gratified on reading in last night's Examiner the explanation made by Alderman Anderson, the City's Finance Minister, on Peterborough's financial situation. A correspondent in your paper expressed surprise to find that the indebtedness of the City of Peterborough was—$1,318,008, and that the indebtedness of Peterborough during this last five years had been increasing at the rate of $120,000 a year. Alderman Anderson has attempted to correct these figures. He said they were entirely wrong, and he proceeded to show that the indebtedness of Peterborough was actually—$254,511.76 greater than your correspondent assumed it was, and that instead of an increase in our indebtedness being at the rate of $120,000 a year it was actually $125,000 a year. If the members of our City Council are proud of the fact that the City's indebtedness is increasing at the rate of $125,000 a year, is it not about time that the ratepayers should consider the advisability of putting in a class of men in the Council who will be proud of showing economy?

Alderman Anderson made no explanation to account for our increased taxation. In 1900 the rate of taxation was 19 1-2 mills on the dollar. The annual rate this year was 25 mills on the dollar making an increase of 5 1-2 mills on the dollar which on a total assessment of $10,000,000.00 shows that the city's annual expenditure has during this last four years increased over $55,000.00. But this increase is not all. The assessment during this last five years has increased no less than $3,200,000.00 and the ratepayers on that increased assessment are taxed 25 mills on the dollar which still further increases our annual expenditure to the extent of $80,000.00 a year. That is to say the taxes imposed upon the City of Peterborough are no less than $135,000.00 greater than they were five years ago. To that must be added the annual increase in our indebtedness of $125,000.00 a year. If these figures are added together it shows that the City Council are spending or squandering $265,000.00 more than they were five years ago. How is this money being expended? What policy can be adopted to reduce our annual expenditure? We certainly cannot expect any retrenchment from the present Council because they are apparently proud of their record of increased indebtedness and increased taxation.

But the ratepayers of Peterborough have not yet received the returns on the record of 1913. To what extent has the indebtedness been increased this year and to what extent has the annual expenditure been increased this year. It is generally known that the assessment of the City has been increased to the extent of $1,000,000.00 which means that the ratepayers of Peterborough have been still further soaked this year in taxes to the extent of $25,000.00 more than they were last year, and it certainly will be a curious thing if this year our extravagant City Council has not increased our indebtedness the usual $125,000.00. It will be very interesting to have our Finance Minister make a statement upon the financial record of the Council during the present year. It certainly would be in the interests of the taxpayers of Peterborough to replace the retiring members of the Council with some competent men who are pledged to a policy of economy and retrenchment.

Yours, etc.,
Ex 19½ Mill Ratepayer.
Peterborough, Dec. 3rd, 1913.

ARE IN FAVOUR OF THE EXCURSION

The audiences in attendance at the meetings of the West Peterborough Farmrs' Institute at Ennismore and Lakefield, this week, have shown themselves in favour of a renewing of the annual excursion and also of the formation of a Plowmen's Club. Both of these projects will be discussed by the Institute, according to Mr. Wm. Collins, the energetic secretary.

Refused To Transfer License

The application of Mr. P. M. Howard, of Hastings, to have his license transferred to Mr. I. Eastwood of this City, has been refused.

Mr. Howard was the owner of a liquor store in the village of Hastings, which he sold to Mr. Eastwood. He also made application to have his license transferred to the purchaser, who is a local man. The license commissioners for East Hastings considered the matter, and refused to transfer the license. As a result Mr. Eastwood will not be in a position to carry on a liquor business in Hastings.

Feeding Hints

Protein is a large constituent in the make up of milk, flesh and bones. Consequently dairy cows and young growing animals of all kinds require more protein in their ration than do fattening animals, horses or oxen.

A cow producing 50 lbs. of milk a day will need two and three-quarter pounds of protein in her food to supply the protein for the milk alone. When we take into consideration the protein content of her body, a 50 lb. cow should get over three pounds of digestible protein each day.

A fine point in feeding is to supply enough of each constituent to meet the animal's requirement and not too much of any one. Over supply of any constituent is waste.

Here is a case in which I have often come in contact: A farmer goes to town to buy feed. He finds that one feed is a few dollars cheaper a ton than another. He buys it for that reason. The cheap feed may have been the most expensive on the market when results are considered.

Most feeds grown on the farm are deficient in protein. In buying feed therefore we should aim to buy feed that will strengthen the farm ration. That means a feed rich in protein. Many used to buy bran for this purpose but are now beginning to doubt its economy. Bran has 12.8 per cent. of protein, but oil cake meal has 30.4 per cent. of protein. Compare prices and decide which you can afford to buy.

Three pounds of linseed meal would supply sufficient protein to maintain an animal. From the amount of milk that the cow is giving the additional amount required to meet all her demands can then be figured out. Of course, however, one would not supply all the protein from the linseed meal. Cotton seed, too, is rich in protein.

Either linseed or cotton seed meal must be fed in moderate quantities; not more than three or four pounds to an animal.

A few years ago I was working as a hired man on a dairy farm where we were feeding bran, oats and home-grown fodders. I induced my employer to get some cotton seed meal. We could see the difference in milk flow immediately.

Milk is 87 per cent. water. Hence a good supply of water and not too cold is one of the first essentials in successful feeding of dairy cattle.

EXPECTED IT.

Recently a rather unsophisticated woman from one of the back counties took a sea voyage with her niece, and just as the ship glided into the harbour one day the good aunt heard a large rattle, a clank, and a splash.

"Look here, mister officer," she cried, turning to the steward, "what has happened?"

"Nothing at all, madame," replied the steward; "we have just dropped the anchor."

"I expected it!" declared aunty, with large emphasis. "It's a wonder that it didn't happen before. The thing has been hanging out there all the morning."

TURNBULL'S

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Simpson Desires To Sever His Connection With The Rovers

May Return to Scotland--Andrew Wilson, of Sheffield Wednesday is to be Commiserated With--Old Country Football News.

Rumour is rampant in British football circles just now, and if any dependence can be laid on the fickle jade at all, there will be some notable transfers ere the season is finished. It is reported that John Stirling of Middlesbro' has a notion to return to his native lahd, and has asked the club directors to place him on the transfer list. It has become an old saw now when a player has no other good and sufficient reason for leaving his club, to trot out the plea that the town or city in which he is located has had ill effects on his wife's health. It is a fact, however, that Stirling's good lady has never enjoyed good health since she took up her residence in Middlesbro'. It is said that Aberdeen may secure Stirling's services, but I have a notion that Clyde, his old club, would be a higher bidder.

About Simpson.

There is also a rumour that "Jocky" Simpson has a desire to leave Blackburn Rovers, and it is further stated that he and Danny Shea are not hitting it off together from a purely personal point of view. There may be some truth in the report that Simpson has a desire to return to Scotland, but where, may I ask, is the club that could afford to pay the sum which would be required to shift the old Falkirk player from his present quarters? Glasgow Rangers have the money, but considering the fact that quite recently they parted with $7,500 for Duncan and Stewart of Newcastle, it is not the least likely that they would be willing to stump up $10,000 more for another outside right.

Wilson Unfortunate.

Andrew Wilson of Sheffield Wednesday is to be commiserated with. He seems to have been born under a particularly unlucky star. On the day of his first benefit the weather was wretched, and all Andrew got was a trifle over $1,000. His second benefit on 15th Nov. was only a little better, and instead of the $4,000 most people expected and hoped he would get, the drawings only exceeded the guarantee of $1,750 by $400. His two benefits have realized approximately $3,250. And this for fourteen years splendid service.

When one considers how many players comparatively insignificant to Wilson have received as the result of only one benefit match a sum measurably near the $5,000 mark, it can readily be realized how unfortunate Andrew has been.

His Price.

Bob Benson has been placed on Sheffield United's transfer list—at his own request. I understand that $7,500 is the price put on his head. Many offers have been made for his services, but the clubs who want him have shied at putting down such a big figure. I am told that Liverpool offered $5,000 for Benson, and that they were informed that there was nothing doing at that price. Unless the transfer fee is reduced Bob, I am afraid, is fated to remain at Bramall Lane all this season, although he is extremely keen on getting away before the season is much further advanced.

Player's Narrow Escape.

Tom Logan, of Chelsea, had a narrow escape from meeting with a serious accident the other week. He was out riding, and, finding his stirrups were too short, stopped to lengthen them, and in doing so slipped and fell into a ditch, dragging the horse on top of him, and fortunately the animall fell on its back and stuck fast in the ditch with its feet in the air. Badly bruised and shaken, Tom managed to crawl out from under his steed, and only just in time, as in its struggle to free itself it sank to the bottom of the ditch, and later it required a horse and several men to pull it out of its uncomfortable position.

Miscellaneous.

Lennie, of Aberdeen, has been transferred to Falkirk for $150. How the mighty have fallen!

The record Continental attendance for a football game is 30,000, the occasion being the international between Hungary and Austria. The gate amounted to $10,000. These two countries stand in the same relation as England and Scotland, being under the same rules.

The Thompson Ahern and Co. football team defeated the Canadian General eleven in a friendly game at Willowvale Park on Saturday by a score of 4 to 3. Douglas, at outside right, was the best man for the winners, he scoring two of the four goals. Hunter was also very good on the back line, while Baker, in goal, played a good game for the losers. This leaves each team having won one and lost one, and a hot argument is expected when these two teams meet again on Saturday, December 13.

A Big Squad Out Last Night at Brock Street Rink

There was a good turnout at the hockey club workout in Brock Street Rink last night and the players had a lively drill for half an hour in the rink, followed by a run outside. MYSTIC SHRINERS' CELEBRATION IN CITY OF LONDON

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 3. — Mystic Shriners, big and little, long and short, thin and fat, invaded London to-day for the annual session of Mocha Temple. There are in the neighbourhood of 700 members of the nappy order here for the occasion, and there will be much feasting, music and speech-making in the Masonic Hall on Queen's Avenue.

Delegations are here from Sault Ste. Marie, Chatham, Port Arthur, Stratford, Brantford, Guelph, Hamilton, Ridgetown, Aylmer, St. Thomas Detroit, Windsor, Walkerville and many other points, and 125 candidates will be initiated to-night. The business session commenced at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and following the initiation ceremony at 7 o'clock to-night, the traditional banquet will be held. The Shriners will also be entertained with music and moving pictures, the latter showing members of a well-known American Shrine on a trip through Panama.

Pipe Bands Plentiful.

The Soo and Chatham delegations arived at noon, and were met with a pipe band and the local reception committee, headed by J. P. Evans. The St. Thomas delegation with its own pipe band and Chief Rabban Henry Roe, is coming strong. Mr. Roe is to be elected illustrious potentate. The Detroit delegation, 100 strong, will arrive at 5 o'clock on a special train, bringing its own band, while representatives of El Karafa Temple, Saginaw, Mich., are here with its complete patrol.

Among the notable Shriners here are Dr. W. L. Alexander and Martin Blecher, past potentates of Ismalia Temple, Buffalo, and James Glanville, past potentate of Rameses Temple, Toronto.

Honour For Ed Struthers.

E. R. C. Struthers of New York City, son of R. C. Struthers, and the man who named and held the first membership card in Mocha Temple, is here for the big meeting, and will be honoured by the members. Mr. Struthers was the first man named for the position of illustrious potentate, but unable to accept the position. This afternoon the executive committee will make a recommendation to the temple that Mr. Struthers be given a jewel similar to a past potentate jewel, and the ceremony of presentation will then take place.

To Banish Care.

"COME over and play bridge, or if you like, we'll have some music."

With a telephone in the house there is no need to become careworn. You can summon your friends for a game of bridge, or an evening's music at any time, and so do much to make life brighter and happier. It keeps you in touch with your friends.

As an aid to your wife's social life, as well as a constant help in her household duties, there is nothing to equal a residence telephone. And if an emergency arises, it is invaluable.

MILLBROOK AND BAILIEBORO' NEWS

Examiner Special:

MILLBROOK, DEC. 3.—Mr. W. Armstrong returned last week from his harvesters' trip.

Mrs. W. J. E. Gillott has gone on an extended visit to friends across the border.

Miss Nettie Handley has gone to Peterborough to take a course in the Business College.

Arthur Campbell is here from Vancouver visiting his mother and brother, Mr. A. Campbell.

Mr. Stanley Armstrong of Sintalute, Sask., is down on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Armstrong.

Bailieboro News.

A pretty November wedding took place last week at the home of Mrs. Wm. Lunney, when her youngest daughter, Sarah Jane, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Douglas Fisher only son of Mr. Joseph Fisher of Bailieboro. The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her eldest brothr, Mr. Isaac Lunney, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. W. Allen. The bride wore a gown of white silk with pearl trimmings and carried a bouquet of roses, lilies of the valley and maiden hair ferns. After the ceremony the guests from Cobourg, Lindsay, Plainsville and Fraserville and other points sat down to tastefully decorated tables. A short address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Allen of Millbrook and responded to by the groom. After supper the evening was spent in music and dancing. They were the recipients of many pretty and useful presents. The young couple will reside at Bailieboro and carry with them the best wisher for many happy days of married life.

THE BAZAAR BECOMES BIZARRE

To the Editor, The Examiner:

DearSir,—I like to see consistency. I don't pretend to be very good; but. I live up to my pretensions—I am not very good; but I am consistent. I know persons who pretend more and do not quite live up to their pretensions. In this case one is a parson, who practically does not practice what he preaches. In a city church on Sunday as I am informed the preacher preached in favour of the more excellent way of orthodox giving for church purposes. He quoted St. Paul to this effect—if I remember the passage correctly — He said: "Paul says. 'Let every one of you lay by in store, according as the Lord hath prospered him; let there be no gatherings (bazaars, the preacher slipped in in vocal parenthesis), when I come.'

Yet I see every street pole flashing the information that a lecture will be given on a certain night on "The Funny Pennsylvania Dutchman" in this parson's own church, under its auspices, to raise money for the uses of the Lord. Under the circumstances does not condemnation of the bazaar become bizarre?

Now is this quite consistent? I quite agree with St. Paul and the minister that the commercial style of advancing the Kingdom, is not right. It seems to me like bargaining with the Almighty. It is as much as to say, "Give me 25 cents' worth of cold chicken at a 'fowl supper'; give me 25 cents' worth of fine foolery in the shape of some comic lecture or some concert; give me a bazaar bargain in a doll for my little girl; give me the worth of my money some way or any old way, and I will give 25 cents to the Lord."

But why, condemn bazaars and tolerate and patronize some other forms of compounding our felony of serving the Lord for a quid pro quo—giving only when we get value? Is this consistent?. It seems to me that the inconsistency of the unco' guid greases the facilis decepsus of the sinner more surely than the overt wickedness of the unco' bad. I'm Scotch enough, by my forbears, and by my sympathy, to quote Burns:

O wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oorsel's as ithers see us.

"Always yours faithfully,"

Consistency.

AT ETON.

Some of the hardships of life at Eton in bygone times might be regarded as complimentary to the sufferers. Only the best of the boys were called upon to bear them. The biographer of Dr. Parr records that the famous Eton "head" believed in flogging for all offences, and even for absence of offence, but never punished stunted capacity or tried to extort much from mediocrity. If Parr made up his mind that a boy was to be classed as "mediocre," that boy enjoyed practical immunity from the birch ever after. But when the head assistant told the doctor, "I believe So-and-So is a lad of genius," the answer was, "Say you so? Then let the flogging begin to-morrow."

His Least Need.

Oscar Underwood, at an alfresco luncheon in Birmingham, said to a man who opposed all tariff changes:

"The way you'd treat the tariff, my good sir, reminds me of the poor duffer who, weak from hunger, collapsed in Market Street.

"A crowd gathered round, and then, as is always the way, three or four chaps began to shove back the crowd, yelling:

"'Give him air! Give him air!'

"At this the sufferer raised his head from the sidewalk, smiled bitterly, and said:

"'Air? Give me air? Why, gents, I've had nothing but air for the last three days.'"

Government Incompetence At Port Nelson

Incompetence or Something Worse Means Waste and Delay and Suffering to Men

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.— The stories of gross mismanagement at Port Nelson in connection with the construction of the Hudson Bay terminals at that port are further substantiated by a detailed report of conditions obtaining there made by Capt. William Robertson of the steamer Alette, which was wrecked at the port last October, Captain Robertson, who returned to Halifax a few days ago on the steamer Acadia from Hudson Bay, severely criticizes conditions generally at Port Nelson.

Lack of Navigation Aids.

The Marine Department comes in for considerable censure for not having provided the aids to navigating the channel which the Hydrographic Department had surveyed and recommended and marked upon the charts. To the failure to properly place buoys or to keep them in position he attributes the loss of the steamer Cereanse with her valuable cargo.

Mark Twain's Story Outclassed.

The purchase of a Halifax lobster tug by the Government for use at Port Nelson to pull massively heavy tows laden with the heaviest of construction material up Nelson River, eight miles, against a seven-knot current, comes in for considerable ridicule. This chapter of mismanagement rivals all previous records in the story of Hudson Bay. This tug, the Kathleen, seems in a fair way to knock into a cocked hat the world renown of that famous tug described by Mark Twain as a canal boat on the Mississippi, the most remarkable characteristic of which being the fact that she came to a standstill every time she blew her whistle. The Kathleen's history on Halifax harbour showed her to be a nine-knot craft, with a possible speed of eleven knots under pressure. When she tied up with an ordinary tow of lobster boats she could make two knots an hour. On the Nelson River, against the current of seven knots an hour with a heavy tow, the Kathleen slipped back faster than she went ahead.

Goods Piled on Shore.

Describing conditions ashore Capt. Robertson says: "I have not the language to tell you of the state things are really in. Piled high on the shore you would find, mixed in heaps, ropes, chains, boxes of provisions, Big Ben clocks, boxes of cigarettes and cigarette papers, and tins of milk. I cannot remember the stuff, but there were piles of it of all descriptions, some covered by tarpaulins, some had become uncovered by the wind, and there were piles of provisions over which nothing had been put. There were even bags of coal thrown in with the other stuff.

Little Thanks For His Pains.

"The only prospect I find for the men is for them to live in tents during the winter, unless they get some of the shacks built, but they have not the lumber. There were 60,000 feet of house lumber in the holds of the Alette, but there is little chance of getting it. I beached the ship high up in hopes that she would stand one winter and thus save for the Government the cargo, but I got little thanks from the Government for that.

Officials Live Sumptuously.

"The officials are housed most comfortably and live gorgeously. I was up to meals several times and never saw such spreads before. The staff seems to be a good crowd, but the workmen know they have the upper hand of the authorities, and work only when they see fit. Very little had been done towards the construction of the port, except to lay out a graveyard in which there has already been one man buried."

Nelson No Port For Shelter.

As to Port Nelson itself, Captain Robertson says: "The proopsal to navigate Hudson Bay may be a very good one, but at Port Nelson there is no possibility of ever making a port of shelter for ships, if, finding too much ice in the Straits, they return to the port for winter. From what I know of Fort Churchill, it seems a much more likely place. Then again in the construction of any port on Hudson Bay there is need of engineers who have had practical experience in building ports in the most difficult places Gold medalists may know how to mix concrete, but there is something more needed at Port Nelson to-day if there is ever to be anything done."

DEATHS FOR 12 MONTHS.

Records Show Nearly 1,900 for Ontario in Last Fiscal Year.

The report of the Provincial Board of Health for the year 1912 was issued yesterday. For the year the cases of disease and number of deaths from each are given as follows:

Disease.	Cases.	Deaths.
Small-pox	553	3
Scarlet fever	2,645	111
Diphtheria	2,340	238
Measles	2,634	58
Whooping cough	1,114	142
Typhoid	2,569	305
Tuberculosis	1,525	860
Infantile paralysis	49	10
Cerebro-spinal meningitis	50	58

The total number of deaths aggregate over 1,600.

In the case of tuberculosis about 36 per cent. only of the cases are reported by local boards of health. The deaths from all sources in Ontario in the past eleven years is shown by the record to be about 322,000.

FASHION NOTES

Printed silks are a favourite material for afternoon costumes.

There are many scarf-trimmed hats among the new models.

For every kind of sport the brilliant-hued silk knitted or wool coat is a charming and becoming style.

Lace used as inside revers is a feminine touch which has been given to some waistcoats.

Close-fitting hats, with outstanding trimming are as much in vogue as ever. The trimming may be either feather, fancy or loops of ribbon and velvet in fantastic shape.

Fashion seems to have swung around again to the separate jackets and separate skirts, and the selection of contrasting colours must be harmonious.

WEDDING BELLS

FISHER—LUNNEY.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. Isaac Lunney, Campbellcroft, on Wednesday, Nov. 26, at 6.30 o'clock, when his younger sister, Sara, was united in marriage to Mr. Douglas Fisher of Baillieboro.

The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her brother, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. W. C. Allen. Her gown was of white satin, with pearl trimmings, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley. The ceremony, which was performed by Canon Allen of Millbrook, took place under an arch of evergreens banked with ferns and white 'mums.

After the wedding dejeuner the bride and groom departed midst showers of rice and confetti for their home followed by the good wishes of their many friends.

OBITUARY

MRS. WM. DWYER.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at her home, near Hales' Bridge, of Catherine McMahon, widow of the late William Dwyer. The deceased lady was 86 years of age, and was born in Ireland. She has resided in Otonabee for upwards of fifty years, and during that time has won a large number of friends.

Her husband predeceased her about four years ago, but she is survived by several children.

The funeral will be held from her late residence, lot 10, concession 17, Otonabee, to Sacred Heart Church and St. Peter's Cemetery, to-morrow morning at eight o'clock.

LILIAS TARRANT.

At the Margaret Cox Home for Girls, in this City, there passed away yesterday Lilias Tarrant, aged 13. The deceased was born in England and came here under the protection of the Dr. Barnado Home system.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Opening of Two New Schools

The two new Public Schools of the City will be formally opened to-morrow. Dr. Merchant of the Department of Education, Toronto, will be the principal speaker. He will give an address in both schools, which will be opened simultaneously. One-half the Board of Education will be present at each school. The opening ceremonies will commence at 2.30 o'clock. His Worship Mayor Bradburn and several of the Aldermen will be present. The schools will be open to the public for inspection from 7 until 9 o'clock in the evening.

Tops of old kid boots, cut into shape and covered, make good iron-holders and wear well.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market turned strong and made high prices in most every important stock. There has been a large short interest in the market lately, and during the past few weeks every body who traded at all went short. I do not believe that this is the beginning of a bull market, but the rally could go a point or two further. I think we are sure to have a sharp decline after next week at the latest, but I am a little worried as to what they will do this week and next.

It is believed that the President's message is favourable, and the public is now disposed to give more attention to business interests, the real interests of the whole country. The buying of the railroad stocks continues to be good and is a little more aggressive with the result that as the supply of stocks is limited prices must rise when shorts and others bid for them. The dividend paying railroad stocks are beginning to be looked upon as cheap. We think the railroads which will benefit from the tariff readjustment are in a very good position. If they are granted higher freight rates a bear panic will result for the investors would become aggressive.

ONLY THREE WEEKS TILL CHRISTMAS

EVERY HORSE WINS

Saskatchewan's String Ranks High at Chicago

TWENTY PRIZES ARE TAKEN

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—At the International Live Stock Show yesterday, the judging of all the horse classes in which Saskatchewan was interested was completed, and the western horses have a phenomenal record of wins to their credit. Twenty horses were shown, and there are twenty prizes to carry home. In only one class did they show and not get in the money. The exact number and character of the wins is as follows: Three first prizes, six second prizes, three third prizes, two fourth prizes, three fifth prizes, two sixth prizes and one seventh prize.

Championships and strings of twos and threes were decided yesterday. The senior champion Clydesdale stallion was Fyvie Baron, who was first in the aged class. He is owned by Conham Bros., of Wilkesbarre, Pa.

The senior champion mare was Harviestoun Baroness, owned by the Fairholm Farm of Newmarket, N.J. These two were afterwards granted champions of the breed.

The junior champion stallion was Glencaple of the Conham Stud. The junior champion mare was Rodie Pride, from the same stud.

In the class of three animals, the get of one sire, R. H. Taber of Condie, Sask., got third place with the get of the Bruce, and the Colony Farm, British Columbia, was second with the get of Baroness Pride.

W. H. Bryce has refused all offers for Doune Lodge Romeo, and the University of Saskatchewan has refused several excellent offers for Lady Bruce of Lumsden and Craigie Meral.

The cattle car lot exhibits were sold yesterday. The champion car lot sold for $12.25 per cwt. and the reserve champion car lot, which were two-year-olds, at $11,80. The interest in stock breeding is emphasized by the high averages made at the sales of pure bred stock. The Aberdeen Angus Society sold 52 head at an average of $274 each, nearly $100 over the average of last year.

The highest priced bull brought $2,005. He is only a calf yet, J. D. McGregor bought a couple of very handsome cows for his herd, and was a heavy buyer for a personal friend in the States, who is starting a herd.

Champion Steer To Be at Guelph.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—By the special request of Hon. J. S. Duff, Glencarnock Victor II., the magnificent fat steer which carried off the grand championship at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago a few days ago and brought the tribute of the breeders of the continent to Canadian cattlemen, will be on exhibition at the Ontario Winter Fair, which opens in Guelph next week. This arrangement is counted by the Department to be one of the most interesting features of several years of exhibits.

To Protect Forests.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—The Commission of Conservation in a report now in course of preparation will advise that either the Dominion or Provincial Government acquire the land in the Trent Valley watershed and protect the forests. It is feared that the extensive timber cutting here will so seriously affect the water supply as to practically ruin the Trent Valley Canal.

Picked Up Crew of Brig.

GLASGOW, Dec. 5.—The British steamer Invergyle reports yesterday that while on the voyage from Penarth for Halifax, N.S., she picked up the crew of the British brig Evelyn, commanded by Capt. Robert, which was abandoned on Nov. 28 while sailing from Beaverton, Nfld., to Glasgow.

Indians Want Thoroughbred.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 5.—The Indians on the Six Nation reserve have applied for a thoroughbred stallion to the Canadian National Bureau of Breeding. Supt. C. J. Smith says that there are many good mares and do not wish to breed anything but light horses, if possible.

Late reports from flooded districts of central Texas bring the death list up to thirteen. A still greater number is reported missing.

The Washington, D.C., egg boycott has won. Best cold storage variety have dropped to 35 cents, while some dealers make offers of 32 cents.

Chicago faces a crisis caused by an army of thousands of unemployed men, according to a report to representatives of charitable organizations.

Albert J. Boyd, a Montreal stock broker, was yesterday found guilty of stealing stock of the Dominion Glass Co. to the value of $9,800, deposited with him.

W. Clement, municipal engineer for South Vancouver, tendered his resignation Wednesday because his duties were too light. His salary was $3,000 a year.

The question of ocean freight rates on which H. L. Drayton, recently presented his report, has been referred by the Government to the Dominion royal commission to be dealt with.

It is rumored that there is a probability of the Government dropping the cases against the miners yet to be tried in connection with the recent strike riots on Vancouver Island.

Bruce M. Stuart died at the home of his brother, Wallace Stuart, Waler, near Cornwall, after a lingering illness, aged 59 years. Mr. Stuart at one time conducted a store at Dickinson's Landing.

Bitter denunciation of the past performances of the Government in its development of creeks and rivers of the United States featured yesterday's session of the Rivers and Harbors Congress in Washington.

United States Peace Committee Completes Its Plans

MONUMENT TO BE BUILT

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 5. — The American Committee having in charge the preparation of a program for the celebration next year of one hundred years of peace among English-speaking peoples concluded its work here yesterday after full discussion of the features which are to be of world-wide interest. The erection of an international monument around which Great Britain and the United States will pledge themselves to keep eternal peace was urged in a resolution adopted unanimously by the conference. The civic organizations, patriotic societies, schools, the nation and individuals were requested to co-operate in the proper observance of the centennial.

The following message, written by Oscar S. Straus of New York, was cabled to the British Committee:

"The American Committee for the Celebration of the One Hundred Years of Peace Among the English-speaking Peoples, now assembled at a national conference in Richmond, send greetings to their colleagues, the British Committee, and beg the Duke of Teck to convey to them and to the Committee of the Anglo-American Exhibition the assurance of our fullest co-operation in fittingly celebrating an event which shall at the same time betoken undying peace between our two nations and be a hopeful harbinger for the peace of the world."

RAKE-OFF IS HUGE.

Thirty-Nine Cents In Dollar Go to New York Produce Men.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—It costs 39 cents to distribute one dollar's worth of food in this city. The bureau of food supply of the New York association for improving the condition of the poor has been conducting a cost of living enquiry and made public a report yesterday showing that 61 cents represents the cost of the food on its arrival at the terminal markets here, while the rest of the consumer's dollar is divided between wholesaler and retailer in the process of getting the food to the consumer's kitchen.

The remedy, the report asserts, is a reorganization of the food distribution system based on the result of careful experiments with the economic efficiency of various methods of [illegible]

RUINED HIS HEALTH.

Convict Complains of Effects of Being "Hosed."

KINGSTON, Dec. 5.—Further evidence on "hosing" convicts was given at the afternoon session of the prison enquiry.

Convict F 294, aged 21, and serving a second term, said he had been hosed twice in June and July last year for misconduct. On one occasion he had thrown a hammer at guard. He complained of having ill health since, as the result of cold, and had suffered from buzzing in his ears.

Convict F 357 declared that convicts secured money in some "mysterious" way, as he put it, and with the money purchased tobacco from the guards.

Convict F 360, an inmate of the isolation ward, declared he had been given hose treatment with his clothes on, and that they were almost washed off. He was rendered unconscious on four different occasions while water was played on him. The convict, who is one of a western gang sent here over a year ago, swore he suffered pains around the heart, and that he had a scar on his left arm from treatment he received.

Dr. Phelan, prison surgeon, stated that the scar referred to by the convict was an old one.

When the prison reform committee resumed its session yesterday morning, Dr. Edwards, M.P., exploded the expected sensation by stating that since the last session one of the convicts, Ross, who gave evidence against Guard Frederic Ingledew, had confessed that his statement was untrue and that what he had said was "a frame up" between him and Overseer Wilson of the hospital. It was announced that this matter would be enquired into later and the committee then resumed its sessions enquiring into the conduct of Deputy Warden O'Leary.

DATE SET AT LAST

Parliament Will Open Its Session on January 15th

MR. ROWELL AT CAPITAL

OTTAWA, Dec. 5. — The date of the opening of Parliament is Jan. 15. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday. It is anticipated that the session will be a lively one. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "free food" speech in Hamilton is taken here to mean that this is the first announcement of a general campaign against the tariff. However, a clear pronouncement is expected at the Fielding banquet in Montreal next week.

The naval question and the highways will again take up considerable time, although not so much as last year. The Government will send these measures to the Senate as early as possible. An important matter will be the revision of the Railway Act, which has been in the hands of counsel for two years. Much interest will be centred in the Government's redistribution bill, which will be brought down.

The opinion was expressed yesterday that the Government will make a strong effort to get through by May 24.

Mr. Rowell In Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, was in conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday morning. It is understood tariff issues were under discussion, and that an important announcement of policy will be made at the Fielding banquet in Montreal on Tuesday night.

MRS. PANKHURST JAILED.

Suffragette Leader Is Landed at Exeter on a Tug.

EXETER, Eng., Dec. 5. — Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, was lodged yesterday in Exeter Jail. After the police landed her from the tug at a dock on the Tamar River, they started off in the direction of London, but afterwards, changed their route and made direct for this city.

The Women's Social and Political Union in London, the militant suffragette organization, issues the following announcement yesterday afternoon:

"The union views with great indignation the Government's action in arresting Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst on her return from her triumphant tour in the United States. It denounces as a public scandal this act of injustice on the part of the Government, while Sir Edward Carson Andrew Bonar Law and other men lawbreakers remain free. It demands her instant release."

Police Used Wily Ruse.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 5.—Contrary to expectations, there was no disturbance when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, was arrested on board the steamship Majestic on her arrival from New York yesterday.

Mrs. Pankhurst was transferred to a tug which had been chartered by the police and was taken to Devonport dockyard.

The police officers boarded the Majestic as soon as the liner anchored shortly after noon.

The police tug with the prisoner and the officers on board steamed off directly for Devonport. Everybody except officials was excluded from the Government dockyard and Mrs. Pankhurst landed without incident.

UNFAIR TO WEST.

It Is Paying More Than Fair Share of Rates Says Mr. Bicknell.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5. — Mr. James Bicknell, K.C., counsel for the Dominion Government, began his argument in the western freight rates case yesterday morning, and had not concluded when adjournment was taken last evening.

Mr. Bicknell submitted figures from the annual statement of the C.P.R. to show that in 1911 the eastern lines yielded $6,000,000 in net freight earnings while the western lines yielded $19,000,000, or $13,000,000 more than the east.

"If the east is not able to bear its proportion of expense, the west is made to do it, and consequently the west is paying a greater share than eighteen per cent., the amount it should pay towards the general expenses on the amount of capital actually invested."

Mr. Bicknell expressed his belief that the Muller figures were accurate and that the rates in the west were out of all proportion to the cost of service.

Treasurer Accused of Stealing $400

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—H. Wright, secretary-treasurer of Montreal South, appeared in the arraignment court yesterday to face a charge of stealing $400, money which had been entrusted to him in his capacity as an officer of the corporation. The charge is laid in the name of the municipality, the money having been funds of the town.

No evidence was taken yesterday, the prisoner being remanded to December 10.

NEW SITE APPROVED.

Decision Given In Methodist Book Room Controversy.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—A statement of the findings in connection with the inquiry into the circumstances of the purchase of the Beverley House property and its suitability as a new site for the book and publishing house was issued last evening by the Book Committee of the Methodist Church after an all-day session.

The committee finds that the steward and his assistant sought to buy the property solely on its merits; that the Book Committee was ignorant of the ownership of the site; that the action of the vendors in taking a profit of $32,500 on the land was a legitimate business transaction, and, finally, that no other site is as suitable for the purposes of the Book Room.

Compensation Act Approved.

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 5. — The Workmen's Compensation Act, as drafted by Sir William Meredith, was adopted without one dissenting voice by the Ontario conference of bricklayers and stonemasons yesterday afternoon at the third day's session.

THE WAY OF A MAN.

—X—

The Chicago Record-Herald quotes this conversation:

"And why," she asked, "do you think the world is better now than it was 25 years ago?"

"Because you were not in it then," he replied.

"Ah, I am afraid you wish to flatter me. I am nearly 28."

"Is it possible? Well, in a way, I'm glad of it."

"Why?"

"You see, I'm 37, and I don't believe any man ought to be more than eight or nine years older than his wife."

"Oh, Horace, how romantic you are! I wonder if any other man ever adopted such a lovely way to let a girl know that he cared for her?"

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

XXII.

A Blank Card.

The next day at noon Lena brought me up a card on her tray. It was a perfectly blank one.

"Miss Van Burnam's maid said you sent for this," was her demure announcement.

"Miss Van Burnam's maid is right' said I, taking the card and with it a fresh installment of courage.

Nothing happened for two days, then there came word from the kitchen that a bushel of potatoes had arrived. Going down to see them, I drew from their midst a large square envelope which I immediately carried to my room. It failed to contain a photograph; but there was a letter in it couched in these terms:

"Dear Miss Butterworth,—The esteem which you are good enough to express for me is returned. I regret that I cannot oblige you. There are no photographs to be found in Mrs. Van Burnam's rooms. Perhaps this fact may be accounted for by the curiosity shown in those apartments by a very spruce new boarder we have had from New York. His taste for that particular quarter of the house was such that I could not keep him away from it except by lock and key. If there was a picture there of Mrs. Van Burnam he took it, for he departed very suddenly one night. I am glad he took nothing more with him. The talks he had with my servant-girl have almost led to my dismissing her.

"Praying your pardon for the disappointment I am forced to give you I remain,

"Yours sincerely,
"Susan Ferguson."

So! so° balked by an emissary of Mr. Gryce. Well, well, we would do without the photograph! Mr. Gryce might need it, but not Amelia Butterworth.

This was on a Thursday and on the evening of Saturday the long-desired clue was given me. It came in the shape of a letter brought me by Mr. Alvord.

Our interview was not an agreeable one. Mr. Alvord is a clever man and an adroit one, or I should not persist in employing him as my lawyer' but he never understood me. At this time, and with this letter in his hand, he understood me less than ever, which naturally called out my powers of self-assertion and led to some lively conversation between us. But that is neither here nor there. He had brou ht me an answer to my advertisement and I was presently engrossed by it. It was an uneducated woman's epistle and its chirography and spelling were dreadful; so I will just mention its contents, which were highly interesting in themselves, as I think you will acknowledge.

She, that is, the writer, whose name as nearly as I could make out, was Bertha Desberger, knew such a person as I described, and could give me news of her if I would come to her house in West Ninth Street at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

If I would! I think my face must have shown my satisfaction, for Mr. Alvord, who was watching me, sarcastically remarked:

"You don't seem to find any difficulties in that communication. Now, what do you think of this one?"

He held out another letter which had been directed to him, and which he had opened. Its contents called up a shade of colour to my cheek, for I did not want to go through the annoyance of explaining myself again:

"Dear Sir,—From a strange advertisement which has lately appeared in the Herald, I gather that information is wanted of a young woman, who, on the morning of the 18th inst. entered my store without any bonnet on her head, and saying she had met with an accident, bought a hat which she immediately put on. She was pale as a girl could be and looked so ill that I asked her if she was well enough to be out alone; but she gave me no reply and left the store as soon as possible. That is all I can tell you about her."

With this was enlosed this card:

PHINEAS COX,

Millinery

Trimmed and Untrimmed Hats.

—— Sixth Avenue.

"Now, what does this mean?" asked Mr. Alvord. "The morning of the eighteenth was the morning when the murder was discovered in which you have shown such interest."

"It means," I retorted with some spirit, for simple dignity was thrown away on this man, "that I made a mistake in choosing your office as a medium for my business communications."

This was to the point and he said no more, though he eyed the letter in my hand very curiously, and seemed more than tempted to renew the hostilities with which we had opened our interview.

Had it not been Saturday, and late in the day at that, I would have visited Mr. Cox's store before I slept, but as it was I felt obliged to wait till Monday. Meanwhile I had before me the still more important interview with Mrs. Desberger.

As I had no reason to think that my visiting any number in Ninth Street would arouse suspicion in the police, I rode there quite boldly the next day, and with Lena at my side, entered the house of Mrs. Bertha Desberger.

YOUR HAIR MAY BE YOUR FORTUNE

Beautiful hair has made the fortune of many a woman, by adding charm and loveliness to an otherwise plain face. Nothing means more to good looks than beautiful hair. It adds t othe attractiveness of every feature. Without it you can't be beautiful; with it you will be at least pretty.

To have beautiful hair, use Harmony Hair Beautifier. It will improve the beauty of your hair, taking away the dull harshness and stringiness, softening and polishing every hair in your head and making it soft, silky, glossy, easier to put up and keep in place, and at the same time giving it a rich and lasting rose fragrance that will delight both you and those around you.

Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. It contains no oil, and will not change the color of the hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Harmony laboratories, Toronto, where the celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made. —McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, Peterborough, Ont.

For this trip I had dressed myself plainly, and drawn over my eyes—and the puffs which I still think it becoming in a woman of my age to wear—a dotted veil, thick enough to conceal my features, without robbing me of that aspect of benignity necessary to the success of my mission. Lena wore her usual neat grey dress and looked the picture of all the virtues.

A large brass door-plate, well rubbed, was the first sign vouchsafed us of the respectability of the house we were about to nter; and the parlour, when we were ushered into it, fully carried out the promise thus held forth on the doorstep. It was respectable, but in wretched taste as regards colours. I, who have the nicest taste in such matters, looked about me in dismay as I encountered the greens and blues, the crimsons and the purples which everywhere surrounded me.

But I was not on a visit to a temple of art, and resolutely shutting my eyes to the offending splendour about me—worsted splendour, you understand,—I waited with subdued expectation for the lady of the house.

She came in presently, bedecked in a flowered gown that was an epitome of the blaze of colours everywhere surrounding us; but her face was a good one, and I saw that I had neither guile nor over-much shrewdness to contend with.

She had seen the coach at the door and she was all smiles and flutter.

"You have come for the poor girl who stopped here a few days ago," she began, glancing from my face to Lena's with an equally inquiring air, which in itself would have shown her utter ignorance of social distinctions if I had not bidden Lena to keep at my side and hold her head up as if she had business there as well as myself.

"Yes," returned I, "we have. Lena here, has lost a relative (which was true,) and knowing no other way of finding her, I suggested the insertion of an advertisement in the paper. You read the description given, of course. Has the person answering it been in this house?"

"Yes; she came on the morning of the eighteenth. I remember it because that was the very day my cook left, and I have not got another yet." She sighed and went on. "I took a great interest in that unhappy young woman—Was she your sister?" This, somewhat doubtfully, to Lena, who perhaps had too few colours on to suit her.

"No," answered Lena, "she wasn't my sister, but——

I immediately took the words out of her mouth.

At what time did she come here, and how long did she stay? We want to find her very much. Did she give you any name, or tell where she was going?"

"She said her name was Oliver." (I thought of the O. R. on the clothes at the laundry.) "But I knew this wasnt so; and if she had not looked so very honest, I might have hesitated to take her in. But, lor! I can't resist a girl in trouble, and she was in trouble, if ever a girl was. And then she had money—Do you know what her trouble was?" This aagin to Lena, and with an air at once suspicious and curious. But Lena has a good face, too, and her frank eyes at once armed the weak and good-natured woman before us.

"I thought'—she went on before Lena could answer—"that whatever it was, you had nothing to do with it, nor this lady either."

"No," answered Lena, seeing that I wished her to do the talking. "And we dont know" (which was true enough so far as Lena went) "just what her trouble was. Didn't she tell you?"

"She told nothing. When she came she said she wanted to stay with me a little while. I sometimes take boarders—' She had twenty in the house at that minute, if she had one. Did she think I couldnt see the length of her dining-room table through the crack of the parlour door?' "If I can pay," she said, which I had not doubted, for her blouse was a very expensive one; though I thought her skirt looked queer, and her hat—Did I say she had a hat on? You seemed to doubt that fact in your advertisement. Goodness me! if she had had no hat on, she wouldn't have got as far as my parlour mat. But her blouse showed her to be a lady—and then her face—it was as white as your handkerchief there, madam, but so sweet—I thought of the Madonna faces I had seen in Catholic churches."

I started; inwardly commenting: "Madonna-like, that woman!" But a glance at the room about me reassured me. The owner of such hideous sofas and chairs and of the many pictures effacing or rather defacing the paper on the walls, could not be a judge of Madonna faces.

"You admire everything that is good and lovely," I suggested, for Mrs. Desberger had paused at the movement I made.

"Yes, it is my nature to do, ma'am. I love the beautiful," and she cast a half-apologetic, half-proud look about her. "So I listened to the girl and let her sit down in the parlour. She had nothing to eat that morning, and though she didn't ask for it, I went to order her a cup of tea, for I knew she couldn't get up-stairs without it. Her eyes followed me when I went out of the room in a way that haunted me, and when I came back—I shall never forget it, ma'am—there she lay stretched out on the floor with her face on the ground and her hands thrown out. Wasn't it horrible, ma'am? I don't wonder you shudder."

Did I shudder? If I did, it was because I was thinking of that other woman, the victim of this one, whom I had seen, with her face turned upward and her arms outstretched, in the gloom of Mr. Van Burnam's half-closed parlour.

"She looked as if she was dead," the good woman continued, "but just as I was about to call for help, her fingers moved and I rushed to lift her. She was neither dead nor had fainted; she was simply dumb with misery. What could have happened to her? I have asked myself a hundred times."

My mouth was shut very tight, but I shut it still tighter, for the temptation was great to cry: "She had just committed murder!" As it was, no sound whatever left my lips, and the good woman doubtless thought me no better than a stone, for she turned with a shrug to Lena, repeating still more wistfully than before:

"Don't you know what her trouble was?"

But, of course, poor Lena had nothing to say, and the woman went on with a sigh:

"Well, I suppose I shall never know what had used that poor creature up so completely. But whatever it was, it gave me enough trouble, though I do not want to complain of it, for why are we here, if not to help and comfort the miserable. It was an hour, ma'am; it was an hour, miss, before I could get that poor girl to speak; but when I did succeed, and had got her to drink the tea and eat a bit of toast, then I felt quite repaid by the look of gratitude she gave me and the way she clung to my sleeve when I tried to leave her for a minute. It was this sleeve, ma'am," she explained, lifting a cluster of rainbow flounces and ribbons which but a minute before had looked little short of ridiculous in my eyes, but which in the light of the wearer's kind-heartedness had lost some of their offensive appearance.

"Poor Mary!" murmured Lena, with what I considered most admirable presence of mind.

"What name did you say?" cried Mrs. Desberger, eager enough to learn all she could of her late mysterious lodger.

On Irish Stew

Irish Stew.

Put in a stewpan twelve peeled potatoes, sliced the thickness of a penny, four large onions, sliced—a layer of each—with salt and pepper to taste. By successive layers half fill your pan. Then take four chops of neck of mutton, the scrag end. Lay these on the potatoes and onions and fill up with additional layers of potatoes, onions, etc., as before. In 1½ pints of water boil 1½ oz. of Edwards' Waste Vegetable Soup for 30 minutes, add it to the contents of the stewpan, and simmer all together gently for two hours.

Mrs. Edwards comes from Ireland—what she doesn't know about Irish stews isn't worth knowing at all. You can make Irish Stew as well as Mrs. Edwards does, if you follow the simple recipe above. But be sure to use Edwards' Soup—be certain to boil it for half-an-hour. No bother. Come—give them an Irish Stew for dinner to-day.

EDWARDS' DESICCATED SOUPS

But you MUST boil them for half-an-hour—worth it.

5c

Edwards' Soups is good as a soup by itself, it is good as a strengthener of other soups; good as a thickener of gravies; good for hashes, good for stews—use packet and tablet, but the tablet is the quicker; don't let them be spoiled by insufficient boiling. Of all wholesale and retail Grocers, 5c.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.

CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

WOMEN OF ABYSSINIA.

The women of Abyssinia are industrious, rising early and completing most of the housework before the appearance of their husbands; they do a certain amount of work in the fields as well. They occupy an inferior position and have few enjoyments. Their condition does not, however, deprive them of the pleasures of vanity. To enhance their natural charms they dye their finger and toe nails red, and show their teeth to greater advantage by painting their gums black. The eyebrows are sharply defined by art and the breast neck and back are not unfrequently embellished by elaborate tattoo designs. Yet their appeal is primarily made to the sense of smell and not to that of sight. Scents are highly valued and lavishly used, so that to a European, the effect produced is exactly opposite to that desired. Over a richly-embroidered silk shirt, an Abyssinian woman often wears elaborate jewelry of beautiful design and workmanship. She wears elaborately finished earrings and is fond of adorning her wrists and ankles with glittering bracelets and bangles. Girls are married at the age of 14 and 15, being sold by their parents, who receive money or cattle in return. The marriage ceremony provides one of many welcome opportunities for feasting and drinking; and any quarrels arising from these carousals are invariably settled outside the courts of justice. In Abyssinia, like an ancient Judea, custom decrees that a man shall marry his brother's widow.

Abyssinia presents many points of interest to the students of ethnology. An ancient kingdom of established repute in the days of Homer; the home of Prester John, whose legendary personality stamped itself so deeply on the mediaeval imagination; cradle of Christianity in the heart of Africa from the fourth century onward, Abyssinia now presents the somewhat melancholy spectacle of a dying culture, while her one-time glories have vanished into something less substantial than the mirage of the desert.

The present population is mixed, Egyptian, Greeks, Jew, Portuguese, Indian, Arab and negro intermingle, and in the chaos of their conflicting interests and beliefs the old culture dies fast. In the state religion, Christianity, and in Abyssinian Mahommedanism there are many traces of pagan superstitions and practices to which some of the inhabitants are wholly given up. All of them believe in evil spirits of various forms and shapes, endowed with different powers of malignity. Some haunt dark corners by the wayside, others lurk in cemeteries; some possess their victims with madness, others inflict diseases upon them; one, particularly baneful, known as Lilith, seeks to destroy children in infancy.

The state of manners and morals in Abyssinia is as low as might be looked for in a country so long a prey to anarchy and violence. The men, however, are almost fanatically brave, although they receive no military training. In 1896, they annihilated an Italian army of invasion 30,000 strong, capturing all their heavy guns and other war material.

Women in Coal Mines.

In the early part of the last century women enjoyed the right to work in the coal mines of Great Britain, swinging the sledge, or on hands and knees hauling through the midnight darkness of low roofed tunnels carts laden with ore weighing hundreds of pounds

Ancient Waterworks.

Hezekiah, king of Judah, who reigned in the years 727 to 698 B.C., was a pioneer in constructing a system of waterworks, bringing water into the city of Jerusalem. In the holy book we read: "He made the pool, and conduit, and brought the water into the city, stopping the upper part of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." From the "pools of Solomon," near Bethlehem, water was conveyed to Jerusalem a distance of six or seven miles, through a conduit of earthen pipe about ten inches in diameter. The pipe was bedded within two stones, hewn out to fit it, then covered over with rough stones cemented together.

How Fouche Stood Up to Napoleon.

In his volume, "The New France," W. S. Lilly notes that Fouche was the only man who had the courage to stand up to his imperial master.

Napoleon, who, perhaps, was less of a gentleman than any man that has ever achieved greatness, took pleasure in brutally reminding him of his vote for the murder of Louis XVI. "Yes, sire," Fouche imperturbably replied, "that was the first service which I had the happiness of rendering to your majesty." On another occasion, "Duke of Otranto," the sovereign said, "I ought to have you beheaded." "Sire, that is not my opinion," was the Minister's calm reply.

Grandma Used Sage Tea To Darken Hair

She Mixed Sulphur with it to Restore, Colour, Gloss, Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, grey or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

How the Dutch Eat.

A Dutch meal is always reminiscent of a game of cards, for the mother deals out all round the table, and when that first hand is played out she deals afresh, and so on until the dish is empty. There is no promiscuous serving, as with us, and the quick feeder (if such a person could exist in leisurely Holland) reaps no advantage. If meals are to be likened to games of cards, our meals in Dutch eyes must look like games of "grab."—London Queen.

Working the Game at an English Watering Place.

STORY OF A WORRIED WOMAN.

It Caught the Interest and Sympathy of the Prosperous Loungers at the Fashionable Hotel, and the Rest of the Scheme Was Easy.

The prosperous were lounging on the terrace of the leading hotel in the fashionable watering place passing themselves. It was a magnificent afternoon. Everybody was highly good tempered and contributed to the general air of well fed contentment. Also then "the woman" put in an appearance.

For a moment she stood on the stone steps that led up to the terrace, hesitating. The prosperous" gazed at her and wondered why she was there. They probably classified her as one of the "undesirable poor."

"The woman" could not disguise the fact that she was in trouble of some sort. She advanced upon "the prosperous" and glanced timidly from face to face. Then, gathering her courage in both hands, she walked right past them into the vestibule of the hotel.

A little buzz of speculation arose. There was no doubt about it. They found "the woman" interesting.

"I wonder what's worrying her?" said one.

"Perhaps she thinks of putting up and is a bit doubtful about the quality," cackled a would be wit. The cold stare with which his remark was received told him that it was considered to be in decidedly bad taste. As a fact, "the prosperous" were inclined to feel sympathy for "the woman." They had been well fed, and it was a magnificent afternoon; also they were peculiarly curious.

Soon she came out again, looking more dejected than ever. She looked around as if for a less public means of escape, but, finding none, strode despairingly forward.

"My good woman, you seem to be in trouble. Can I do anything?"

It was the elderly military looking man in the corner who spoke—spoke gruffly as one who is ill at the thought of doing future mischievously. "The prosperous" thought it a trifle daring. But they were secretly glad. And they listened.

"No, sir, thank you," replied "the woman."

And then she belied her words by a muffled sob.

"I—I—it's nothing, sir—nothing at all," she added.

"Have the goodness to take that chair," he said peremptorily, "and tell us the truth. I have no doubt that we shall be able to assist you."

When she had partly composed herself "the woman" stammered out her story, with the aid of much prompting from her companion.

"I am a widow, a color sergeant in the Welsh Grays my husband was. I let lodgings in the town. There was a gentleman called Colonel Merrish [illegible] three months ago, and six months; said he'd pay me as soon as his dividends or somethin' came in at the half year.

"I managed to hold out and gave him the good table as he was accustomed to, though my means owing the landlord. But I'm so afeerful to have the gentry in my house."

"The prosperous" murmured sympathetically.

"Just before the six months was up, he said he'd have to come up and stay at the hotel to meet one of the directors who was going to pay him all money. And now they tell me that there never was no one here by the name of Colonel Morrish. And—and—the landlord comes into my house this morning, an' they'll take all my furniture for it, and I owe the landlord."

"Twelve pounds!" repeated the military looking man. He hesitated and then grumbled in his mustache: "Well, that's it, here is £2 [illegible]." And his voice was gruff again.

He glared fiercely at the dark little woman by his side, who promptly began the fumbling process to cover his confusion.

Others fumbled too, and in the end in a couple of minutes the £12 was there.

"I—I—can't take it, sir. I"—

"Madam, don't talk like a fool!" thundered the military looking man. "Run home and pay out those—bailiffs."

* * * * * * *

Late that evening in a room in the poorer quarters of the town "the woman" was fingering the sovereigns.

"That's ten quid on the good, anyhow!" she said complacently. "Where shall we try next?"

"Don't know, old girl. But I was thinking of Brighton."

It was the military-looking man who answered.—London Answers.

Aldine Editions.

The introduction of the sloping Roman letters which are known to everybody as italics was made by Aldus Manutius of Venice in the latter part of the fifteenth century. He was the most famous printer of Italy and perhaps of the world. The books he printed, known as Aldine editions, are much sought after by collectors. His first volume in the new type was a Vergil published in 1501 at the price of about 2 shillings of our money. Aldus, in fact, was the pioneer of cheap literature.

The Aldine mark is a dolphin twined about an anchor with the name "Aldvs." If any reader says Mr. J. A. Gade in the imprint, finds a curious old books with this mark in his little or lumber room, he is duly advised not to use them for lighting the fire. They would probably buy him a small annuity for the solace of his declining years.

How Koreans Advertise.

Although the Korean has stubbornly refused to adopt western ideas, he has always recognized the value of advertisement. When a Korean opens a new shop or has any particular wares he is anxious to dispose of or when a nobleman desires to convey a certain piece of intelligence to the people he seeks the services of the sandwich men. In the Hermit Kingdom, however, these men do not carry boards upon which the desired information is made known to all and sundry, but rent for the medium of picturesque [illegible] upon which the announcement is inscribed. Anything from one to a dozen [illegible] may be requisitioned, and these are carried through the streets by boys and men, forming a picturesque moving advertisement.—World Magazine.

Not His Fault.

One of the women belonging to the Mothers' club at the settlement house came to excuse herself from the meeting with her face swollen and highly discolored. She was hiding it with a shawl, and she explained earnestly: "He wouldn't have done it for anything, not for a hundred dollars. But he wasn't himself, and I said something that crossed him. Then he done it, but he's sorry. I black awful easy, anyway."—Everybody's.

Quear Taxes Abroad.

There are some queer taxes imposed in some of the countries of the old world.

In Servia vanity is taxed, a 40 per cent tax on wigs, on rouge and on paint and bustles.

Bachelors are heavily taxed in several countries, but spinsters everywhere escape this impost.

Matrimony is taxed in China, and the older the bridegroom is than the bride the greater the tax levied on him. It is the wise Chinese custom that when an old man gets a young wife he is necessarily a rich old man and well able to stand a heavy tax.

In Italy salt is taxed. Marriages are taxed in France. These things yield an enormous revenue, and the tax is very little felt.

Germany taxes music. If you play the piano you must pay a tax, and if you play you must pay a tax.

Before Going Elsewhere.

"Good morning, Mr. Highprice!" greeted the friend, entering Mr. Highprice's furniture store. "I saw your ad. in the newspaper saying that you would be pleased to have your friends call in on you before going elsewhere to buy, so I thought I'd call."

"Very good!" returned the appreciative Mr. Highprice, rubbing his hands. "Now, what can I sell you?"

"Nothing. I told you I was going elsewhere."

Explaining His Choice.

"If you could choose, Billups," said Waggles, "which would you take—a wife or a motorcar?"

"A motorcar every time," said Billups, "because, you see, if I had a motorcar the chances are I could get a wife, but if I had a wife it's ten to one I'd never be able to afford the car."

Tells of Underground Indian Dances White Men Never See

STRANGEST of all the Indian dances are those that take place in secret lodges under ground. No outsider is ever permitted to witness these and their character can only be surmised from the dances that take place in the plaza. Dr. Herbert J. Spinden, of the American Museum of Natural History, has recently returned from a four months' sojourn among the Pueblo Indians of the Upper Rio Grande. He was especially interested in the Tewa Indians, as his studies on this trip were almost wholly ethnological, and the rich mythology of the Tewas offered him a mine of material.

"Most persons think of those dances of the Indians which were really war dances as being the only ones which were practised," said Dr. Spinden. "As a matter of fact there are numerous dances, extremely interesting and very old, in which women as well as men participate and which have nothing to do with warfare. Few of these are wholly secret, although some of them have that element. Practically all of them have a religious origin and to-day retain a religious significance.

"The Tewa, are a simple, agricultural people and their homes are doubtless the oldest of any in the United States.

"When the Spanish came they converted the Indians to the Roman Catholic religion, and nominally these Indians are still Catholics."

But while many of the Tewas retain many of the beliefs and ceremonies of the Catholic religion, they combine with the many of the myths and observances of the religion that antedated their acceptance of the Christian. It was because of the early opposition of the Catholic priests to this adherence to the old rites and customs that the people sought secret places under ground in which to practise them. And, although the necessity for the secrecy has passed, they still hold these secret meetings, have dances that no white man has ever seen and keep up other traditions with a constancy and seclusion incomprehensible to men of a different race.

Some white men say they have penetrated to these underground lodges and have seen what was done there, but Dr. Spinden does not believe that they have ever been present at the carefully guarded ceremonies. The most that they have done is to see the vacant room or perhaps some dance of no great significance. So cautious are they that when there is to be one of these important conclaves at one of the villages an Indian is sent with a roll of cloth to cover the windows and doors of the house in which the teacher, who is much loved and respected, lives in order that she may not see anything that goes on. Of course she is not permitted to go out of the house. Formerly some one was left on guard, but they trust her now sufficiently to content themselves with fastening up her house. Any stranger who was in the neighborhood would be jealously watched lest he should get any inkling of what went on in the underground room.

These lodges always contain an altar, and although most of them seem to have no connection with the outside world except the obscure entrance, they have a splendid system of ventilation. The participants in these underground dances are always masked.

While the American (whom they call the red neck, not the white man, by the way) may not penetrate to the underground chambers and witness the most sacred dances, he may see in the plaza dances of great variety and interest, deeply significant, each one a little drama in itself. The Tewas, being an agricultural people and depending largely upon the amount of rain that falls in a given time for the success or failure of their crops, put their heart and their skill into the dances which they perform in the hope of drawing the beneficent moisture of the heavens down to earth. One of the dances takes its name, tablita, from the curiously shaped "little tablets" which the women dancers wear on their heads.

These tower high above the straight hanging black locks of hair, the ends being tipped with soft feathers simulating clouds. The men wear very little clothing, the women appearing in the customary black dress, sometimes ornamented with some bright beadwork or embroidery. The dancers scarcely lift their feet from the ground, but keep them moving rhythmically in time to the music. The most of the motion is confined to the knees, hands and arms. In their hands they hold fruits, leaves or flowers, a favorite branch being that of the sacred pine, which is reputed to have grown in the underground world.

There are many dances representing animals, that of the eagle being especially dramatic. The man who is to take the part of the eagle is wonderfully made up.

Over the head is drawn a sort of sack of black cloth that covers the hair and is pulled forward to form a beak. A red line running around the mouth and curling up on each cheek gives the mouth of the eagle. On the body there is little clothing except a short apron and patches of eagle down attached by a gum to the flesh. The arms are made into wings by means of a cord strung with long hanging feathers stretched from hand to hand across the back and a bunch of feathers at the back make a tail. His hands are painted yellow to look like claws. He is lured forth by the dropping of corn, and as he follows this trail he uses his arms as the eagle does his wings, and with his entire body he swoops and moves like the bird he is picturing, but always in time to the music.

Watching the Snake Dance.

The Tablita Dance.

A Hopi Maiden.

A Tewa Woman.

In another dance a man represents a dog. He is made up to look as much like one as possible, and is led forth by an Indian maiden who has tied her sash about his body and leads him forth as a woman does her poodle on a leash, except that they are both keeping time to the steps of the dance. He constantly struggles to break away and she makes the rhythmic effort to hold him. Sometimes he succeeds and rushes into houses for meat, bites persons on the leg and otherwise carries out the idea of a dog on the rampage.

In a similar way other animals are represented, always with the combined dramatic idea and dancing movements.

There are many sacred lakes of great beauty among the mountains in the Pueblo region which are visited by the Indians for "medicine water." From these lakes the gods are called from below by the delight makers for the masked dances. These men are painted with bands of black and white. Blowing ashes from their hands, they point out the gods approaching on the edge of a cloud. Some of the Indians carry sticks, with which they make a sound resembling wind and rain. Their bodies and garments are also painted with emblems of rain and of the fruitful seasons. The younger members of the Tewa tribe are never permitted to see these dances, although they may hear the songs. They are supposed to believe that the persons behind the masks are really gods.

The Tewas also worship the sun, the horned serpent that presides over the lake, and they regard the moon with awe. They also believe in witches, who carry witch medicine, and among their divinities are "the salt old woman," "the spider old woman" and "the turquoise old man."

Although Dr. Spinden's explorations were chiefly among the Tewas, he saw a snake dance at Walpi, Ariz., and obtained for the museum a snake dance costume ornamented with rainbows and snakes. The snake dance, which has been witnessed by many outsiders, is given every second year in most of the Hopi pueblos.

"To secure the snakes the priests go out in pairs, provided with digging sticks, snake whips of feathers and bags of buckskin or canvas. The first day they go to the north, the second day to the west, the third day to the south and the fourth day to the east. If a sufficient number of snakes is not found in these four days they are looked for at other times and places. Chiefly rattlesnakes are used, but bull snakes and some other species are sometimes employed. They are usually found by following their trails in the dust. If the snake is uncoiled a little cornmeal is thrown to it; it is then seized by the neck, gently stroked and put into the bag. If it coils a prayer is said and tobacco smoke is blown toward it until it uncoils. If the trail leads to a hole it is dug out with a digging stick.

"Both the snake and the antelope priests make altars in their kivas. At Oraibi the snake altar is made on the evening of the first day. The head priest brings into the kiva two wooden images of great apparent antiquity. The larger represents Pookong, the elder of the war god twins; the smaller may be intended for his brother or for some other divinity.

"The antelope altar is made in another kiva on the fifth day of the ceremony. The painting consists of a number of semi-circular cloud terraces, with a similar border of colored bands. On two sides are rows of sticks, some of them carved, which represent the deceased members of the order. At the back of the altar are the fetishes and the tiponi, the society symbol, kept by the head of the order as a badge of his office. Around this altar a most important rite is held. One of the priests and a woman relative of some member are especially dressed and impersonate antelope man and antelope maiden. The snake priests enter, bringing a snake, which the antelope man holds during the ceremony. The priests smoke, blowing the smoke toward the altar; clouds of tobacco smoke are also blown from a cloud blower, and a priest, appointed for the purpose, sprinkles a specially prepared fluid. On the ninth and last day of the ceremony, after the two lines of snake priests have made the circuit of the plaza, they go in pairs to the booth. One of each pair is given a snake, which he holds in his mouth. His companion follows by his side with a snake whip, with which to soothe the snake if there should be need. They move in this way down the plaza for some yards, when the snake is dropped. Each pair of dancers is followed by a third snake priest, who picks up the snakes as they fall and keeps them in his hands. When his hands are full he passes some of them to the antelope priests, who are still in line. The dancers return for additional snakes until the entire number, fifty or more, have been carried in the dance. The head snake priest then makes a large circle of cornmeal and draws six radii, which represent the world quarters. Into this circle the snakes are thrown in a heap and the women sprinkle them plentifully with cornmeal. At a given signal the snake priests approach, grab as many snakes as they can hold in each hand, run down the trails to the plain and release the snakes."

Shanghaied Men Forced by Oyster Pirates to Serve as Galley Slaves

New York Man Returns a Physical Wreck After Captors Release Him When No Longer Able to Work.

A CRIPPLE for life, maimed and broken by his awful experiences while working as a galley slave on the deck of an oyster schooner in Chesapeake Bay after he had been shanghaied in Baltimore, Arthur Mulvaney is back in New York after many months of lingering illness in a Baltimore hospital. That he will never be able to earn a livelihood in the future is the opinion of his physician, who further asserts that it is little short of a miracle that he survived the ordeal and the awful suffering that must have been his.

Mulvaney, once hale and hearty, was reared in the Bronx, but, inspired by a desire to branch out for himself and shoot afresh in a community where he thought he would have better opportunities for his limited capital, he settled in Baltimore. A few weeks later he was a prisoner aboard an oyster schooner, which, when he gained consciousness, was well on her course to the oyster beds in a remote estuary of the Chesapeake. This was in early December. Late in February he was set ashore at a remote point, penniless, racked by the awful suffering from frostbitten face, hands and feet and an attack of pneumonia incidental to the hardships he had undergone. He had his way as best he could to a sheltering farm house or any other haven that loomed.

"It was nearly a year ago that I left New York," the victim said. "I had paid a previous visit to Baltimore and thereupon decided that opportunities awaited me there that might never come to me here. I had a little nest egg of about $2,200, and after looking the field over thoroughly I decided upon a business I intended to purchase a small interest in. Well, to be brief, the obvious happened. I was young, I had never been away from home for any length of time, and, arriving in a strange city, like the average chap of my age—I was only twenty-three—I wanted to see all there was to be seen. I fell in with a gay set in Baltimore, and we took to the Tenderloin, Baltimore's Rialto in limited. It extends for two blocks in North Howard street and a block or two west in Franklin street. That is all there is to it, for this restricted area embraces the theatre district. The Tenderloin palling upon us, we extended our explorations and wandered to the docks and to the water front, taking in the dives, dance halls and "barrel houses," frequented by sailors and oystermen, in lower Broadway and Marsh Market space.

"It was in The Space that I met my captain—shanghai they called him—or Waterloo, for I am confident that somewhere within its purlieus I was shanghaied. Doubtless my drink was drugged or else I was struck over the head with a sandbag. In any event, when I regained my senses I was lying in a dimly lighted, foul, dank and evil smelling bunk, and from the rocking motion of my quarters and the monotonous and unmistakable lapping of waves near by I realized I was aboard a craft of some sort and, further, that we were proceeding at a lively clip.

"The object of my presence there, however, was brought home to me the next morning when I was piped to the cabin to partake of the apology for food which constituted the unwholesome and nauseating breakfast, served to us just as dawn was streaking the east.

"Aroused to the fighting pitch and determined to make at least one brave stand, I assailed the person I took to be the captain and demanded that I be liberated at once. Derisive laughter was his reply, but to accentuate his scorn for me he again struck me in the face, this time so forcibly that I was stunned. Dazed and bleeding profusely, I made my way to the deck, seriously contemplating the advisability of choosing the lesser of two evils and ending it all then and there by jumping overboard.

"But my reveries were short lived. The captain—shanghai they called him—ordered me below and before I could protest an iron anklet encircled my left leg and the chain attached to it was so short that I could not move more than five or six feet in any direction.

"One of the oystermen, rough as he was, proved to be my only friend on board that pirate ship. In a few gruff words he explained my situation to me.

"'The captain was in need of a crew,' he said, 'all the men he brought to Baltimore with him from the last trip to the oyster beds far down the Potomac River having deserted. You were lying drunk in a Marsh Market Space grill and the captain had you taken to the schooner. Two other young fellows were picked up in the same way. There are four regulars among us. I and three other oystermen. We signed for the trip. We are to be paid regular wages. You and the other fellows get what the captain thinks you are worth. If your work pleases him and you sign papers you can land when we get back to Baltimore. If you don't sign the papers you will get what I'd hate to think was coming to me.'

"And he was right. I didn't sign the papers and I got what once I thought was more than any human could stand. Not only was I chained like a wild beast, given food that would have sickened a dog, but I was clubbed, beaten and made to work like a galley slave, scantily clad as I was, in freezing weather where gales blew with the fury of hurricanes and until I dropped from sheer exhaustion.

"My two comrades in misery and myself were kept at our tasks from dawn until nightfall, that is as long as we were able to stand on our feet. Finally, when we were in such a terrible physical state that the brutal captain realized that he could no longer make use of us, for, in reality, we 'weren't worth our miserable keep,' he set about to find a place where we could be landed. This occurred on a lonely point far below Annapolis.

"Although we were penniless and almost dead from pain and exhaustion, we were so overjoyed at be freed from our bondage aboard the schooner that we took renewed hope and set out to find a place where we could have our injuries attended to. A farmer found us dragging our weary limbs along a clay road, little better than a quagmire, and he kindly volunteered to take us to Annapolis, where we could get proper medical attention. We were admitted to a hospital there, but as we were eager to lodge complaint against the pirate captain we determined we would go on to Baltimore, since that was the port we had been kidnapped from. This we did, but we were so ill upon arriving in the Monumental City that we were sent to a hospital at once and there we lay for several months. We made the complaint and the police manifested some activity in trying to find the captain who had shanghaied us, but as far as I have been able to ascertain he has never been apprehended. If I ever recover sufficiently to return to Baltimore I shall take up the search myself, for if it is my last act I intend to see that that brute is brought to justice."

Mulvaney said that since his return to New York city he has learned that another little windfall in the form of a legacy from his grandfather's estate has come to him, and this sum he has laid aside to finance the hunt he will institute for the pirate schooner and her commander. He is to meet his comrades of that terrible trip again, and as soon as he is able to travel they intend to join forces and try to see that their abductor is apprehended.

The case of Mulvaney is but one of many that occur each year on the Chesapeake. A few years ago there were so many of these, and, strange to say, so many of the victims came from Philadelphia, that the police of that city got busy and, acting on their own initiative, rounded up several of the shanghai captains and they were speedily prosecuted. It has been a practice extending back over a number of years and the oyster navies of Maryland and Virginia have fought many a desperate battle with the pirates before capturing them.

Guarded by an Armed Man.

Feminine Point of View.

Black velvet is more the rage than ever, and it bids fair to be always with us. During the summer it reigned supreme and unsurpassed, and nobody dared to ignore it when designing hats and sashes. It would have been logical to suppose that in winter we would therefore give it a well deserved rest. Not a bit of it. All the smartest coats are still of velvet, and as often as not of black velvet.

They hang loosely away from the figure in to-day's favorite manner and are belted very low down with black satin. Worn with a draped velvet skirt, which displays a discreet glimpse of some charming lining to match that of the coat, these garments have a great deal of chic, especially when accompanied by the latest thing in furs.

Veiled Bride Would Not Disclose Face to Husband Until He Had Said "I Do"

Ceremony Culminated Romance in Which Neither Principal Saw the Other Until Married

NOTHING like the mystery of a veil to pique interest!

Mrs. Marion C. Arnett might have been married to Dr. Francis W. Hartley and beyond the trite statement of facts no notice would have been taken of the event except by their nearest and dearest. But Mrs. Arnett elected to hide her face until after the wedding, and the whole situation became tinged with romance. All mankind was set a-wondering about the features and coloring of a bride who hid her charms from her accepted suitor.

Presumably neither Dr. Hartley nor Mrs. Arnett was impetuous. She had had one husband and he had had two wives. There is no report of their having been unhappy in their former matrimonial alliances. Perhaps this was in part responsible for their mutual trustfulness. At any rate the bridegroom was willing to take his veiled bride and await the revelation of her pulchritude until after the knot should be securely tied making them man and wife.

The wedding was the culmination of a courtship begun in Cuba and carried on under remarkable circumstances. The first time that the physician heard the voice of Mrs. Arnett was over the long distance telephone, he having been introduced to her through a matrimonial bureau. Before speaking to her he had not exchanged a word with any woman, in pursuance of a vow made upon the death of his second wife, in 1912. The year was up last July, whereupon he published a memorial to his lamented wife and sought a worthy successor to her.

Mrs. Arnett was responsible for the statement that the suggestion that she be not seen until after the marriage did not come from her but from Dr. Hartley. She asserted that she did not even know what his reasons were for making such a strange request. She was perfectly willing to comply, however, and even advised all pretty girls to pursue the same course. "As long as the brides are all they should be morally and physically," she is reported to have said, "it would be a good thing if their future husbands had not seen them beforehand. In the future," she remarked complacently, "Dr. Hartley would never be able to tell her that he had married her for her looks. If she were passably fair to look upon he would be satisfied; if she were more than that he would be the more pleasantly surprised."

After the Ceremony the Veil Was Lifted.

Two weddings were arranged, one at the parsonage and the other in the church. Dr. Hartley was known in England under the name of Helyer, and in order to insure everything being legal he was married under both names. During both ceremonies Mrs. Arnett agreed to wear a veil, no filmy breath of tulle, which only softens the charms that it is supposed to conceal, but a veil that should actually mask the face. The bridegroom was under honor not to peep until the fateful words had been spoken that bound them together as man and wife. According to his statement he never even saw a picture of the woman he asked to marry him, had talked with no one about her appearance and was prepared to be taken entirely by surprise when his eyes rested upon her, his lawful, wedded wife.

Is he a brave man, a wise man, a foolish one or a reckless one? He has been called all of these by men more prudent than he seems to be. Whatever he is, there is a piquancy to his marriage that might well be envied by a man dragged through the conventions of the ordinary wedding with a bride whom he has seen every day since they became engaged. At the most she has worn a picture veil, or a shadow veil, or an automobile veil, and he has lifted it whenever he was so minded. He knows the lineaments of her face as well or better than the contour of his own. He is not the least surprised when on the wedding day the tulle of her wedding veil is thrown back.

Some one has been unkind enough to suggest that Dr. Hartley felt confident of being able to remake his bride's face to suit his taste if it did not prove to his liking. That man had no notion of romance. Dr. Hartley beyond a doubt seeks a new kind of fascination—taking his loved one's presence for granted and the joy of finding afterward that he was right.

The mystery of the veil has served its purpose even in these practical days in the United States of America.

Fashion's Inconstancy.

Fashion has no reason nowadays, and it does not astonish anybody when for fringe summer frocks and tulle is supposed to be the ideal wear for winter, or that, whereas in summer the long sleeve reigned supreme, with the coming of winter we have the short sleeve again with us.

It is true that even when receiving in their own homes the fashionable French women wear long, supple, natural colored kidskin gloves, entirely without buttons, and the latest chic thing is for these same gloves, that are so long that they hide the whole length of the arm, being worn over the long sleeve, but the effect seemed to be too clumsy and last season cast a shadow of doubt and to the change in the length of the sleeve.

To prevent disease- resist disease germs

SMALLPOX is prevented by vaccination — the injection of vaccine.
DIPHTHERIA is prevented by the injection of anti-toxin.
These enable the body to produce substances which prevent the growth of smallpox and diphtheria germs in the blood.

There are many other diseases, nearly, if not quite as dangerous, and far more common — typhoid fever, the grippe, bronchitis, pneumonia, catarrh, rheumatism, and a score of others — that can be prevented less painfully and more easily by making the body strong to resist germ infection.

Rexall
TRADE MARK

Olive Oil Emulsion
(With Hypophosphites)

Is designed for the prevention as well as the relief of disease — by enabling the body to overcome the germs. It, at the same time, strengthens and tones the nerves, nourishes the blood, puts the entire system into a proper healthy condition to combat and successfully resist disease.

Every person not in perfect health has incipient germs of some distressing ailment in his or her system.

Cold weather, over-work, excesses of any kind, are liable to bring about just the conditions under which those latent disease germs will get the upper hand, and put you on your back "down sick."

You who are run-down, tired-out, nervous —

You who, though not sick enough to give up, still don't feel good —

You who are apparently well, and want to stay well —

Take home a bottle of Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion today, and use it as a means to get well and keep well.

In this it is different from most other so-called "tonics" which either have no food value and do nothing more than temporarily stimulate you, leaving you in a worse condition than before or, having food value, still are so unpleasant to take that many people can't keep them down.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is pleasant to take. The Hypophosphites it contains tone the nerves. The pure Olive Oil nourishes both nerves and blood.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion strengthens you, puts snap and ginger and vitality into your system. It makes you feel better and stronger. It improves your digestion and your bowel action.

It contains no alcohol nor any dangerous or habit forming drugs.

It is guaranteed to be just as represented above — to do all that is claimed above — to satisfy you in every way, or your money back without quibble or question.

Enough for full two weeks' treatment, $1.00.

A Tiny Death Dealer.

A most agonizing death is caused by an insect half the size of a pea—a small black spider. It lives in Peru, in South America. This spider's venom reaches up the blood vessels and spreads through all the tissues, causing the most fearful agony a human being can have to bear. The worst of it is that the victim lives at least two days, enduring unthinkable anguish the whole time. The spider is luckily not common. It is known as the "speedy," and when a man who knows what the bite means is bitten he generally blows out his brains.

DUELLING DAYS

Young Bloods Practised With Long-Barrelled Pistols

By the end of the seventeenth century the pistol had come fairly into vogue as a duellist's weapon in England, and from that time forward pistol duels were frequent—more frequent than those with the sword. Gunmakers devoted their best workmanship to duelling pistols, and at duelling range, say up to twenty paces, these weapons were as near perfection as skill could make them. The latter-day pistol had a ten-inch barrel, and carried a ball of 48 to the pound. Only constant practice would make a good shot, and a very high standard of marksmanship was set for the man who aspired to be considered an expert with the pistol. When he could hit twelve wafers at fourteen yards, and do it within six minutes, loading his pistol himself between shots, he might consider himself proficient; and it will be borne in mind that the muzzle-loading pistol took several seconds to properly charge.

Proficiency, of course, was not everything. It was quite as daunting to face a pistol at twelve yards as to face the sword at close quarters, and no proficiency at wafers would atone for nervousness on the ground. One ardent practitioner schooled himself with a contrivance of his own invention. He had the life-size figure of a man with a bracketed hand in which a pistol could be held at the "present," and by means of a cord from the trigger of the pistol in the dummy's grasp to his own belt, he discharged the weapon himself as he fired his own pistol, by slightly drawing back.

Great stress was laid on the importance of aiming at a small object. "Mark well one of the gilt buttons on his coat; a person can never fire with accuracy unless he aim at some small object." Which explains why the experienced duellist "went out" dressed entirely in black, that his person might offer no such mark as the gilt button of an older day.

Being in position, the men each held his arm well in to the side and raised his pistol to the proper level, keeping the head straight, the eyes turned as much to the right as possible, and the pistol directed steadily towards the small object—that gilt button, if the adversary were so obliging to wear such. "Move only the forefinger, and that with just sufficient force to discharge the pistol," was a rule supposed to be carefully observed.

Cocoa as a Food.

We compare cocoa to a vegetable egg because, like the egg, it contains everything necessary for the building of the animal body. When we analyze cocoa we find it a perfect natural food. Analysis teaches us that it contains a fair proportion of nitrogenous matter in the shape of gluten, a very large proportion of fat, a considerable amount of starch, so much mineral matter and, finally, a stimulant of its own called theobromine. Cocoa is an excellent substitute for tea and coffee, especially to those who are overstimulated by these beverages. Pure cocoa is easily digested. But be sure that you get it pure. If you find that one brand of cocoa does not agree with you try another until you find the one which is best fitted for your constitution.—New York American.

Uses of Seaweed

Not useless when cast upon the strand are the dark masses of seaweed which you may survey at low tide at the seashore. On the contrary, these flowers of the waves have many uses. The broad, thick stem and flat leaves of the oarweed, when thoroughly dried, are used for making knife handles. The green and purple layers, better known as sea lettuce, are in parts used for food after being boiled down to a jelly. So is, too, another sea plant of a deep, dark, reddish hue, called the dulse.

From another, known as carrageen moss, size is obtained, which is used in the process of calico-making. Farmers also use it for fattening calves and thickening meal and potatoes for pig feeding. The long narrow leaves of the grass wrack, after being dried, form excellent packing material, as well as being used for bedding purposes for stock.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

CURED A BAD ATTACK OF ECZEMA.

All skin diseases such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Rash, Boils, Pimples, and Itching Skin Eruptions, are always caused from the blood being in a bad condition, and it is impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape. This you can very easily do without the slightest trouble by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

It drives out all the humor from the blood, and makes it pure and rich, and not only are the unsightly diseases removed, and a bright clean complexion produced, but the entire system is renovated and invigorated at the same time.

Mrs. G. A. Day, Somerville, N.B., writes:—"Last spring I had a bad attack of Eczema. I tried several patent medicines as well as the medicine of a physician, but they seemed to make the disease worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and I did so with the result that in two weeks time the sores began to disappear. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles and they worked a complete cure."

TYPES OF LONDON BEGGARS

There are many professional beggars in London, who have their own copyright methods of extracting coin from a sympathetic and credulous public. There is the distressed governess out of a situation, who asks you in Oxford Street the way to walk to Turnham Green, and is so staggered at the distance that you ask her to accept the bus fare. Then there is the transatlantic journalist stranded in the Metropolis. He is too proud to seek aid from some of his millionaire friends at the Cecil, but if you could?—and perhaps you do. Most artistic of all mendicants is the old lady of grandmotherly appearance dressed in black silk. She is up in London for the day, and someone has robbed her of her purse. She had called on her solicitor, but unfortunately he was out. What shall she do? You give her the train fare and she promises to send the money on to you if you will give her your address. But if you are wise you decline, and thus escape a shoal of begging letters. For addresses of benevolent persons have a market value among the begging fraternity.

RINGS AS TALISMANS

The German Emperor Has Two With Peculiar Histories

The German Emperor has a ring he wears at all times and regards as his own peculiar talisman. An absurd though curious history is told of this ring. It is to the effect that in the days of Elector John of Brandenburg, one of the early Hohenzollerns, a toad entered that worthy's room one night and placed a small stone on the bed. The toad disappeared, and ever since the stone, which has no real value has been treasured as one of the most precious possessions of the House of Hohenzollern. By the father of Frederick the Great it was set in a ring, which since that time has always adorned the finger of the head of the family.

The Kaiser has another ring he highly prizes, which for centuries has been credited with supernatural power to protect its wearer from harm of any kind. This ring has a very romantic history, dating from far-off days when his ancestors, the Margraves of Nuremberg, followed their leaders to the capture of the holy sepulchre from the Moslems. The ring, which was captured in a hard-fought battle under the walls of Jerusalem, came into the possession of the Margrave Ulrich, from whom it has descended as a highly-prized heirloom.

The ring is of massive gold, with a square, dark-colored stone, and is worn by the Emperor on the middle finger of his left hand. The sentence from the Koran that adorned the ring when worn by Saladin and his successors has been removed and a Latin motto engraved in its place.

NEW PLAY APPARATUS

Wheeled Platform Propelled by Running One Foot

After watching small boys coasting about on home-made vehicles propelled by one foot, a man with youngsters of his own designed a more elaborate affair on the same principle. A low platform is mounted on four wheels, the two axles of the device being connected by a strong steel band, on which the footboard rests. The construction is such that by tilting the footboard to right or left of the wheels will turn in the same direction but the boy will not upset. The long handle is adjustable to any height and is used more for support than for guidance. To operate the vehicle a boy stands with one foot on the platform and with the other foot pushes it ahead until sufficient momentum is attained to carry it on. He then gets aboard with both feet and guides it by throwing the weight of his body on one side or the other.

TURNED BY TILTING PLATFORM.

Nvoerue Energy Is Limited

There is only so much energy in the human body. A few people have an abundance, but more have not enough. Hence the necessity of conserving vitality.

If wasted by mode of living, ease or worry there must be a breaking, and trouble is sure to come. It may be headaches and weak, smarting eyes; it may be nerves, indigestion, or it may be merely lack of energy and ambition, and feelings of fatigue or helplessness. Of course, sooner or later exhaustion of the nerves leads to prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia, but there is no need to let the trouble develop that far.

By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can restore to the feeble, wasted nerve cells the energy they have lost. It will take some effort on your part to give up worry and anxiety, but you should realize your serious condition. Rest and use this great food cure and you are bound to improve in health and vigour.

Mats of Ivory

There are but three mats of ivory in existence. The largest one measures 8 feet by 4 feet, and, although made in the north of India, has a Greek design for a border. It is used only on State occasions, like the signing of important State documents. The cost of this precious mat was almost incalculable, for more than 6,400 pounds of pure ivory was used in its construction. Only the finest and most flexible strips of material could be used, and the mat is like the finest woven fabric.

The Movie Everywhere

Everywhere the moving picture show is carrying all before it, from China to Peru. There is scarcely a town of any importance in any part of the world without its picture palace. Half-naked Indians now see on the screen the doings of far-away lands, races being won and lost in England, penguins waddling about in Polar regions, and a billion and one scenes of wonder.

FAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly, backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

EARLY ENGLISH BANKING

Old Time Examination Required More Time Than Thought

A very interesting stage is that of the early English bankers, who carried on business before the present form of joint stock bank came into existence.

Before the private country banker commenced his career, the people in the country who possessed cash or valuables were at a loss where to keep it. The best method they discovered was to bury it, but even this often failed, for the hiding place would leak out and result in robbery.

The task put to an aspiring banker by the Bank of England early in the nineteenth century was to count one hundred pounds of silver. In one instance the candidate was diligently making up the silver into single pounds, and, after laboring a time, the examiner whispered to him (never mind, my lad, as long as you have 20 shillings in the last pound." This proved matters, and the last pound being correct, he was duly elected.

The dress of the ordinary bank clerk was then somewhat more showy than now, while the pay was less. Salaries of £100 per annum were considered very good.

His prospects were very different from the bank clerk of to-day, for now every position is attainable, even to the General Managership, but then only the relatives of the banker got official positions, while the others had merely to be good, honest, steady clerks.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

MISSING GREEN DIAMOND

Why a Big English Firm Had a Bad Quarter of an Hour

A curious story is told of the head of one of the big diamond-cutting firms in the Hatton Garden district concerning a green diamond. There are only six known green diamonds in the world, green diamonds being by far the most rare and valuable form of precious stone.

An Indian rajah sent this stone to the firm to be cut and polished and set in a ring for his bride-to-be. The value of the stone was placed at $40,000. The stone duly arrived, and the head of the firm, having a safe, brought it out to admire before sending it through to the workshops. Conversation ensued, and the visitor departed.

The head of the firm then instructed his foreman to start work on the stone. But the stone could not be found. It was just barely possible that the caller had abstracted it, and this was likely to be serious, though it was doubtful if he would have been able to dispose of so rare a stone. But a far more likely theory was that it had fallen on the floor. So the carpet was taken up and shaken and swept—no stone. The manager strode up and down, chewing his cigar, which was drawing badly. The more he chewed, the less agreeable was his cigar; and suddenly, in a huff, he knocked it against the side of his desk to rid it of a load of ash and—lost all the stone. Whereupon the staff breathed again.

It must have happened that in an abstracted moment, while playing with his cigar and talking, he pressed the head of the cigar on his blotting-pad just where the stone lay, with the result that it became embedded in the smouldering portion.

A Valuable Pearl

The most valuable pearl ever found on the American continent was discovered by Dr. Jesse Carr, on the banks of the Fox River. It weighed sixty-two grains and was a perfect specimen. The finder named it "Queen of America" and presented it to his wife. On his first opportunity he took it to Chicago to have it appraised and was astonished when he was told that it was worth over $10,000.

PERILOUS WISDOM

It is an interesting fact that the ancients knew the secret of malleable crystal. In the time of Tiberius an artisan invented a malleable glass, and the shop in which he worked was wrecked for fear that his discovery would bring about a reduction in the price of bronze, gold and silverware.

Pliny refers to this legend and years after another author relates the same story with variations. According to him, the artisan, who was also an architect, restored a partial ruin one of the handsomest of Roman porches, and Tiberius, having a notorious jealousy of any man who surpassed himself even in matters entirely outside of his province, took a violent dislike to one who, he said, was trying to undermine the well-established order of things. Tiberius pointed out that if the ancient porch had not been restored, hundreds of workmen might have been given labor in the construction of a new one. The man was, accordingly banished. Naturally, the architect reasoned that if he could convince the head of the state of the good that might result from the numerous ideas he had evolved, the emperor would modify his opinion and even assist him in the maturing of certain of his plans. So he went back to Rome and obtained an interview with Tiberius.

The emperor is described as listening patiently to what he had to say and finally demanding proof. For answer the artisan threw the vase, a crystal goblet, which dented, and bent it back into shape with his own hands. He was then upon condemned to death.

Still another version is that Tiberius in a rage at the imprudence of one who claimed to do what Cæsar could not, smashed the crystal and sat spellbound when the artisan took a hammer and twisting it as if it were copper, made a vase of it. The emperor then calmly asked him what else he could do in the way of wonders, and being told that this was all, had the man executed.

Troubled With Weak Back and Kidneys For 10 Years.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise and perhaps develop into dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills will strengthen the weak back, and prevent any form of kidney trouble entering the system.

Mrs. Ed. Boyer, Nokomis, Sask., writes:—"I have been troubled with weak back and kidneys. I had terrible dizzy headaches, and could not sleep at night. In this way I suffered for ten years, until I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I purchased two boxes, and as they helped me, I sent for two more; they put me on my feet, and I have been able to work ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FROG CONSUMPTION IN EUROPE

Frog's Legs Are Particularly Popular in France

Far from being unpopular as some persons erroneously maintain, the demand in France for this quaint dish tends to become greater and greater every day. The green, or common, frog is the kind most in request for culinary purposes, and unquestionably forms a very favorite and delicate dish, especially when prepared by first-class cooks. Frogs are an excellent food; they are as nourishing as they are savory. They are light, agreeable to the palate, and suitable to the most delicate stomach. This is why they are given to invalids in France. Only the hind legs are eaten, and these are cooked in almost as many different ways as omelettes. They are usually made into a stew or fried in the pan by the working classes in Paris. Exquisite nourishing soups are also made in France from frogs.

The demand for frogs is greater with the Provincials than it is with Parisians; the reason for this is attributed to the fact that Parisians are becoming more dainty. Frogs are sent to unknown both in Normandy and Britanny; in the north of France, the quantities of frogs consumed chiefly by the well-to-do classes, are enormous. Whereas only the legs are eaten in France, in Italy and Germany—noted as frog-eating countries—the animal is consumed whole after being previously skinned and cleaned. In the south of France frogs are served in [illegible] oyster-shells.

THE LATE "MRS. PRESIDENT."

When Mrs. A. Alexander MacLachlan was president of the Women's College Club, more than a year ago, she was sometimes late in arriving to preside at the meetings.

One afternoon when the president happened to be tardy at a meeting she found her chair occupied and the meeting begun. Mrs. MacLachlan slipped into a back seat, but not before she had been observed by the young woman presiding.

After the business under way at the moment had been transacted the presiding officer arose and said:

"We have with us now the late Mrs. MacLachlan, who will kindly come forward and take the chair."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MILITANT PAULINE

Pauline crouched behind the lilac bushes and nursed a bitter hatred in her heart.

"He's a wicked, wicked man," she breathed to herself passionately. "I hate him!"

She clinched her small hands fiercely and crouched even more closely in the shade of the lilac bush.

They had a new baby at Pauline's house, a round, soft, tiny baby. Though it had been there only a few weeks, they had all developed the most remarkable affection for it. Of course it belonged to Pauline and her family.

Nobody had ever thought of its not belonging to them until Mr. Ives, who lived two blocks down the street, had come over to see it. Not even the doctor, who had brought it, laid any claim to it. He had just brought it and left it, and he had chuckled Pauline under the chin and told her he had brought her a baby sister and he hoped she would like it.

She did. Nobody could know how much she liked that baby.

Then Mr. Ives had come and had stood with his hands in his pockets and looked down at the morsel of humanity in a very superior sort of way.

Then he had put out one finger and poked the baby's cheek very gently.

"Well, youngster," he said to Pauline, "it certainly is a great little kid, but I'd like to know how in the world you came to think it was yours?"

Pauline smiled tremulously. She glanced up at Mr. Ives. Then she looked at her mother. They were both perfectly serious. Pauline's lips quivered a little, but just then the baby began to whimper, so nobody noticed the big little sister.

"What's her name?" Mr. Ives asked after a moment.

"We're thinking of calling her Roberta," Pauline's mother replied.

"Roberta!" Mr. Ives cried. "Well, for goodness' sake—you don't mean to say—why, Polly," he turned to Pauline, who was standing wild-eyed beside him, "don't you know that's almost the same as my name? Of course, this is my baby. That crazy doctor has made another of his blunders; Here T've ben waiting and waiting and now he's gone and left this baby at the wrong house! It's as plain as the nose on your face that the baby belongs to me. I'll run home and get a basket and take her away now."

Pauline's mother had laughed. That was another shuddery thing. It made Pauline quite sick now to think about that laugh of her mother's.

"I think you'd better wait a little while," Pauline's mother had said. "Mrs. Ives told me the other day that she was going to have the house redecorated this week, so I'm afraid the baby will be in the way. You might perhaps come over about next Thursday and get her."

And here it was Thursday! So behind the lilac bush Pauline crouched miserably and tried to keep from sobbing, for five minutes before she had seen Mr. Ives go into the house with a basket in his hand! Up to that moment Pauline had hardly believed that her mother would do such a thing as to let him take the baby. All along she had believed down in her heart it would turn out to be a miserable joke.

But when Mr. Ives actually came with the basket in his hand—the tears gathered in Pauline's eyes and her heart beat so fast that it hurt her. And she had always liked Mr. Ives. The tears broke bounds and rolled down her cheeks when she remembered the good times they had had together. And her mother!

Oh, perfidious mother!

The door opened and Mr. Ives stepped out. Pauline brushed the tears away violently. He was not worth a tear. Her mother followed him out on to the steps.

"She's a nice little thing," her mother was saying lightly. "We'd like to keep her because Pauline thinks so much of her, but we really can't have so many, and Pauline will get over it in a little while."

Then Pauline's mother went back into the house and shut the door behind her. Mr. Ives came whistling down the steps, basket in hand.

In making her attack Pauline regarded no rules of civilized warfare. She fought with the simple end of coming out victor from the battle. She bit, she scratched, she clawed, she kicked, she shrieked and roared in her fear and rage.

Pauline's mother, drawn to the scene of the combat by the sounds of fury, eventually succeeded in dragging off her daughter.

"He shan't take her! He shan't take her!" Pauline was screaming. "If you don't want her I'll go away with her and we'll live in an orphan asylum until we're grown up and then I'll support her. You didn't have any right—you didn't have any right—"

"By George!" said Mr. Ives, ruefully, after he had heard the whole story, gathering up a somewhat surprised looking kitten that had seized its opportunity to escape from the basket. "I think I'll go and find some full-sized man to give me a good kicking. I certainly have a badly perverted sense of humour."

SICK HEADACHE
A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

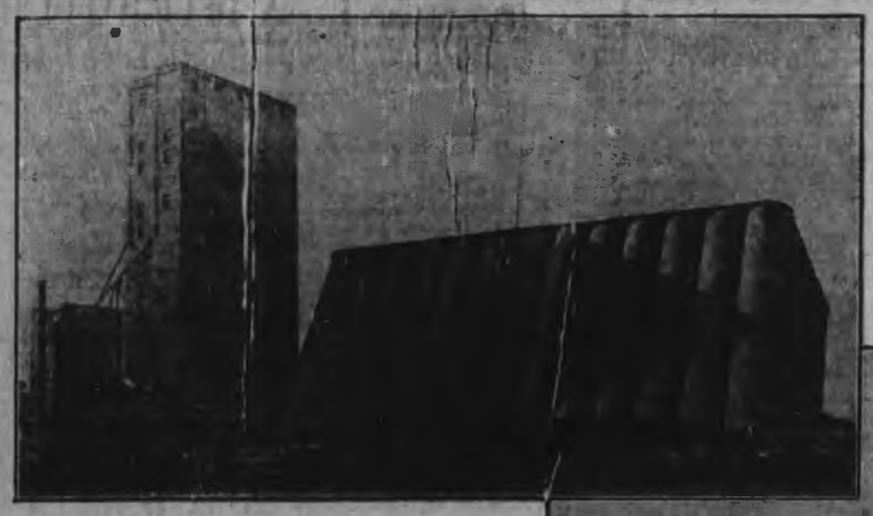
Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible—they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Biliousness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. The only way to get rid of them entirely is to cure the Constipation or Indigestion that is causing them, and nothing will do this quicker or more effectively than Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, banishing sick headaches and restoring vigorous health.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have stood the test for over fifty years. 25c. at all dealers. W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont. 7



Views of both sides of the million bushel C.P.R. Concrete Grain Elevator at Transcona, Man., which recently settled on its foundations and now stands intact at an angle of 30 degrees.

Concrete Withstands The Severest Tests—

IN the San Francisco earthquake and the Ohio floods, concrete structures withstood the terrific tests of fire, water and vibration without damage.

Now, right in our very midst, comes a striking illustration of concrete's enormous power of resistance and durability.

This great concrete structure, built only to resist the pressure of grain from the inside, while filled almost to capacity with 55,000,000 pounds, or 27,500 tons of grain, has settled to an angle of 30 degrees from its original perpendicular position.

In the settling the walls were subjected not only to the terrific twisting strain of their own weight, but to the weight of thousands of tons of grain as well.

This structure still stands intact and examinations have failed to discover the slightest evidence of collapse.

Not One Dollar of Loss To Owners of Grain

THIS illustration of the ability of concrete to withstand the severest test, contains an important lesson not only for the farmer, but for business men, contractors, engineers and architects.

Think of the irreparable loss to the owners of the grain, had this elevator been built of some destructible material—a material that would have collapsed almost as soon as the settling commenced, and which would have entailed not only the loss of the building, but almost a total loss of its contents.

We have published a number of books which contain the most complete information and beautiful illustrations of almost every use of Concrete (City and Farm Buildings, Roads and Pavements) for the farmer, builder, businessman, manufacturer and everyone interested in a material of such permanence and economy.

These books are free and you may have a copy for the asking—simply state what object you are interested in, on a post card, and send to

BABOONS AT HOME.

A Study of the Animals in Their Wild State in Africa.

We can only learn the nature and disposition of an animal like the baboon from a study of its behavior in a wild state. Few persons ever have a chance for such study, and accordingly an intelligently observed account of the animal's actions becomes of interest. The author of "Animal Life in Africa," Major J. Stevenson-Hamilton, furnishes the following results of his personal investigations:

It is most interesting and instructive to watch, from some concealed position, the social life of a troop of baboons who fancy themselves to be unobserved. Perched about at intervals among the rocks are some of the older males, evidently on the lookout for danger. Behind them walk and squat a heterogeneous mass of females and of young animals. The females employ themselves in various family tasks and the youngsters, playing and squabbling, chase one another around to a shrill accompaniment of chattering screams.

Possibly two of the latter, in the course of a rough and tumble, jostle against one of the older males. Immediately the latter's attitude of dignified quiescence vanishes, and he turns with a roar upon the imprudent juveniles, who hastily retreat with shrieks of fear. Now and then a mother finds it necessary to chastise her offspring or to wreak vengeance upon one of another of the unattached hobbledehoys who, she guesses, meditates injuring upon or injuring it. The air resounds with squeaks, shrill cries and occasional bass grunts.

Suddenly from one of the guards comes a single deep, hoarse bark, and instantly there is silence. The females catch up their young offspring; the rest of the band, with one accord, scuttle out right and left, and in a moment there is nothing to be seen except one or two of the larger males, who walk quietly off, now and then stopping to glance back and to utter their resonant warning barks.

If you run quickly forward and climb to some cairn of vantage you will perhaps be in time to see the whole band scampering off. The infants cling to their mothers' backs, the unattached juveniles race ahead, and the three or four fathers of families bring up the rear at a more deliberate pace.

Expatriated by Mal de Mer.

There is tragedy in the attempts made to solve the problem of seasickness by the late Mr. William Louis Winans, the millionaire, who was an involuntary exile in England for the last twenty-seven years of his life. He was at heart an American citizen, but his doctors warned him that a voyage across the Atlantic, with the probability of seasickness, would be fatal to him. So he devoted the rest of his life to designing a vessel in which he could safely travel to America. But the fates were against him, and his invention never got further than the shelves of the patent office.—London Opinion.

PREMIUM ON LAZINESS.

R. L. Stevenson is one of the few writers of distinction who have been bold enough to enter a plea for laziness. "It is surely beyond a doubt," he wrote, "that people should be a good deal idle in youth. For though here and there a Lord Macaulay may escape from school honours with all his wits about him, most boys pay so dear for their medals that they never afterward have a shot in their locker, and begin the world bankrupt. And the same holds true during all the time a lad is educating himself, or suffering others to educate him. . . . If you look back on your own education, I am sure it will not be the full, vivid, instructive hours of truantry that you regret; you would rather cancel some lack-lustre periods between sleep and waking in the class."—London Chronicle.

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and achey; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Counterfeiters Convicted.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—Paul Zacke was found guilty of and Fritz Mundy pleaded guilty to a charge of counterfeiting in the session yesterday. A lithographer's plate for the Indian head U. S. five-dollar bill was found in Zacke's house.

CHANCELLOR SHOULD QUIT

German Legislators Condemn Alsace Affair by Big Vote.

BERLIN, Dec. 5.—A vote of lack of confidence in the Imperial Chancellor, in connection with his attitude in regard to the troubles between the military and the civilians at Zabern, Alsace, was adopted in the Imperial Parliament yesterday by 293 against 54. If Germany had a Parliamentary system instead of a semi-autocratic regime Bethmann-Hollweg and the Cabinet would now be a thing of the past. One blank paper was handed in, while 49 members were not present.

Last night the Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, was on his way to Donaueschingen in response to a peremptory summons from the Kaiser, who is staying there with friends of Prince Max Egon Zu Furstenberg.

The two men who are responsible respectively for the civil and military government of Alsace-Lorraine are Count Von Wedel, viceroy of the conquered province, and Gen. Von Diemling, commander of the 15th Army Corps, who is also hastening to Donaueschingen at the Emperor's behest. Wedel is said to be traveling to Donaueschingen with his resignation in his pocket. It is learned from well-informed political quarter that late last evening Bethmann-Hollweg went to Donaueschingen to place his portfolio at the Kaiser's disposal.

Standard Oil To Enter China.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The Daily Telegraph's Pekin correspondent says that semi-official newspapers now announce what has privately been known for some time, namely, that the Standard Oil Co. is seeking comprehensive oil concessions around Jobel, in Northern Chihli, where borings are said to have already disclosed very rich petroleum deposits.

City Made Money.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—The city of Montreal made a profit of more than $20,000 when four recently expropriated were put up at auction. The land was needed for street extensions, and for it the city paid $99,626. The property needed for the streets was retained, and the city sold the rest yesterday for $112,216.

Child Had Bronchitis

Once people get acquainted with the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine exerts over bronchitis, whooping cough, croup and colds it is not easy to persuade them that anything else is "just as good." This is why the imitators never get very far.

In 1902 Mrs. Eugene Iler, King street, Truro, N.S., wrote as follows: "From an infant one of my children was troubled with bronchitis, and the least cold would aggravate the trouble. We could not get anything to help her, and were often greatly alarmed. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a treatment for bronchitis, we used it, and are glad to state that it effected a complete cure. If any of the children take a cold or cough I give this medicine, and have never known it to fail to bring relief."

Mrs. Iler now writes that she has since proved this medicine to be a cure for whooping cough, and would not be without it in the house.

WILL CONSIDER TASK.

Ex-Premier Ribot Not Anxious To Form Cabinet.

PARIS, Dec. 5. — The Ministerial crisis is a step nearer settlement today. President Poincare, after lengthy consultation yesterday with M. Caillaux, leader of the Radicals, Emile Almond, president of the finance committee of the Senate, and others, principally of the financial aspect of the situation, requested ex-Premier Felix Ribot to undertake the task of forming a composite Ministry acceptable to all groups of Republicans.

M. Ribot at first declined, pleading ill-health, but finally consented to consider the matter and give his answer to-day after he had consulted with his friends. Parliamentary circles, however, doubt that he will accept. In the event that he declines, it is probable that M. Doumergue, ex-Minister of Commerce, will be asked, as he is generally considered the most capable of forming the required type of Cabinet.

IF CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Look Mother! If Tongue is Coated, Cleanse Little Bowels With "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

IN ONE MINUTE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN—COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Stops Nasty Discharge, Clears Stuffed Head, Heals Inflamed Air Passages and You Breathe Freely.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Made Princely Gifts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—John C. Schildnecht, the $19-a-week bookkeeper, who recently pleaded guilty to stealing more than $50,000 from the Washburn-Crosby Flour Co., his employers, was sentenced yesterday to Sing-Sing Prison for not less than two and one-half years or more than four years and eight months.

Schildnecht admitted on the witness stand that the greater portion of the money he stole was spent on young women, to whom he had given among other valuable presents, an automobile and $15,000 worth of jewelry.

Exonerated Fellow Student.

KINGSTON, Dec. 5.—Rather than allow John Youngs, a freshman science student, to be found guilty of pulling down a Princess street store sign, R. K. Carnochan, another student, came forward yesterday and told the police magistrate that he was the guilty party, and paid a fine of five dollars and costs.

Head Chef Is Fined.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Jean Milton, head chef at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, was yesterday fined $3,000 for violating the immigration law by bringing three assistants here, under contract from France. Milton pleaded guilty and asked leniency on the ground that a good chef was as great an artist in his profession as a famous singer was in grand opera. The latter, he said, was employed in much the same manner as he employed his assistants.

Still Smoking Him Out.

BINGHAM, Utah, Dec. 5.—It was decided by Sheriff Andrews Smith yesterday morning to continue for another 24 hours the smudges which were ignited in the Miami mine Monday in hope of driving Ralph Lopes from his hiding place as it has been learned several tunnels have not been reached by the poisonous gases. Lopes has now been a fugitive for two weeks and in that time has killed six men.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES DISAPPEAR

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses of Croxone

If you are bothered with backache, or rheumatism, have disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders to contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from weak kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon.

It is a positive fact that Croxone promptly overcomes such diseases.

It soaks right in and cleans out the stopped up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate lining of the bladder.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate, long standing cases.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results. An original package costs but a trifle, and your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time.

ALIVE AFTER EXECUTION.

Mexican General Crawled Away When Firing Squad Left.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 5.—Col. Eziquito Barbosa, a federal officer who was left for dead with a bullet through his chest after facing a firing squad of rebels at Torreon, arrived in the capital yesterday.

Barbosa is the only one to escape death of the 13 officers captured by Gen. Villa on that occasion. He crawled away from the spot and managed to reach a ranch in the vicinity where he was given help. Some time later he got away and reached a mining camp, where a doctor dressed his wounds.

Huerta Denies Reverses.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—The Matin has received a cablegram from Victoriano Huerta, in which the Mexican President says:

"The reports of the alleged successes of the rebels at Culiacan, Ciudad, Victoria and Juarez must be considered untrue. These places were evacuated in accordance with the plan of campaign being carried out by the Government forces."

How To Make Your Hair Beautiful

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy.

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple old fashioned home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Lavona (a compound), and a little Menthol Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes, work wonders with any scalp. Try it just one night and see. Get from your druggist 2 oz. Lavona, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavona, shake well and let it stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days use and you cannot find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be locked on your scalp as tight as a vise. Dandruff will disappear and itching cease. In ten days you will find fine, downy new hairs growing all over your scalp and this new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain in its result.

CHRISTMAS AT COLEMAN'S

Coleman Bros., Confectioners and Bakers, are doubly well prepared this season for attending to the wants of their patrons. In addition to their main store at No. 426 George street, they have recently taken over the handsomely appointed store premises, No. 414 George street, a few doors south. These new quarters have been fitted up in a most artistic and elegant manner. The ceilings are of metal, prettily designed, and the furnishings are quiet but elaborate. Handsome glass cases contain the fine confections, and other fittings in the store are of modern design. The Messrs. Coleman have won a good reputation in years past as Christmas caterers, and their success has been due to their untiring efforts to succeed by honest methods. In order to meet the demand for timely deliveries of Christmas cakes and confections, the admonition to do your shopping early at Coleman's should not be lost sight of. Who shops early shops best.

SOME USEFUL RECIPES

Homemade Syrup.

The very best substitute for maple syrup is made in the following way: Mix together one pound of dark brown sugar, one pound of granulated sugar, one-half pint of water, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Put on the fire and bring to a boil and allow to boil for two or three minutes. When cool it is ready to serve. It is very appetizing and much purer and cheaper than any other imitation of maple syrup.

Maple Custard.

Yolks of 3 eggs, 1-4 cup of maple syrup, 2 cups milk. Cook until it thickens. When cool add 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Beat whites of eggs stiff, add 1-4 cup of sugar. Cook in buttered mould (covered) for 20 minutes and slip on the custard. Serve cold.

Roast Beef Warmed.

Fry half a minced onion in a tablespoonful of butter, then add a small can of tomatoes, mashing any lumps until the whole is smooth. Season with pepper, salt and sugar. Allow this to become very hot, then lay in slices of cold beef and heat through.

SEVENTEEN CASES FOR THE DECEMBER SITTINGS OF THE DIVISION COURT

Defendant in an Action Instituted by Ice Company—Real Estate Transaction Aired in Court.

ADVANCED PASSAGE MONEY

The December sitting of the Division Court opened this morning at 10 o'clock, with a list of seventeen cases for His Honour Judge Huycke to dispose of. Of this number, several were settled either by mutual agreement of the parties concerned, or with the consent of acting counsel.

The first case called was that of T. H. Rebill vs. Dr. D. C. King. Plaintiff claimed that in the year 1906, he supplied defendant with ice for four and one-quarter months at $3.00 per month, in 1908 six and one-half months at $3.00 per month, and in 1909, five and one-half months at $2.50 per month. After considerable evidence had been taken, His Honour suggested to acting counsel that they try and arrive at some settlement.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. O. De la Plante represented defendant.

A Real Estate Deal.

A case which caused considerable interest was that of Gordon Wright versus Wm. Taylor. According to the evidence, it appears that in 1909, Mr. Gordon Wright bought a house from Mr. Wm. Taylor, at a price of $3,000 less $50 discount which Mr. Taylor said he would allow as part of a cash payment. The following year, Mr. Wright, finding that he could not keep up the payments, and through the alleged instrumentality of his mother wrote Mr. Taylor informing him of this fact. Mr. Taylor, it is said, was agreeable to let matters stand, and said that directly the sale of the house was put through, Mrs. Wright would receive all that was due her, such as interest, taxes, insurance, etc., amounting in all to $100. His Honour Judge Huycke said he was satisfied, on the evidence of Mr. Gordon Wright, Mrs. Wright, and Mr. James Middleton, Real Estate Agent, that Mr. Taylor had promised to give Mrs. Wright $100. The only question for consideration was that of whether Mr. Taylor had agreed to pay this sum on the sale being put through or when he had received payment for the property. Judgment was reserved. Mr. G. N. Gordon for plaintiff and Moore for defence.

Judgment for Plaintiff.

W. E. Picard versus James McGrath. Mrs. W. E. Picard claimed $47.24 for work done in the construction of a house. His Honour Judge Huycke, after hearing the evidence allowed $21.45 to the plaintiff. Messrs. E. L. Goodwill and V. J. McElderry acted for plaintiff and defendant respectively.

Advanced Passage Money.

Judgment was entered for plaintiff in the case of Mrs. Sheating, who sued her nephew, J. Langley, for $39.35. Plaintiff claimed to have loaned defendant the money to facilitate his emigration to Canada and that he agreed to repay the loan, in weekly installments.

EVADED LAW FOR MONTHS

John Weese, of Norwood, Assessed $20 and Costs for Being Drunk in July Last

ADMITTED HIS GUILT

John Weese of Norwood was fined $20 and costs, amounting in all to nearly $30 for being drunk in a local option district. Weese was charged with being drunk, in July last, and escaped being brought before the Magistrate for nearly six months.

At the time he was served with a summons to appear in court, but neglected to obey the mandate of the law. A charge of contempt of court was laid against him, and a warrant was issued for his arrest. After that Weese "went travelling" but yesterday he returned to Norwood, where a watch was being kept for him by Constable Tupper and Inspector Williams. He was arrested and brought to this City. This morning he appeared before Magistrate Edmison, and was fined $20 and costs for being drunk, to which charge he pleaded guilty. The charge of contempt of court was dropped against him, but he will have to pay the costs of the case.

GORDON-DAVIES' CHRISTMAS WINDOWS

House-keepers' Mecca — Meats, Groceries, Game, Fancy Meats, etc., Abundantly Displayed

A live business that has been identified with the business life of Peterborough for only a comparatively short period, is that of Gordon Davies, Limited, meat, game and poultry dealers, grocers, and fruits and vegetable vendors.

This young delicatessen will be found deservedly entitled to a "lion's share' of the housekeepers' Christmas trade. It is bright and clean and attractively appointed, with every convenience for displaying and handling large quantities of foodstuffs. Its bill of fare is always tempting and toothsome; and the proficient salestaff and excellent business methods adopted gives assurance of prompt service and honest dealings, which the industrious local manager prides himself in giving.

The show windows of Gordon-Davies Store are just now brimful of the enterprising Christmas caterer, and one window is invitingly dressed with well-arranged platters of the German sausage, put up in various styles and qualities, and known as Berlin pork sausage, weiners, summer sausage and G. & D. home-made sausage; also ham bologna and brown pudding. There are also shown some fine specimens of ducks, crate-fed chickens and turkeys. The north window is attractively dressed with Liptons goods, including Ceylon and India teas from 30c a pound up to a dollar a pound; Lipton's coffees, cocoa and jellies, of which Gordon-Davies make a specialty. In the centre of this window is a herd of five elephants as an interesting feature, shewing five different stages of the life of this denisen of the country where Lipton's tea is grown.

A MEAL FOR FORTY COST ONLY 96 CENTS

Protest Against High Cost of Living —Were Well Filled, Too.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—An anti-high cost of living dinner was given last night by the Gray's Lake Women's Club, at which forty members were present. After the "sumptuous" meal was over, each one expressed satisfaction with the fare and appeared well-filled.

The total cost was 96 cents, which with the time in cooking and serving was all the expense attached to it excepting 4 cents, the cost of paper napkins used.

The meal was made out of the following:

Meat, two pounds of beef (neck), 25 cents; bread, two loaves, 10 cents; cake, 20 cents; coffee, three-quarters of a pound at 25 cents per pound, 19 cents; cream, 10 cents; celery, 9 cents; sugar, 3 cents—total, 96 cents.

J. Lowe, Brampton, $2; Ontario Car Ferry Co., Limited, and Canada Atlantic Transit Co., $750.

LOYALTY CLUB WAS ENTERTAINED

The "Loyalty Club" and the young ladies of the south Y.M.C.A. were the guests of Mrs. R. R. Hall last evening at the "South House," which was decorated for the occasion. About tyenty-five young ladies were present and spent a most delightful evening in playing games of different kinds, for which very prety prizes were given. Among the winners were Miss Nellie Ashton, Miss Mary Fortune, Miss Ella Green and Miss Alice Wright.

A delicious supper was served later, after which the girls very unwillingly wended their way home, voting Mrs. Hall a royal hostess and that never had they spent such an enjoyable evening. Mrs. Hall was ably assisted by Mrs. Goodwill and the secretaries of the Y.W.C.A.

Of Street Lighting—Ornamental Iron Poles Are Being Erected on Hunter and Simcoe Streets

READY BY THE 20th

The actual work of erecting the ornamental iron standards, which will be used in connection with the Hydro-Electric street lighting system on Hunter and Simcoe streets, was commenced to-day. The standards differ from those erected on George and Charlotte streets some months ago, in that they are constructed to carry the Magnetite Arc light alone. The poles used along the route of the Street Railway Company are constructed to support both the Magnetite Arc light and the trolley wires, thereby eleminating the old wooden trolley poles, at present in use. The iron pole referred to, is what is known as the combination pole, whereas the poles now being erected on Hunter and Simcoe streets is a single type of pole. In the latter case the Magnetite Arc light will be mounted directly on top of the pole, and in the case of the combination pole, a bracket will be used to support the arc lamp.

Will Complete System.

The single iron standards are more ornamental than the combination type. They are fastened to the pavement by means of steel bolts, which have been embedded in the cement. The poles are hoisted into an upright position by means of an improvised derrick. The erection of the poles and the placing of the lamps will practically mark the completion of the down-town lighting system as originally proposed and outlined by Mr. Jeffery, engineer for the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario.

The poles were manufactured by the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company of this city. The Magnetite Arc light are the product of the Canadian General Electric Company.

Alderman Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee of the City Council is authority for the statement that the light will be turned on not later than the twentieth day of this month, providing no unforeseen circumstances arise. The chairman anticipates that the street lighting system will blaze forth in all is glory on or about the fifteenth, but adds that it may be a few days later.

DECEMBER DANDELION

Mr. George Evans of East City picked a December dandelion by the roadside during the noon hour. With reports of western storms a cold wave is apparently moving eastward and late flowering pansies, dandelions and other blooms are likely to be cut off soon by frosts.

HILL BROTHERS CHARGED WITH SEPARATE CRIMES

William and Davis Hill, of Dummer, Must Face Charges of Theft and Receiving Stolen Goods

TO BE TRIED TUESDAY

Davis Hill, of Dummer, was charged in police court this morning with receiving stolen goods. Hies is a brother of William Hill, who is under arrest, charged with stealing a fur-lined overcoat, the property of Howard McGowan. It is alleged that he received the coat from his brother, knowing at the time that it was stolen.

The prisoner asked for a remand in order that he might consult a lawyer. It was granted and he will come up for trial on Thursday, December the 11th. On that date too, his brother will be tried on the charge of theft. This morning Hill declined to plead or elect until he consulted a lawyer.

When Detectives Newhall and Meagher, and High County Constable Cochrane searched the Hill residence yesterday they found a coat which they suspect has been stolen, but for whom they have not yet found an owner.

Roderick McLeod.
Sam Campbell.
Pat Cologne.

These three knights of the turnpike, the former two from Scotland, and the last from Belfast (Ireland), occupied the prisoner's box this morning. All were charged with vagrancy and all pleaded not guilty.

"McLeod," said the Magistrate, "how long have you been out from Scotland?"

"Seven years."

"Well you ought to have learned something by this time."

Two of them had come from Port McNicholl and the other from the Welland Canal. All three were ordered to leave the City at once.

A. McGregor was fined $5 and costs, ($3.60) for driving his motor car without a tail light.

DENVER SNOW BOUND BY FIERCE STORM

Has Been Raging for Sixteen Hours —Railways Suspended Service.

Special wire to A. H. Stratton & Co.:

DENVER, Col. Dec. 5.—A terrific snow storm has held this city in its embrace for the last 16 hours. Snow is from 2 to 5 feet deep in places. The street car service has been suspended since the storm began. All railroads running into Denver have cancelled service.

NAVY AND RE-DISTRIBUTION WILL BE TWO FEATURES OF THE NEXT SESSION

Sir Wilfrid Laurier May Move a Resolution Calling for an Increase in the British Preference

THE SESSIONAL SLATE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—Now that the date for the opening of Parliament has been definitely announced, the Cabint has got down to real work, preparing the sessional slate. This is expected to be an unusually lengthy one with the navy once more at the head. It can be stated with considerable authority that the Government will not introduce permanent naval policy, although temporary naval measures will be brought down. There will likely be introduced a measure for strengthening the coastal defence. This bill will be based upon a report made to the Government this past summer by General Sir Ian Hamilton, following his tour of inspection with Col. Sam Hughes. Apart from the navy, redistribution will be the real big item on the legislative slate. The Cabinet will get down to work on this big and complex task in a few days. The tariff and the cost of living will come in for a big share of attention. It is well within range of probability that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will move a resolution calling for the abolition of customs duties on agricultural implements and an increase in the British preference.

CRESSMAN'S DEBUT WAS A SUCCESS

Presented Their Splendid New Home Furnishings and Other Departments to the Public

STORE VERY ATTRACTIVE

Hundreds of the citizens of Peterborough were introduced to Cressman's extensive home furnishings department on the occasion of the formal opening of the enlarged store last night. The enlarged floor space provided by the big addition at the rear of the building has enabled the company to present a most impressive display of furniture. The beautiful suites for parlour, dining-room, den and bed room, elicited expressions of approval on every hand, and the new department's debut was in every respect a most successful one.

Mr. A. W. Cressman and Messrs. Fred and Harry Cressman assisted by the entire clerical staff, received the host of visitors with a most cordial welcome, and amid surroundings that left no doubt of the festive features of the evening. The aisles on the main floor were transformed into beautiful vistas in which the flashy modish colours of the season predominate. Green latticed decorations, with leaf formations, overhung the passages, and before this multi-coloured background, the crowds moved slowly, stopping to make inquiries at the various counters. The bustle of business and clatter of cash boxes were conspicuous by their absence.

The "debutante" of the reception, for whose coming out the evening was arranged, was the Home Furnishings Department, under the "chaperonage" of Mr. Ed. Manning and Mr. L. S. Edney, who have been given charge of this department. The introductions were numerous, and you heard expressions of "splendid," "looks beautiful," exactly as you hear at any other successful coming-out party. Getting away from the metaphor, it may be well said that the Department made a fine impression, but possibly the visitors overlooked the slogan, "Furniture at department store prices," for the reason that no attention was given to selling last night. But it is understood that the Cressman Company desire to send home that statement. They are not only prepared to afford purchasers all the advantages of home buying, but they want to emphasize their position to compete with the doubtful figures found in catalogues of the big city departmental stores.

There was a noticeably large number of men present last night. They were particularly evident on the second floor among the gorgeous opera cloaks, dainty millinery and a wealth of ready-to-wear goods. It was not exactly their element, and they manifested evidences of being somewhat at sea, especially the younger set. They wandered through the furniture department on the third and fourth floors, participating in the opinions that were expressed, and appreciating the fine points of material and design of this cabinet, that boudoir piece, a writing desk here and a table there. Chippendale and Sheratton effects in furniture drew forth approving comments, and to go into the details of the furniture display would fill a booklet.

Miss Wesley's fancy goods department was a magnet for all the ladies. The showing included not only all kinds of material for fancy work, but an extensive display of finished goods the making of which is an art in itself.

During the evening the Opera House orchestra played a delightful programme.

Sale Of Work Was A Success

The Ladies' Aid of St. Luke's held a very successful sale of work in the schoolroom yesterday afternoon and evening. A large number was in attendance and the fine array of fancy articles, home-made cakes and candies were soon disposed of. The very encouraging amount of nearly seventy dollars was raised as a result of the sale.

INCREASING STAFFS.

One of the signs of approaching Christmas and expectations of a big trade are the additions to the staff of some of the stores.

VETERAN ENGINEER KILLED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BEAUMONT, O., Dec. 5.—Joseph Dande, aged 69, the oldest engineer in point of service on the Erie Railroad, was killed, and four other trainmen were seriously injured today, when a passenger train, No. 10, split a switch, near here, sending an engine and three baggage and express cars into the ditch. The train was running forty miles an hour when it was derailed. No passengers were injured. Dande served the Erie continuously for 51 years.

THE ULSTER SURRENDER.

Some of us may have been anxious to crawl under the bed in the face of Sir Edward Carson's Ulster Falstaffian forces, his Ulster opera bouffee brigades; but we can now begin to sleep in our beds instead of shivering under them. Sir Edward seems to have tired of shaking the red rag of rebellion in the face of John Bull; he seems to have resigned himself to the fact that "the army must obey orders, even if the orders are to shoot down loyal Ulstermen." Speaking at Manchester, Sir Edward Carson greatly moderated his militant tone. He was satisfied with stipulating that under Home Rule, "Ulster would not be humiliated or degraded"; that 'Ulster must get no treatment different from that of other parts of the United Kingdom.' Sir Edward Carson, and those he speaks for, are evidently coming to regard reason as better than rifles. In denying that Ulstermen were not tampering with the British army, Sir Edward practically surrenders the dominance of the military method — weakens the force of the cry, "Ulster will fight." There is enough Scotch canniness in Ulster to recognise reason and common sense, when it comes down to hard facts; that the game of "bluff" has its limits. More than half of Ulster, according to parliamentary representation, is in favour of Home Rule.

THE PENALTY OF NEGLECT.

Despatches from England tell of a relief fund being collected for the widows and orphans of the miners who lost their lives in the Cardiff coal mine disaster. In connection with the subscriptions is an interesting commentary. It is distinctly stated that the assistance asked for is only for temporary relief, as permanent relief for the widows and orphans as provided for by the Workmen's Compensation Act and will be paid in due time.

This instance is in striking contrast to the conditions attending he Great Lakes disaster in Canada where the widows and orphans of the sailors who were drowned have to rely entirely on the public subscriptions unless they can prove negligence on the part of the employers. If the Whitney government had not delayed, but had passed a Workmen's Compensation Bill last session or in any of the sessions since 1907, when the matter has been brought up, the widows and rophans of the Ontario sailors would have had compensation provided for them directly by law and any subscriptions received would only have been, as in England, for temporary relief. But the Whitney government is like the deaf god, Baal, either he is talking or he is pursuing, or he is on a journey or per-adventure, he sleepeth and must be awakened.

THE FARMER'S FRIENDS.

The Ottawa correspondent is sometimes a beautifully imaginative being. The correspondent of the Toronto News has imagined something in the back of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's mind and asserts that the Liberal leader is sorry he spoke—that in declaring for free food he has alienated a host of friends. This wonderfully, in-seeing correspondent has also taken a peep into the minds of Liberals, and claims that they contain strong objections to free food, which is regarder as sacrificing the farmers for the benefit of the city consumers. We can easily see how the proposal of free food influences the minds of the Canadian farmer. The Canadian farmer who finds a ready market, with no taxtion brriers, for all and more than he can produce, will of course object to removal of taxation that will admit from the United States farm produce he cannot supply. He will be ruined by having a good market opened to him, and free access to the home market by outsiders who have something to sell that Canada does not produce in sufficient quantity. The farmer will be ruined if we admit free into Canada, eggs from the United States at a season when the Canadian hen is dormant. The poor farmer is fortunate to have the friends of the combines for his friends. The high cost of living doesn't add to the farmers' price. The consumer doesnt pay high prices to the farmers, but to the combines who buy in the cheapest market—from the farmer, and sell to the dearest market—to the consumer, at artificially inflate prices.

THERE'S THE RUB.

A local store has issued a dress-chart for men entitled "What to Wear; and When." A supplementary volume on "How to Pay for It" ought to have a good sale.—Montreal Herald.

REPUGNANCE TO CO-OPERATION.

The Regina "Province" charges that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is constant in "repugnance to any measure of naval co-operation for Imperial defence." When an agreement was made several years ago between Canada and Australia and the British Admiralty for naval co-operation Sir Wilfrid Laurier, then head of the Canadian Government, set about the fulfilment of Canada's part of the agreement. When Premier Borden took office he abandoned all action under that agreement. If there is repugnance to naval co-operation for Imperial defence it seems to be on the part of R. L. Borden, not Wilfrid Laurier.—Regina Leader.

FREE TRADE WOULD BENEFIT.

The Conservatives are explaining that there are other things which contribute to the high cost of living besides a high tariff, but they are not able to figure out that it is one of these causes, one which could be easily removed if their party was not joined to the idol of high protection, and the theory that the more trade is obstructed the better it is for the people. What has made Britain great? One thing is her trade with other nations, which these advocates of protection have been predicting from time to time would decline under free trade, instead of which it keeps expanding.—Stratford Beacon.

SAD CONDITIONS IN - THE CHIEF CITY OF CHRISTIAN CANADA

The investigations of the Montreal police have not only carried them into the east end of the city and into some of the best residential sections where, under the cover of decency and respectability surrounding them here and there are found the quiet little clubs and "homes" which are in reality places of prostitution of the worst type.

Several of the night cafes are also kept under surveillance now.

One of the first steps toward the downfall of many of the misguided girls is entrance into one of these cafes, which are becoming numerous, particularly on the east side of St. Lawrence street. An invitation to supper sounds innocent enough to her unsophisticated ears and the glow and sensation of the treat is only accentuated by the suggestion that a little sweet wine might go well with the bite to eat.

There have been cases reported where in order to accomplish his ends quickly the seducer of the girl has "doped the drink," and brought the girl under his influence by an even fouler means than that of the persuasion which he uses in the greater number of cases. The evil end accomplished the girl in nine cases out of ten, realizes the gravity of her position. She appreciates the fact that she has become one of the class which is generally known under the category of social outcasts.

At this point in the career of these girls the police encounter a condition which is probably one of the most serious with which they have to deal. Judge Choquet and those around him who are endeavouring to protect the girls are directing their efforts in their direction. It was such as these—girls who have fallen but who are not totally bad—who caused Judge Choquet's remark that "the girls of Montreal must be protected." It was on the evidence of such as these that the police inaugurated their campaign and started their crusade against the beautifully furnished and attractive clubs and "homes" into which these girls are led for immoral purposes.

The woman of the street, the recognized prostitute, may be found in her regular haunts. In most cases she is beyond reclamation, but the less hardened one, the girl with the mere blot in her life, is the one to be protected and in saving her those who are yet to be the victims of the male destroyers of character will also be protected.

Love of excitement, a desire for a pleasant evening and a good supper is what prompts the average girl to launch on her career and realizing this there enters into the situation the genuine "white slaver," the procurer, who for a price sells the body and soul of the unprotected girl. Already a number of arrests have been made, but unfortunately it is difficult to obtain the evidence necessary to obtain conviction.

The cafe presents, according to the allegations of one familiar with the question, a phase of this life which is unknown to many. Besides being a rendezvous it has become a place where for gain or "commission" the waiters "steer" a man toward the girl he is looking for.

"It seems incredible that such conditions should exist in a city like Montreal," remarked a man the other day, "but it is true and it is appalling. If the police cannot put an end to this, and the thousand other details of the social conditions pertaining to young girls, it is high time that Quebec was appealed to to take the matter in hand"—Montreal Herald.

THAT PORK CAKE RECIPE

Editor Examiner,—I was much interested in the recipes for making pork cake as published in your paper last night, but one of the recipes was very indefinite. One lady recommends 10 cents worth of this, 5 cents worth of that, and so on. What does she mean? Does it mean the actual value of the articles mentioned or the price the grocer charges? In this time of high prices such a distinction means a great deal in the compounding of a cake. There's quite a gap between what a thing is worth and what we have to pay for it.

Yours truly,
Housewife.

Majority Of Marriages Are Made In The Early Twenties And In Leafy Month Of June

So Say the Statistics Which Also Give Ottawa a Prominence That is Scarcely Enviable—The Fight Against Tuberculosis is Succeeding.

BIRTHS, DEATHS, MARRIAGES

The annual report of vital statistics for Ontario during the year 1912 has just been issued. The registrations were as follows:

Births	58,870
Marriages	28,845
Deaths	32,180
	119,895

The ratio of births and deaths per 1,000 of population during the past five years is as follows:

	Births.	Deaths
1908	25.6	13.8
1909	24.3	13.7
1910	24.9	13.9
1911	22.6	12.6
1912	22.4	12.4

The ratio of illegitimacy per 1,000 births is highest in Ottawa, showing 86.1 per 1,000, while Toronto's ratio is just half that figure. Kingston's ratio is 58.5 and London's 67.2 per 1,000. In regard to the mothers of such infants, 335 were domestics, 36 lived at home, 34 were factory hands, 20 were housekeepers, 12 were stenographers, 14 waitresses, 15 clerks, 12 saleslaidies, etc.

Marriages.

Windsor's marriage ratio for the year was 176.2 per 1,000 and 92.3 p.c. of these were of parties from the United States.

The report for three years in Windsor is as follows:

1911	2,774
1912	3,429

93 per cent. of the marriages in the province were solemnized under authority of license, and 7 per cent. by the publication of banns.

Methodist	26.46
Anglican	20.20
Presbyterian	10.32
Roman Catholic	16.21
Baptist	6.58

Majority Marry Young.

The record by ages is as follows:

	Grooms.	Brides	Per Cent.
15 to 19	546	5,762	10.94
25 to 29	9,025	6,273	26.52
30 to 34	4,108	2,496	11.45

Of the marriages between Catholics and other denominations, 820 men married outside their faith, while 1,096 women so married.

Deaths.

Organic heart disease	7.47%
Tuberculosis, all classes	7.00%
Cancer	5.53%
Pneumonia	5.06%
Infantile diarrhoea	3.56%
Diseases of arteries	3.55%
Cerebral hemorrhage	3.20%
Bright's disease	2.63%
Paralysis	1.70%
Typhoid fever	1.50%

Cancer continues to take a high toll of life. There were 176 more deaths from this cause than during 1911. Heart disease and Bright's disease continue on the increase, but fortunately there was a sharp decrease in deaths from diphtheria and typhoid fever.

The heaviest death rate from tuberculosis occurs in the twenties. Over 26 p.c. of all deaths from this cause occurred between 20—29, while over 48 per cent. occurred between 20 and 39 years.

The report says "very many of our immigrants are of that class of Europeans who love to cluster in small places and live in conditions impossible to the Anglo-Saxon; conditions which are most favourable to the propogation of this disease and yet in spite of all which has to be contended with, the death rate is decreasing. This speaks loudly for the anti-tuberculosis campaign being waged against this scourge by individuals and associations.

Occupations with the percentage of deaths from tuberculosis for the past 8 years are given in part as follows: Male—Cigar-makers 46, stonecutters 34.9, stenographers 33.3, street railway employees 31.7, printers 30.3, on down to physicians 4.9, brokers 4.3, millers 4.0, coopers 3.3. Female occupations—Telephone operators 62.5, factory hands 50.7, bookkeepers and accountants 44.1, clerks 42, stenographers 40.2, on down to housewives 8.9, domestics and helpers 2.2.

Has Lowest Death Rate.

Of the cities of the province, Peterborough has the lowest death rate with a ratio of 11.4 per 1,000. Berlin is next with 11.5. Port Arthur is high with 25.0; Kingston is next with 20.2.

Infant Mortality.

Among the principal causes of infant mortality under 5 years in Ontario during 1912, the following are given with the number of victims: Measles fever 85, whooping cough 404, diphtheria and croup 193, meningitis 215, convulsions 495, pneumonia 419, bronch-pneumonia 337, diarrhoea and enteritis 1196, congenital debility 3,101 (under one year), burns 49, drowning 29.

The statistics prove that June is the most popular month for marriages with September a second favourite.

AFTER GRIPPE

Made Strong by Vinol.

John C. Furman, of Clarion, Pa., says: "After a very severe attack of the grippe my system was in a weakened, nervous and run-down condition. I had no appetite at all. I was obliged to continue with my work and nothing seemed to help me until a friend induced me to take Vinol. I began to note good results from the first bottle. I continued its use and am now sound and well as ever.

In health one cannot realize how depressed a person may become after trying one remedy after another without benefit for such a condition as Mr. Furman was in, or what a relief it is to find help and be restored to health and strength.

It is the combined action of the medicinal curative element of cods' livers without the greasy oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron, that makes Vinol so efficient in building up the weakened run-down system.

ENGLISH LABOUR CONDITIONS

Strike of Great Western Employees Has Seriously Affected a Number of Industries

WHERE TROUBLE IS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 5.—There is a real danger to-day, that English labour will get out of hand. The rapid spread of the Great Western strike, despite the vigorous efforts of the officials of the National Union of Railwaymen is significant. The strike arose from two engine drivers refusing to handle traffic for Dublin. Their action was immediately repudiated by the Union officials, but the men simply defied their own officials. Already several big industries have had to close down on account of lack of transportation services following the strike of the the Great Western men. The real fight of labour to-day has developed to a struggle not between the employers and employees, but between trades unionism and syndicatism. An attempt being made to-day to settle matters is dangerously interfered with by those whose personal devotion to Larkin have led them to ignore their own recognized leaders.

Is Presented With Club Bag

Mr. Jas. Murdock is Honoured on Eve of His Departure

On the evening of Wednesday, the 3rd inst. the Rev. T. B. McCorkindale and the members of the Board of Management and the choir of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church, invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Murdoch to pay their respects to them prior to their leaving for their new home in Hamilton. A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the accompanying address and presentation were made:

To James Murdoch, Esq.:

Dear Friend,—We, your co-workers in the Board of Management and the choir of the Presbyterian Church, have heard with deep regret of your early departure from Lakefield.

We assure you, we feel that your removal from our midst, will be a distinct loss, and you will leave a vacant place which will be hard to fill. Your counsel and assistance have always been characterized by shrewd foresight and sound judgment, and prompted by a disregard of selfish gain.

During your sojourn in Lakefield, you and your family have not only been faithful and earnest co-workers in all departments of church work but your influence and example in the community have always been of a helpful and uplifting character.

In asking you to accept this club-bag, we know you will value it, not for its intrinsic worth but as a slight token of the high esteem in which we hold you, not only as a co-worker, but also in your social capacity as a friend. And we pray that God may abundantly bless you and yours in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the Board of Management and the Choir,

A. E. KENNEDY,
M. J. SUTTON,
ALICE HUNTER,
WM. FAIRBAIRN.

Our Ideal

Man seldom over-reaches an ideal, but the higher he will rise in an effort to attain it. Some one has said "The way to a good reputation is endeavor to be what you desire to appear." We believe our "Ideals" would be considered high even in these days when business honesty is the rule—not the exception. In a word the ideal of this house has been to make the name 'Halls' so synonymous with quality that no further guarantee or qualification should be necessary, This means making absolutely sure that every article sold under our name is the product of honest workmanship intelligently and efficiently applied to honest material. When you buy Xmas Gift Goods from the Hall Store—you buy Quality Gift Goods.

Y.M.C.A. GYMNASIUM CROWDED FOR THE HAYSEED CARNIVAL

More Than Four Hundred People Enjoyed the Exhibition of Gymnasium Work, and the Humorous Portion of the Entertainment.

TO BE REPEATED TO-NIGHT

A crowd of people who filled every available place in the gymnasium of the Y.M.C.A. attended the Hayseed Carnival last night. And it is putting it mildly to say that they "got their money's worth."

The veriest farmer, in his hoeing togs, would look well dressed beside the fellows in the strange costumes, who took part in affair last night. But there is many an athletic young fellow in the city who would appear very much like a native of the back woods, had he attempted some of the difficult feats accomplished by the gymnastic experts last night.

The entertainment was a splendid exhibition of gymnasium work. It spoke eloquently for the work that is being carried on by the energetic Physical Director, Mr. J. J. Thompson, and showed what is being done in the way of physical training for the members of the "Y." But the laugh was a continuous one, the clowns and hayseeds, and more than all the rest Bud Fisher's subjects, Mutt and Jeff, never allowed the humourous element of the entertainment to lag.

Every boy who took part was dressed in strange costume, and if representation was true, the farmers must be given a great deal of credit for their variety of style in clothes.

Good music was provided in abundance. The piano accompaniment to the drills was made up of all the latest song hits and dance tunes, and was to be heard between the programme numbers. Besides these two splendid numbers were given by the "Pumpkin Centre Mandolin Club."

The boxing bout between George Washington White, who resembles Jack Johnson, and little Jeff, was thoroughly laughable. In spite of his lilliputian disadvantages Jeff made the negro take the count at the opening of the first round.

But while fun predominated, the affair last night was a splendid exposition of gymnasium work. The quartette, credited on the programme with the names Hans, Cart, Clod and Alex, effected some daring and difficult feats on the high bar, that were something new to the audience.

The drills and feats by the Junior Boys' Class, Junior Leaders, Senior Class, Senior Leaders, Employed Boys' Class, Employed Boys and their Leaders' Corps, were very warmly applauded. All showed the result of the systematic training, and the collection of muscular young figures was the best possible boast for the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. Feats on the high bar, horse and parallel bars, constituted the athletic work.

The affair was all that it was announced to be—laughable, interesting, and a splendid exhibition. If the advice of those who attended last night has any influence, the accommodations will be taxed to their limits by a cheerful crowd again to-night.

Cattle Rustlers Are Active

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 5—The County police are scouring Plympton Township in an effort to run down the rustlers who have been making wholesale thefts of valuable stock from pasture fields. It is believed that the cattle thieves are from across the border. That the thefts are the work of experts attracted by the high prices obtainable for fine cattle is shown by the cleverness with which all traces have been obliterated. Port Huron and Detroit police are keeping close watch.

STARTS A HUNGER STRIKE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 5.—It developed this morning that Mrs. Pankhurst inaugurated a hunger and thirst strike immediately after she was arrested on the steamer "Majestic" yesterday, and to-day she is very weak in Exeter Jail, which is a small affair and not equipped for dealing with recalcitrant suffragettes. She has not tasted food or drink of any kind for forty hours.

TO OUR OLD COUNTRY READERS.

Best Date For Sending Christmas Mail, Presents, Etc., to the Old Country.

In response to many enquiries from Old Country readers, The Examiner made inquiries as to the best date for sending Christmas cards, presents, etc., to the Old Land. We find the best date is the 10th of December. This mail will reach the Old Country by the 19th or 20th. Another later date is the 14th, which is positively the latest date. As this will not reach England till the 23rd or 24th, and bearing in mind the tremendous Christmas mail handled in England, to ensure delivery by the 25th (Christmas Day), The Examiner urges its Old Country readers to mail their cards, presents, etc., not later than Dec. 10th. This will ensure their being delivered at their destination by Christmas Day.

The Simple or Expensive Gift Can Always Take The Form of a Blouse

And Be Sure of a Genuine Welcome

FOR where is the woman, has she ever so many blouses, who would not be delighted to receive, as a gift, one of the new creations such as the second floor is now showing.

There is a whole host of them, Cotton, Flannel, Silk, etc., etc., ranging in price from $1.50 to $15.00.

One that we must surely mention here is an adorable conception in Figured Satin Chiffon of ecru shade.

Shadow Lace is used for the Robespierre Collar, the vest effect, and in the place of the cuffs on the sleeves.

It is made with modish drop shoulder, and is very smart; indeed with it's round pearl buttons and chic bow of green velvet. The price is $9.50

Another Blouse in a mellow, old gold colour, is of the new Silk-Suede Crepe, and has a deep turn down collar and three quarter sleeves.

Trimmed also with round pearl buttons, this is most charming and dainty and is priced $9.00.

OPENING MEETING OF I.O.O.F. WAS LARGELY ATTENDED

Interesting Address by Mr. Frank Merritt—Similar Meetings Will be Held Each Month.

A MUSICAL PROGRAMME

Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, Independent Order of Oddfellows held an open meeting on Thursday evening at which an excellent address was delivered by Mr. Frank Merritt. The seating capacity of the hall was taxed to its limit when Mr. E. Dormer, Noble Grand, called the meeting to order. The object of the meeting, said the chairman, was to give the members an opportunity of acquiring fluency of speech and self-possession. In this respect the meeting proved to be an unqualified success.

"Why the Hebrews delayed in the Wilderness," formed the subject of Mr. Merritt's address.

The study of this subject, said the speaker, impresses upon us the great truth "That human nature is and always has been the same the world over," also that it is moved by the same hopes and fears at all times under similar circumstances.

Before entering into this question, let us for a moment or two look into its surroundings. You will remember the residence of the Hebrews in Egypt began with the sale of Joseph by his brethren. Joseph experienced a little trouble at first, but he soon won the favour of the king — King Osirtesen the 2nd. Joseph was made prime minister of Egypt. It was during his time that the great famine occurred. Joseph warned by the Lord stored away great quantities of grain. This he did year by year until he had enough on hand with which to feed the whole nation for years. The famine came. The wisdom of Joseph's course under Divine guidance became apparent. Joseph while feeding the people took advantage of this occasion to greatly strengthen the government. You will remember, at this time the Egyptian people largely owned their own farms, growing on the delta their grain and other produce. Just how the famine was caused we have no means of knowing. The land was chiefly watered then and is still watered, now, simply by the River Nile overflowing its banks. So regularly do the waters of the Nile overflow, that the time of the year can be accurately told simply by measuring the height of the water in the river. When the crops of the Egyptians failed, the people came to the government for food. At this time Joseph put in force the plan he had been maturing. When the people's money was exhausted, he compelled them to pledge their lands, in exchange for food. When the famine had ended, the king not only reigned over the land, but also the titles of their property were invested in himself. Thereafter the people rented the land from the government as arranged by Joseph.

Were Kindly Treated.

When Joseph's brethren came to Egypt, continued Mr. Merritt, they were kindly treated and made much of, for Joseph, their brother was high in command. This happy condition of affairs continued for quite a long time. But a change came. As the Bible very poetically expresses it "There arose another Pharaoh who knew not Joseph."

The meaning of this saying is. There had been a war in Egypt. The Hebrews had very naturally fought on the side of the government that had cared for them so well. The tide of war went against them. The government was defeated. The king was deposed, and "there arose another Pharaoh who knew not Joseph."

Disaster and ruin followed hard in the wake of the red tide of war. The dark cloud of despair enshrouded them in its sombre hue. The Hebrews instead of being the favoured guests of an indulgent government, became the slaves of a haughty king.

Even at this early period the influence began to be felt that was to detain them in the wilderness for forty years instead of four weeks. The Hebrews sojourned in Egypt for a period exceeding four hundred years, and during the greater part of that time, they endured slavery of increasing hardship. A slavery that melted their manhood from generation to generation. Their fear of their oppressors steadily grew stronger as their moral fibre grew weaker, until their manliness and hope had almost sunk to the vanishing point. In all that nation of slaves, there was not a man in whose soul the fires of independence and high enterprise dwelt. Their spirits were quenched in hopeless drudgery. The Lord cannot do anything with a spineless man. There must be activity and action. The man who is neither hot nor cold can only be cast aside as dross.

'A Man Arose."

Just at this time when all seemed to be lost, when despair seemed to have darkened all hope, A man arose. A man who had never felt the benumbing influence of slavery, who had been educated in the learning of that age, had been trained to command, and had been associated with the leaders of men. A man who had lead the armies of Egypt to victory against a hitherto victorious foe. Such a man was Moses. But he had a very discouraging task before him. A leader of an inert people. A nation of men who had become childlike in their ideas, all clinging to him for guidance, support and management. Amenophis of Manetho was king of Egypt at this time. At the time of which we speak, at the north of the Red Sea, there were wide shallow lakes of water. It is the opinion that the Hebrews crossed at this point.

In due time Moses led his people through Egypt.

The Hebrews were pursued by the Egyptians. They found themselves with the deep water in front of them, the mountains around them and the Egyptians in command of the passes. Like the cowed slaves that they were, there was no thought of dying at their posts in defence of their liberty. Fearful of the encounter with their enemies. They cringingly cried out: "O let us go back to the yoke of our masters, lest they harm us."

It is only a miracle that can save a cowardly people, while a nation of noble souls can accomplish miracles. The Lord had a high purpose for the decendants of these people. But even the Lord Himself will not do anything with a spiritless nation.

Became Impossible.

The Hebrews so long under the lash of their task-masters had become impossible as a self-sustaining and a conquering nation.

The Lord fed them, protected them and led them hither and thither throughout the wilderness. By the might of His power he protected these people, who were almost afraid of their own shadows, and were quite unable to care for themselves. They were not a fit and capable people to fight and possess the land of promise. The men who came out of Egypt died in the wilderness. The children of these men had a dim memory of their bandage and to a certain extent had inherited some of their dependant nature, these were also allowed to grow to old age in the wilderness. The next generation knew naught of slavery. In their minds there was not the slightest trace of subserviency. They had been disciplined in the stern school of the desert.

These people were fierce and intractible, overbearing too at times, but they were real men. Men whose souls were manned with high resolves. Men whom the Lord could use and whom he did use to accomplish very wonderful things.

These were men of action. Men of fearless thought. They crossed the river Jordan under the leadership of Joshua. It cannot be said of these people that they ever waited to count the number of their enemies.

When their general gave the order to advance, so impetuous was their charge, their enemies sought to flee before them. For these lion-hearted men the ordinary day was all too short. They prayed not for darkness to hide them, nor for any to help them.

But they did pray to the Lord that the light of day would be maintained until they had completed the overthrow of the enemies of the Lord.

The mainspring of successful effort is found in the combination of knowledge, energy and courage.

The lack of these kept the Hebrews out of their inheritance for forty years. Motion and force moves the universe. If each of us cultivates these attributes, our lodge will surely accomplish wonderful things, said Mr. Merritt in conclusion.

The proceedings were enlivened by the presence of the Opera House Orchestra, also a couple of vocal solos by Mr. F. Skitch, an instrumental solo by Mr. W. H. Barrie, and a recitation by Mr. W. McLaren.

A vote of thanks was moved and seconded by Mr. D. H. Moore and Mr. W. Young, respectively. This was carried unanimously by the audience. At the close of the meeting the chairman announced that similar meetings will be held each month, and that the next meeting would be favoured with an address by Mr. W H. Barrie on "Our Ancient Architecture."

Concert By Grace Church Sunday School

Rendered Splendid Programme of Drills, Dialogues and Musical Numbers Last Night

The Grace Church Sunday school gave a very pleasing entertainment in the Sunday school last night. Mr. J. J. Hartley, superintendent, was chairman for the occasion, and the concert was well attended.

The musical numbers were very much enjoyed and all of them were warmly received by the audience. The drills showed considerable training, and the scholars are to be congratulated on the thoroughness with which they had prepared for the concert last night.

The Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of the George Street Church, was present and gave a brief talk.

The programme was successfully rendered as follows:

Chorus — 'Onward Christian Soldiers.'
Prayer—Rev. R. G. Peever.
Piano Solo—Miss Isabella Baird.
A sketch—"An Unexpected Entertainment" by six young ladies.
Chorus—Primary Department.
Vocal Solo—Miss Mary Grieves.
Recitation—Addie C. Wright.
Hoop Drill—A number of girls.
Vocal Solo—Miss Nellie Wright.
Camping Scene—S. S. scholars.
Piano Duet—Misses Grace McClennan and Helen Grieves.
Dialogue—Masters W. Simpson and H. Henry.
Recitation—Miss Beatty.
Sailors' Drill—Girls and boys.
Parasol Drill — Young ladies and young men.
Address—Rev. Mr. Peever.

After the programme, refreshments were served. They had been carefully prepared and were voted delightful by all in the audience.

WILL REPORT ON TRENT WATERSHED

Dominion Conservation Commission to Make Report on the Subject

OTTAWA, Dec. 4—Fears that extensive timber cutting and general forest depletion in the Trent watershed will eventually remove the source of water supply and render useless the new Trent Valley Canal, are entertained by the Commission on Conservation.

It is preparing a report on the whole subject and is recommending that either the Dominion or the Province of Ontario acquire properties in the district and protect the forest growth. For years extensive lumbering operations have been carried on there and they are still in progress.

The new canal is costing about ten million dollars and promises to be of great economic utility. It is of fundamental importance, however, that the watershed supplying it be kept intact by preserving the adjacent forest growth.

Another report in preparation will deal with the coal supply of Canada, and suggest action to obviate much present waste of by-products. It is stated that the international Geological delegates this summer when visiting Canada, were shocked at wasteful methods in many galleries.

Judgment Against Dr. Leseur

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—In the famous action over the writing of the life of William Lyon MacKenzie, the Court of Appeal to-day gave judgment against Dr. W. S. Lesueur in his appeal from judgment which restrained him from using the materials he had secured from G. G. S. Lindsay. The Court of Appeal said LeSueur was making MacKenzie merely "A puller down of Canada," instead of a "Maker of Canada," which was the series Lesueur was writing for.

A CHAUFFEUR'S GOOD LUCK

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, QUE., Dec. 5.—When he was a soldier in the United States' army nearly two years ago in Arizona, Wilfrid Goode, now a chauffeur here, assisted and gave first aid to an old gentleman who had been thrown from his horse. To-day he received corroborated word that the man had left leaving Goode nearly forty thousand dollars in cash. He is leaving for Arizona to-morrow to get it.

REDUCTIONS ONLY BY C. P. R. IS SUGGESTED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—That the Board order a reduction on freight rates to the C.P.R. and not on the Grand Trunk Pacific or Canadian Northern, because the C.P.R. had received generous public gifts and the other roads had not received aid commensurate with the cost of construction, was the suggestion made this morning by James Bicknell, K.C., counsel for the Dominion Government in the freight rates case.

ANNUAL MEETING OF S HERWOOD FOREST

Sherwood Forest Camp, Woodmen of the World, will hold their annual meeting on Monday night next, when the Head Clerk of the Order, Chas. Jarvis, will visit the Camp. Forty new candidates will be initiated and the Camp is making every effort to win the prize for the banner Camp in Canada.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR PETERBOROUGH

The handsome residence on Hunter street, belonging to Mr. John Crane, Manager of the Dominion Bank here, has been purchased by Mrs. Harvey Thompson, formerly of Bobcaygeon. The deal was put through by Messrs. C. J. Carroll & Co. The purchaser will convert the house into a private hospital. Miss Thompson, who will be in charge, is a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital, New York, and has had many years' experience.

NO SIGN OF COLD WEATHER

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—Mild weather prevails to-day over all parts of the Dominion and the probabilities given out by the Observatory indicate that there will be no decided change. To-morrow will continue very much the same as to-day. The cause of this unusual steady spell of mild weather is the fact that an area of low pressure prevails over the entire northern half of the continent.

LINDSAY CURLERS GET CUP FROM PETERBOROUGH

Matthews-Laing Co. Present Trophy For Big Bonspiel.

Curlers in Lindsay and outside points will be interested in knowing that still another "cup" has been received for the big bonspiel to be held in Lindsay on January 12th, the Matthews-Laing Co., of Peterborough having generously added their wish to help along the big event. The offer was accepted at a meeting of the Club held yesterday afternoon and will go as a trophy in the consolation event.

President F. J. Carew has also donated a handsome cup for the 'Spiel, to be known as the Carew Cup. It will be placed as a trophy in the Grand Aggregate event, and although always remaining the property of the Lindsay Curling Club, will be held by the winner until challenged by some other club.

First Official Entry.

The first official entry for the big 'Spiel has been received from Mr. P. H. Douglas of th Thistle Club, of Hamilton, Ont. Other official entries include one from the Manitoba Curling Association, and one from McNevin of Chatham, Ont.—Lindsay Warder.

FINED IN PORT HOPE MOVES TO PETERBOROUGH

Charles Lawrence, who gives Orillia as his place of abode, partook too freely of the cup that cheers. He made things very busy on the main street, jostling people on the sidewalk and swearing to the top of his voice. In court yesterday afternoon he pleaded guilty and was fined $5.00 and $4.00 costs. But the fine had not the desired effect and Lawrence appeared again this morning on a charge of being drunk. He expressed his sincere regrets to the Court and promised to leave town at once if given a chance. He had a ticket for Peterborough and thought he would be able to secure employment. Sentence was suspended for an hour and Lawrence left by the 11 o'clock train for Peterborough.—Port Hope Guide.

The Engineer Goes Insane.

SARNIA, Dec. 5.—Late Wednesday Calvin Robinson, engineer on the Reid tug Diver, went insane and caused much excitement on board the craft until he was taken from the boat when she arrived at this port. He kept running about the boat believing that some one was chasing him to kill Him.

Liquor by Post Barred.

OTTAWA, Dec. 5.—It is understood that Hon. L. P. Pelletier has issued an order prohibiting the carriage of liquor by parcel post. Parcel post will be in operation early in the New Year, and much interest has been shown as to what attitude the Postmaster-General would assume in this regard.

Cripple Slays Farmer.

WELLSBURG, W.Va., Dec. 5.—Daniel Lee, of Steubenville, Ohio, a 19-year-old cripple, late Wednesday confessed to having murdered Geo. Monroe, aged 50, a farmer, for his money.

HOLD-UP IN NEW ONTARIO

Fake Farm Hand Robs Employer on the Way Home.

BERLIN, Ont., Dec. 5.—A hold-up in typical western fashion was perpetrated on the Petersburg road, a couple of miles from here, when Anton Waurish was relieved of $25 and some change. While Waurish was about town he met a young man who claimed to be a farm hand and he offered him a job on his farm. The stranger accepted, and Waurish and he took the former's rig and drove away. When they had gone about two miles, the would-be farm hand demanded the valuables off Waurish. A fight resulted and the stranger drew a revolver to emphasize his demands. After securing the money with revolver drawn the modern Dick Turpin turned the horse around, and drove to Berlin. The victim chanced a ride, and upon reaching the city notified the police. In the morning a warrant was issued for the arrest of a young man whom the police suspect.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

Denver Firm Gets C.P.R.'s Eight Mile Hon-Dollar Tunnel.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 5.—A railroad contract for $8,000,000 has been let to the tunnel-driving firm of James A. McIlwhe & Sons of Denver. They have agreed to drive ten miles of tunnel for the Canadian Pacific Railway in British Columbia. Work will start Jan. 1, and must be completed within three years. A double-track bore five miles long will be driven under the Rogers' Pass, the pass at the summit of the Selkirks.

A smaller and parallel tunnel will be driven with crosscuts to the main survey at every 500 feet, and stations will be established from which headings will be run in either direction. In this manner the tunnel proper will shortly be driven from a dozen different directions.

The contract is said to be the largest tunnel job ever let in America. Construction camps costing $50,000 are now being erected at either portal.

Will Not Give Up Arms.

BELFAST, Ireland, Dec. 5.—Prominent Unionists here say that any attempt to deprive the Ulster volunteers of their weapons will mean an uprising in the northern Irish province.

At the Ulster Union headquarters it is said the importations of arms into Ireland will be stopped by a revival of the Irish Crimes Act, which has been in abeyance for several years owing to the absence of the home rule agitation.

This act of Parliament forbids the carrying of arms and gives to the authorities powers of search and confiscation.

Dead as Result of Fall.

WELLAND, Dec. 5. — Silas Vieth died in the County Hospital Wednesday night as the result of a broken back. When a number of G.T.R. men became intoxicated he fell or was pushed from a hand-car at the depot here. Dr. Colbeck, coroner, opened an investigation yesterday afternoon, the case being placed before the coroner's jury and an adjourned meeting will be held Wednesday next.

Cheap Hotels Should Go.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—"Every one of those places should be closed in their entirety," declared Mayor Fitzgerald after he had completed early yesterday a tour of several hours among the cheap lodging houses in various sections of the city conducted along the lines of the Arcadia, where 28 men were killed in Wednesday morning's fire.

"The conditions," continued the mayor, "are shameful. It is the duty of society to car for these unfortunates who are forced to seek such places for their lodging."

A LONG SPELL OF PLEASANT WEATHER.

During the Past Thirteen Months There Has Been But Little Winter.

During the past twelve months there has been no preponderance of winter weather. December, 1912, was rather mild and New Year's Day was actually balmy. Spring opened up on scheduled time and thus of the past thirteen months it is safe in saying that there have been only two months of winter. November just passed was beautiful weather, and the first five days of December have been like a week out of April or May. And now you hear people predicting that there will be mighty little winter. The farmers claim to be wild after having had a look at the kind of hogs recently killed. The present should be a lure, however. The law of averages must be maintained in weather conditions as in all others. Hence, winter will be along here one of these days, although this morning's sun and warmth suggested that it was months away.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Dec. 7, 1913.

(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Fall of Jericho, Josh. v:10—vi:27.

Golden Text—All things are possible to him that believeth. Mark ix:23.

(1.) Verse 10—What was the nature of the service called "the passover"?

(2.) Verse 11—What promise had they of the fertility of the land as compared to the wilderness through which they had just passed?

(3.) What spiritual or religious experience do true Christians have today that answers to eating good bread?

(4.) Verse 12—Does God ever help us when we are well able to help ourselves or even fail to help us when we cannot help ourselves? Give your reasons.

(5.) Verses 13-15—Who was this man with a drawn sword that Joshua saw?

(6.) Would you say this was a man of flesh and blood or a materialized spirit?

(7.) Would this man probably have been visible to any but those whose eyes were prepared to see him?

(8.) What reason is there to believe that, though unseen by us, an angel prepared to defend us always accompanies each child of God?

(9.) What instructions or information did this captain of the host of the Lord probably give to Joshua?

(10.) Who is our captain in life's warfare and what are our prospects for a complete victory?

(11.) Chapter vi:1—Who were the inhabitants of Jericho and what was the probable population of the city?

(12.) By what means was the city shut up?

(13) What effect did the crossing of the Jordan in such a miraculous way have upon the people of Canaan? (See Josh. v:1.)

(14.) Verses 2-5—What were the tactics which the Lord instructed Joshua to pursue in capturing Jericho?

(15.) Considering the age and the circumstances, what effect would these tactics be likely to have upon the fears of the people inside the city?

(16.) Verses 6-16—If there had been any variation in this plan of campaign from God's instructions what would have been the probable result?

(17.) Does God ever require of us in this age to believe or do anything contrary to reason? Give your reasons.

(18.) Verse 17—What had Rahab, the harlot, done that she and her house should be saved alive? (See Josh. ii:1-8.)

(19.) Verses 18-19—What was the accursed thing that they were forbidden to touch?

(20.) What are the grave evils of what is known as looting in time of war?

(21.) Verses 20-21—Is there any way to explain the falling of the walls of Jericho other than as the direct act of God?

(22.) Would you say or not, and why, that the overthrow of Jericho was a result of faith?

(23.) To what extent may we exercise faith for the overthrow of all obstacles in our way financial, spiritual and otherwise?

(24.) Verses 22-25—What experiences have you personally of the promises of God having been fulfilled or having failed?

(25.) Verses 26-27—What was the result to the man who in after years undertook to rebuild Jericho?

Lesson for Sunday, Dec. 14, 1913, The Sin of Achan. Josh. vii.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The opening to-day was quiet and price changes small. This meant that stocks were a little stronger than in London, and there was evidence of good buying in leading active issues. U.P. and Rdg. started unchanged, the former at 151 7-8 and the latter at 162 1-2. U.S. opened 1-8 down and traders said the price had been weakened as a result of the covering of shorts.

The market showed further strength during the day. It was said that inside interests do not desire to see any marked advance in prices at present. The sharp advance in call money was a factor threatening, getting as high as 8 per cent at a time when the street had begun to look for easier conditions.

OLD COUNTRY SOCCER FIXTURES FOR SATURDAY

The Rovers Meet the Pensioners at Blackburn--Leeds to Meet Woolwich--A Referee Strike is Threatened

A full list of interesting games are scheduled in the Old Country for Saturday. The "Rovers" meet the "Pensioners" at Blackburn, and should have little difficulty in maintaining their hold at the head of the table. The two Manchester teams clash at Hyde Road in the annual Derby. Last season the "City" won one game, and the "United" one, so the result is sure to be interesting. Sunderland and Bolton Wanderers clash at Sunderland, and as both teams have been doing well these last few weeks, the game should be a corker.

Leeds to Meet Woolwich.

The "Peacocks" will surely be out for scalps when they visit Woolwich, especially after their 8 to 0 victory over Notts Forest last Saturday. Notts County will have to play hard to maintain their hold in the second division, as they journey to Bury, Bradford should have no difficulty in disposing of Huddersfield Town, and if Bury beats Notts, Bradford will advance to the head of the table.

The following are the games scheduled:

ENGLISH LEAGUE.

Old Novocastrians vs. Westoe.
Hull and E. Riding vs. Ottley.
Weston-Super-Mare vs. Bristol.

A referee strike is threatened in Scotland. The compulsory retiring of Scottish referees without enquiry has led to great discontent amongst the fraternity. The general body of referees in Scotland are naturally indignant at this new method of trying and finding a man guilty in his absence and passing sentence of excommunication without permitting him to explain or say anything in extenuation of his alleged misdoings. All the referees have been watched, and it was in consequence of the reports sent in as a result of this espionage that some of them received peremptory orders to quit. But what the public, and the referees as a body, would like to know is, who were the gentlemen who undertook the task of watching, whether they were thoroughly capable of undertaking the job, and whether they formed their opinions as to the incapacity of the referees in question by their conduct in one match or in a series of matches. For even the best of referees have their off days. Some games are very easy to referee, and others are just the reverse. A great deal depends on the players and the importance of the occasion. A referee cannot please everybody, and he is a very foolish person if he tries to do so. So long as he wields his powers impartially, and endeavours to the utmost of his power to detect any and all infringements of the rules, then he will not only have the approval of his own conscience, but will deserve the support and respect of the followers of the game as a whole.

Transferred.

Benson of Sheffield United, regarding whom I wrote yesterday, has been transferred to Woolwich Arsenal, where he joins Lievesly and Hardinge, former clubmates.

Glasgow Chosen.

Celtic Park has been chosen for the Welsh match in the spring. It is nearly 30 years since this National was played in Glasgow. Aberdeen's claims for the match this year were supposed to be pre-eminent.

Shamrock Downed.

The Scottish League representatives won the Inter-League championship last season, and they have a capital chance of repeating their success this season, for, having already beaten the Southern and Irish League teams, they require only to draw with the English League eleven at Burnley next March to make it certain that none of their rivals will finish above them on points. It is possible, of course, even if the Scots draw their concluding game, for the Englishmen to win on goal average, and to do that they would require to beat the Southern League. The Irish League are again at the foot of the chart, with nary a point to serve as consolation, although all three games were played on Irish soil, and the Southern League representatives have in their two matches lost more goals than in any season since they joined the Inter-League tournament. The Inter-League table now stands:

	P.	W.	L.	D.	F.	A.	P.
Scottish League.	2	2	0	0	7	1	4
Football League.	1	1	0	0	2	0	2
Southern League	2	1	1	0	4	6	2
Irish League ...	3	0	3	0	2	8	0

HOCKEY

Seven teams turned up at the meeting held in the Boston Cafe last night to organize a Junior City Hockey League—a pretty strong evidence of the interest that is being taken in the winter game by the youngsters of the city. The clubs represented were the Alerts, Wanderers, Arrows, Boston Exploits, Y.M.C.A., Collegiate Institute and the Peterborough Hockey Club Reserves. All of which signified their intention of entering teams.

The proposed league was discussed with enthusiasm and it was decided to adopt the same age limit as the Junior O.H.A. series, that is the players must be under twenty years of age on Jan 1st. It was also decided that O.H.A. players should be barred from competition, but that in the event of a City League player being drafted during the season by the O. H.A. club, he would be allowed to finish out the season with his City League team.

The great drawback to the success of the league, the financial problem was the principal topic of discussion. To secure the rink for nights enough to complete a schedule with half a dozen teams competing would require a considerable sum and severely tax the resources of the young magnates. It was decided to interview the rink management to-night and secure terms after which the teams would be able to figure out the cost per team and decide upon their future course.

A committee composed of a representative of each team was appointed to secure this information.

The Collegiate team, after the meeting, had decided to bar O.H.A. players, withdrew their team from the League, and it is likely that the Student players will try for places on the Reserves.

BASEBALL

OTTAWA, DEC. 4.—A new trophy is to be presented to the Canadian Baseball League. It will be given to the player who proves the most valuable to his club next season. The silverware will be presented by Mr. Leclare, and the winner will be decided by a vote of a committee of baseball officials to be named shortly by the Canadian League. Mr. Leclare, who was host to many of the ball teams during their stay in the capital last summer, will confer with Manager Frank Shaughnessy, of the Ottawas, who will lay the matter before the Canadian League delegates at their annual meeting, which is to be held at Toronto to-morrow.

The trophy is valued at $380, and is of solid silver, mounted on an ebony base, and topped off with the figure of a baseball player, bat in hand. It is beautifully designed, and will undoubtedly prove a most acceptable trophy. It will be put up for annual competition, and will not become the permanent property of any one player.

During the three years that the Canadian League has been in existence, Mr. George (Honey Boy) Evans, the well known minstrel, has presented the leading batter with a trophy. It was won in 1910 by Louie Bierbauer, and in 1911 by Jack Fryer. Last season the leading batter was Jack Schaeffer of Guelph, who beat out Frank Shaughnessy by several points. Jack Wright, also of Guelph, was second. If the Federal Hotel Cup had been up last season, however, it would probably have been awarded to Edgar Rogers, of the Ottawas, who was without a doubt the most useful man to his team. Cars for the best all-round men in the American and National Leagues were up last summer. Jake Daubert of Brooklyn, won the National League auto, while in the American League, Walter Johnson was the most valuable. Frank Shaughnessy, "Lefty" Rogers, Artie Lage, Louie Bierbauer, Rube Deneau, "Chubby" Coose, and other Canadian Leaguers will undoubtedly make a big bid for the Canadian honours next season. Rules governing the trophy will be drawn up at Saturday's meeting, when a committee to decide the winner will also be named. The presentation of the Federal Trophy will create a lot of interest in the Canadian League games.

Frank Shaughnessy will likely go up to Toronto to-night, to represent the Senators at meeting of the Canadian League. He wishes to do some negotiating with the other clubs, whose delegates will begin to arrive to-morrow morning, and it is probable that the Ottawa chief will put through one or two trades that will tend to strengthen the local team. Frank has a couple of good men on the market and would like to land one star who played in the West last year. Shaughnessy seeks pitchers, and one infielder to replace New Crowder, and will go down to Philadelphia a few weeks hence to interview Connie Mack.

The make-up of the league for 1914 will be decided at the meeting. It is likely that both Guelph and Berlin will be given a year in which to show that they are worthy of a berth in the Canadian League. A committee will be named to draft the schedule. In the event of Guelph and Berlin being dropped, a six-league club will be formed, as neither Erie nor Niagara Falls is yet prepared to enter. They were given until January 1 to organize. Manager Shaughnessy may have some interesting statements to make regarding the intentions of the Ottawa club.

Young players will get the call from the Ottawa Club next year, as Manager Shaughnessy is anxious to introduce quite a lot of young blood. The pitching staff is his main source of worry. "Lefty" Rogers is training indoors, and will report at the training camp in the best of condition. Frank Dolan is also keeping in the best of shape.

It is probable that the Canadian League schedule will open about May 8 and continue until September 9. The Ottawas cannot play later than Labour Day at Lansdowne Park, but they would wind up with a weeks play on the road.

It is just about decided that 'Rube' Deneau will train the Brantford team, while Eddie Holly will be in charge at Peterboorugh. Frank Shaughnessy is sure to handle the reins in Ottawa, unless he goes higher up. Peterborough, Berlin, Guelph, St. Thomas and London are all looking for new pilots.

"OH! YOU MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"

The story of how Louis Meyer made a million dollars in a year and a half out of 'The Glad Eye" reads like a fairy tale. It is tall reading, but it has the merit of being true. Part owner, art editor, and joint managing director of the smart London Journal, London Opinion, Mr. Meyer is also a black and white artist of some note. Jose Levy, up to a short while ago but little known, adapted a little French comedy called "Le Zebra," which made the rounds of the London managers without success. Eventually it was offered to Louis Meyer, and he saw the possibilities of such a funny idea. He put but little money into it, producing it provincially, but it was so great a furore that it was immediately transferred to the West End of London. It occupied the Globe Theatre until the end of the lease, and was then transferred to the Apollo, to work out another lease, and finally it found its real home, the Strand. Altogether it completed a West End of London run of fifteen months. It has been described by even staid London Journals as "The Funniest play within memory." Even the doyen of journals, the stately Times, unbent sufficiently to remark "The audience found the play vastly amusing. They laughed all the time. The play must be counted a success for some time to come" The magnitude of Mr. Louis Meyer's luck may be imagined when it is stated that in a year and a half his profits aggregated one million dollars. Out of this sum, Mr. Meyer has bought the freehold of the Strand Theatre, London, and a big portion of the leasehold of the Garrick Theatre, as well as interests in other houses. Mr. Louis Meyer is thirty-four years of age.

For his Canadian tour, which is an All-Canadian tour, extending from Montreal to Vancouver, and back again, Mr. Meyer has a picked Company—an AllStar Company, and not one star surrounded by indifferent support. He has spent about fifteen thousand dollars on the production, everything being a replica of that used in London. The Company has opened its season in Montreal, and during the week it played to capacity business and was received with enthusiasm. The play is described as one of the most genuinely funny comedies ever seen here, and the performance of the Company is said to be unexcelled by any English Company sent over here.

Scene from Act 2 of "The Glad Eye," the Famous English Farcical Comedy, "Grand" December 9th

OBITUARY

MRS. SAMUEL DARCY.

The death occurred at 10.30 o'clock last night of Elizabeth Bell, wife of Mr. Samuel Darcy, 303 Louis Street. The deceased had lived in Peterborough for a large number of years and was very well known here. She was born in the township of Emily. Her husband, three sons, George of Cavan, and William and James of Port Hope, and three daughters, Mrs. Armstrong of Trenton, Mrs. Christo of Tilsonburg, and Mrs. Chas. Fogue of Hamilton, survive her. The deceased had been ill about two years. She was a member of the Salvation Army and a faithful attendant at the services there.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, with Adjutant McElhiney presiding.

Confessed To Killing Officer

MONTREAL, Dec. 4.—Hermann Goede, charged with the murder of Eidor Dzerbonovitch on Dorchester Street the other night, confessed to Chief Charpentier that he killed the policeman.

Goede claims he was half drunk at the time and had been annoyed by the victim, who threatened to have him arrested for loitering. In his signed confession to the police, Goede states that he hit Dzerbonovitch on the jaw with his fist.

"The man fell to the sidewalk, and I walked away. No one was in sight and I did not see a policeman," he says.

Goede was arrested this morning by Detective Forget at 84 Leduc Lane, where the prisoner resided since coming to Montreal from Chicago eight months ago. Goede is 28 years of age, a sheet metal worker by trade, and was brought to America at an early age by his parents from Germany. He was placed in the cells this morning, and will be arraigned before Judge Lafontaine charged with murder. This charge, police officials think, will be thrown out and one of manslaughter substituted.

Dzerbonovitch was well known in police circles. He figured prominently in the arrest and conviction of several foreigners who sold liquor after hours. He was unmarried and resided at 49 Mance Street.

The Coroner's in quest will be opened to-morrow morning by Coroner MacMahon. The news of several people who, according to the police, saw the blow struck that resulted in the death of Dzerbonovitch, have been notified to be on hand and give testimony.

Constable Took on the Beam.

Dzerbonovitch was a private policeman, and did duty for several large warehouses in the foreign section of the city. He figured prominently in the arrest and conviction of several foreigners for the sale of liquor after hours.

The blow which caused the man's death was struck about 7 o'clock, by a man said to be a friend of the victim. Constable Tosh, of the Chenneville street station, was then proceeding home along Dorchester street. A large crowd had congregated at the corner of Clarke, and the policeman, pushing his way to the front, demanded to know what was wrong. He was told a little fight had taken place, but the two men ran away when the police arrived. In turning around to go, he heard a cry and saw Dzerbonovitch fall heavily to the sidewalk. A chase over half the streets of Chinatown failed to reveal any trace of the fugitive, who broke and ran immediately he struck the blow. Over an hour was wasted in searching the neighbourhood.

Joseph Malinoff, a court interpreter, informed the police that a few minutes before the blow was delivered he saw Dzerbonovitch in company with another man. Both men appeared to be in a drunken stupor, and from the tone of their voices seemed to be arguing about something.

Dzerbonovitch was taken to the General Hospital, and was found to be suffering from a fractured skull. He died two hours after without regaining consciousness.

TERROR REIGNS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ond., Dec. 5.—Terrorism again broke out in connection with the teamsters' strike this afternoon and at two o'clock four men had been shot and eighteen taken to the hospital with wounds caused by crick-bats and shot. All the police in the city are on duty, and at the time of writing the crowds are breaking. Five are dead to date.

PUTS BAN ON ARMS

British Government Forbids Importation into Ireland

CONCESSIONS ARE OFFERED

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The British Cabinet, by a royal proclamation promulgated last night, prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland, for the first time grasped the nettle of the revolution in Ulster, which it had hitherto ignored, although the followers of Sir Edward Carson for months had been advertising their military preparations in every possible way, and daring interference with them.

Almost simultaneously with the publication of the proclamation, Premier Asquith made the longest step towards the conciliation of the Ulsterites that the Government has taken by announcing his acceptance of the principles for a basis of agreement which Sir Edward Carson suggested in his last speech.

These principles are:

First, that the settlement must not be humiliating or degrading to Ulster.

Second, Ulster's treatment must not be different or exceptional from that meted out to the other parts of the United Kingdom.

Third, Ulster must retain full protection of the Imperial Parliament.

Fourth, the Home Rule Bill must not be such as to lead to ultimate separation of Ulster from Great Britain.

PREMIER ASQUITH.

Thus the Government extends to the signers of the Ulster covenant the olive branch.

The proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland, which King George signed at a meeting of the Privy Council Thursday, was published in The Royal Gazette last night.

Premier Asquith's pronouncement was made, as many of his most important declarations on British politics have been, in the course of an after-dinner speech. The Premier was the guest of honor of the Reform Club of Manchester.

Dealing with Sir Edward Carson's basis of settlement categorically, Premier Asquith said he was sure Sir Edward must agree that the statement that there could be no settlement worthy the name that would be humiliating or degrading to those for whom Sir Edward spoke should apply to all sections of the Irish people. On the second point Mr. Asquith said he supposed Sir Edward referred to what formerly was called "home-rule all round." Ireland's case, he added, was a case of urgency and must come first. It could not be delayed until the Government had gone through the complicated process of adapting the principle of home rule to all the different parts of the United Kingdom.

The Premier said he agreed there must be no ultimate separation of Ireland from Great Britain, but with the modification that there were peculiar conditions making the application of a cast-iron or standardized system of home rule to different parts of the United Kingdom not practical. He added that the real and effective authority, supreme and unquestionable, must be retained by the Imperial Parliament.

In beginning his speech Premier Asquith said: "I have looked in vain for a suggestion from the Opposition which would lead to a possible settlement, and I fancy I have found it where I least expected to find it." In concluding the Premier said:

"I am hopeful the discussion, freely and frankly, carried out on the lines I indicated at Ladybank and on the lines Sir Edward Carson indicated may lead to a cessation of the long-embittered controversy and a settlement which will command the consent and good-will of all parties concerned. I agree with Sir Edward Carson that we have to consider carefully and sympathetically the case of the Irish minority; but equally we must keep in mind the case of the majority, who, after a struggle extending over more than a lifetime, now see their goal actually in sight."

Mr. Asquith's speech comes at an hour when the newspapers of both parties considered that the attempt at a settlement had reached the stage of deadlock and were taking the gloomiest view of the future.

Ulster "Army" Has Grown.

NOTTINGHAM, Eng., Dec. 6.—Sir Edward Carson, in a speech here last night, said that Ulster volunteers who a year ago numbered 19,000 now aggregated 90,000. He added that they were perfectly determined and awaiting orders.

Found Drowned In Drydock.

KINGSTON, Dec. 6. — When the work on the steamer Duncan in the Kingston Shipbuilding Co.'s drydock was completed and the water let out yesterday afternoon the dead body of George Baxter, aged 37, was found. He came here Thursday from the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co.'s plant. The body was lying under the steamer Duncan. Baxter has a wife and family in Scotland. Mrs. William Langdon of Toronto is a sister.

Widow Gets Damages.

SARNIA, Dec. 6.—Justice Middleton has directed that the Grand Trunk pay $1,000 to the infants and a balance of $900 to the widow of the late Harry Waller, who was killed in the G.T.R. yards at Mimico last September while at work switching. The widow sued for $10,000 damages, and the court found the company to be at fault.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Is the Housewife's Greatest Help.

WHAT so tempting to the laggard appetite as a light, flaky, fruit short cake or a delicate hot biscuit?

Royal makes the perfect short cake, biscuit and muffin, and improves the flavor and healthfulness of all risen flour-foods.

It renders the biscuit, hot-bread and short cake more digestible and nutritious, at the same time making them more attractive and appetizing.

Royal Baking Powder is indispensable for the preparation all the year round of perfect foods.

Hastings Council Combats Degeneracy Stories

MOST SETTLERS THRIFTY

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 6.—At yesterday morning's sessions of Hastings County Council a resolution, replying to recent statements about the county, was unanimously adopted:

"The County Council of Hastings having had its attention drawn to a report purporting to have originated from Dr. Fernow, professor of forestry, Toronto, that extreme poverty and a state of physical and mental degeneracy quite unique are general over the large districts in the County of Hastings and other counties, hereby begs formally to express its regret that such absurd and untruthful rumors have received general circulation in the provincial press. While there are isolated instances in Hastings and in all the counties of the province of poverty and mental weakness, the county council begs most emphatically to deny that the number of such cases is at all alarming in Hastings county."

"There are of course some deserted farms in a few districts of Hastings that should never have been opened for settlement, but the great body of the settlers in even the most remote districts of Hastings are in a thrifty and comfortable condition, and quite the equal in mental strength and character to settlers anywhere.

"Knowing the situation thoroughly, this council has no hesitation in expressing its faith in the future of the parts of this county dealt with in the articles with which we have felt called upon to deal."

LESUEUR LOSES CASE.

Author's Appeal Is Dismissed by Chief Justice Meredith.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—The appellate division of the Ontario High Court yesterday morning issued judgment dismissing the appeal of Dr. W. D. LeSueur, of Ottawa, against a judgment of Mr. Justice Britton, rendered on Jan. 9, 1913, whereby Dr. LeSueur was restrained from publishing any book containing extracts or copies or any information derived from any of the books, letters, newspaper files and papers contained in the collection of G. G. S. Lindsay, concerning the life of the late William Lyon Mackenzie. Dr. LeSueur was engaged by Morang & Co., Ltd., to write a book on the life of William Mackenzie. In order to do this Dr. LeSueur found it necessary to have access to the manuscripts in the possession of Lindsay. Lindsay gave his consent to this, and the life of William Mackenzie was written. The book was rejected by the Morang Company, who considered it as unfair to the character of William Lyon Mackenzie's life.

MEREDITH NAMED.

He Will Be Next Governor of Ontario Says Ottawa Report.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The next Lieutenant-Governor (or Governor) of Ontario will be Sir William Ralph Meredith, now Chief Justice of the province in the Appeal Division, according to a persistent rumor which is going the rounds at the capital. It is also reported that the next Chief Justice will be Hon. Richard M. Meredith, now Justice of the Ontario Court of Appeal, and to succeed the latter on the Appeal Bench there will be another of the Meredith brothers, namely, Mr. T. G. Meredith, K.C., of London.

It is understood that Premier Borden and Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, have privately assented to the arrangement.

The appointment of Sir William Meredith to success Sir John Gibson as Lieutenant-Governor could not take place, it is said, until the expiry of the latter's extended term of office next September, but that the appointment is already arranged for is believed in Ministerial circles here. Sir William will meanwhile be superannuated from the Bench on full superannuation allowance, having completed the required number of years' service.

It will be remembered that the provincial Premiers at their last conference went on record as favoring the title "Governor" instead of the present designation, "Lieutenant-Governor."

Strike Is Settled.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The strike on the Great Western Railway, which has tied up traffic since Wednesday, was settled yesterday at a conference of the men with the representative of the Board of Trade. The 30,000 men of different trades, most of them miners, who had been thrown out of work by the stoppage of traffic, will now return to their labors.

This was done at the dictation of the trades union leaders who did not countenance the strike.

CAN GET TOBACCO

Convict proves Statement by Producing a Plug

RATION MAY BE ALLOWED

KINGSTON, Dec. 6.—Quite a sensation was sprung at yesterday afternoon's session of the prison reform commission, when a convict declared there was traffic in tobacco at the penitentiary, and that any convict who wanted it had no difficulty in securing it. The convict followed up his statement by producing half a plug of smoking tobacco from his boot-leg.

The commission has now real evidence of the fact that tobacco finds its way behind prison walls, and, although no statement has been made, it is generally understood that the commission in its report to the Government will ask that a moderate supply of tobacco be provided convicts as a means of keeping proper discipline in the big prison.

That guards made a rake-off for tobacco they got into the "pen" for convicts was another startling statement by certain convicts, who refused to give the names of the guards, fearing persecution.

Another charge by a convict was that prisoners had died as the result of neglect in the hospital.

One convict declared that prisoner who was "tubbed" and beaten by a guard one day died the same night.

Dr. Phelan informed the commission that the convict referred to dropped dead from apoplexy.

Samuel McCormick, a guard, who did duty in the insane ward, told how a colored convict had been given the treatment known as "tubbing." The convict was strapped and given two "dips" in the water. He knew of other convicts, who had been placed in the tub. Each one had been given this treatment for misconduct.

One man given a "tubbing" was in the insane ward, although the witness declared that he knew well enough what he was doing. The convict was "tubbed" without an order from the superior officers. The convict attempted to bite an ear off one of the guards and for this he was punished. An order was received from the surgeon not to do this "tubbing" and it was stopped for a time but afterwards resumed when convicts became unruly.

The convicts he had reference to were undressed before being bathed

PROTEST IS FILED.

Conservatives Charge Truax With Everything on Calendar.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—Based on the charges usually made in such cases, a petition to unseat Reuben E. Truax, recently elected Liberal member of the House of Commons for South Bruce, was filed at Osgoode Hall yesterday afternoon by W. H. Price of Price, Garvey & Co. As many as 150 charges of bribery and corruption are made.

The petition is signed by James T. Crawford, a farmer living within a short distance of Walkerton, and James A. Garland, also a farmer, and a councilman of the Township of Brant. They ask that the election be adjudged void, or in the alternative, that Wellington D. Campbell of the Township of Green, in the County of Bruce, one of the candidates, ought to have been and was duly elected.

When Mr. Price appeared at Osgoode Hall to file the petition he took from his inside pocket one of the ordinary envelopes of his firm and produced from it three or four bills, one of which was a Dominion of Canada $1,000 denomination, which he handed to the registrar with the minor fees. Even at Osgoode Hall $1,000 bills are a bit of a curiosity. This money is security for the payment of all costs, charges and expenses that may become payable by the petitioners pursuant to the provisions of the "Dominion Controverted Elections Act."

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"I had rather not tell her name," protested Lena, with a timid air that admirably fitted her rather doll-like prettiness. "She didn't tell you what it was, and I dont think I ought to."

Good for little Lena! And she did not even know for whom or what she way playing the role I had set her.

"I thought you said Mary. But I won't be inquisitive with you. I wasn't so with her. But where was I in my story? Oh, I got her so she ould speak, and afterwards I helped her upstairs; but she didn't stay there long. When I came back at lunch time—I have to do my marketing no matter what happens—I found her sitting before a table with her head on her hands. She had been weeping, but her face was quite composed now and almost hard.

"'O you good woman!' she cried as I came in. 'I want to thank you.' But I wouldn't let her go on wasting wards like that, and presently she was saying quite wildly: 'I want to begin a new life. I want to act as if I had never had a yesterday. I have had trouble, overwhelming trouble, but I will get something out of existence yet. I will live, and in order to do so, I will work. Have you a paper, Mrs. Desberger, I want to look at the advertisements?' I brought her a Herald and went to preside at my lunch table. When I saw her again she looked almost cheerful. 'I have found just what I want,' she cried, 'a companion's place. But I cannot apply in this dress,' and she looked at the great puffs of her silk blouse as if they gave her the horrors, though why, I cannot imagine, for they were in the latest style and rich enough for a millionaire's daughter, though as to colours I like brighter ones myself. 'Would you'—she was very timid about it—'buy me some things' if I gave you the money?'

"If there is one thing more than another that I like, it is to shop, so I expressed my willingness to oblige her, and that afternoon I set out with a nice little sum of money to buy her some clothes. I should have enjoyed it more if she had let me do my own choosing—I saw the loveliest pink and green blouse—but she was very set about what she wanted, and so I just got her plain things which I think even you, ma'am would have approved of. I brought them home myself, for she wanted to apply immediately for the place she had seen avdertised, but, O dear, when I went up to her room—"

"Was she gone?" burst in Lena.

"Oh no, but there was such a smudge in it, and—and I could cry when I think of it—there in the grate were the remains of her beautiful silk blouse, all smoking and ruined. She had tried to burn it, and she had succeeded too. I could not get a piece out as big as my hand."

"But you got some of it!" blurted out Lena, guided by a look which I gave her.

"Yes, scraps, it was so handsome. I think I have a bit in my work-basket now."

"O get it for me," urged Lena. "I want it to remember her by."

"My work-basket is here." And going to a sort of etagere covered with a thousand knick-knacks picked up a bargain counters, she opened a little cupboard and brought out a basket, from which she presently pulled a small square of silk. It was, as she described the richest weaving, and was, as I had not the least doubt, a portion of the dress worn by Mrs. Van Burnam from Haddam.

"Yes, it was here," said Lena, reading the expression of my face, and putting the scrap away very carefully in her pocket.

"Well, I would have given her five dollars for that blouse," murmured Mrs. Desberger, regretfully. "But girls like her are so improvident."

"And did she leave that day?" I asked, seeing that it was hard for this woman to tear her thoughts away from this coveted article.

"Yes, ma'am. It was late, and I had but little hopes of her getting the situation she was after. But she promised to come back if she didn't, and as she did not come back I decided that she was more successful than I had anticipated."

"And dont you know where she went? Didn't she confide in you at all?"

"No; but as there were but three advertisements for a lady-companion in the Herald that day, it will be easy to find her. Would you like to see those advertisements? I saved them out of curiosity."

I assented, as you may believe, and she brought us the clippings at once. Two of them I read without emotion, but the third almost took my breath away. It was an advertisement for a lady-companion accustomed to the typewriter and of some taste in dressmaking, and the address given was that of Miss Althorpe.

If this woman, steeped in misery and darkened by crime, should be there!

As I shall not mention Mrs. Desberger again for some time, I will here say that at the first opportunity which presented itself I sent Lena to the shops with orders to buy and have sent to Mrs. Desberger the ugliest and most flaunting of silk blouses that could be found on Sixth Avenue; and as Lena's dimples were more than usually pronounced on her return, I have no doubt she chose one to suit the taste and warm the body of the estimable woman, whose kindly nature had made such a favourable impression upon me.

XXIII.

Ruth Oliver.

From Mrs. Desberger's I rode immediately to Miss Althorpe's, for the purpose of satisfying myself at once as to the presence there of the unhappy fugitive I was tracing.

Six o'clock Sunday night is not a favourable hour for calling at a young lady's house, especially when that lady has a lover who is in the habit of taking tea with the family. But I was in a mood to transgress all rules and even to forget the rights of lovers. Besides, much is forgiven a woman of my stamp, especially by a person of the good sense and amiability of Miss Althorpe.

That I was not mistaken in my calculations was evident from the greeting I received. Miss Althorpe came forward as graciously and with as little surprise in her manner as any one could expect under the circumstances, and for a moment I was so touched by her beauty and the unaffected charm of her manner that I forgot my errand and only thought of the pleasure of meeting a lady who fairly comes up to the standard one has secretly set for one's self. Of course she is much younger than I—some say she is only twenty-three; but a lady is a lady at any age, and Ella Althorpe might be a model for a much older woman than myself.

The room in which we were seated was a large one, and though I could hear Mr. Stone's voice in the adjoining apartment, I did not fear to broach the subject I had come to discuss.

'You may think this intrusion an odd one," I began, "but I believe you advertised a few days ago for a young lady-companion. Have you been suited, Miss Althorpe?"

"O yes; I have a young person with me whom I like very much."

"Ah, you are supplied. Is she any one you know?"

"No, she is a stranger, and what is more, she brought no recommendations with her. But her appearance is so attractive and her desire for the place was so great, that I consented to try her. And she is very satisfactory, poor girl! very satisfactory, indeed."

Ah, here was an opportunity for questions. Without showing too much eagerness and yet with a proper show of interest, I smilingly remarked:

'No one can be called poor long who remains under your roof, Miss Althorpe. But perhaps sh has lost friends; so many nice girls are thrown upon their own resources by the death of reatives?"

"She does not wear mourning; but she is in some great trouble for all that. But this cannot interest you, Miss Butterworth; have you some protege whom you wished to recommend for the position?"

I heard her, but did not answer at once. In fact, I was thinking how to proceed. Should I take her into my confidence, or should I continue in the ambiguous manner in which I had begun. Seeing her smile, I became conscious of the awkward silence.

'Pardon me," said I, resuming my best manner. "but there is something I want to say which may strike you as peculiar."

"O no," said she.

"I am interested in the girl you have befriended, and for very different reasons from those you suppose, I fear—I have great reason to fear—that she is not just the person you would like to harbour under your roof."

'Indeed! Why, what do you know about her? Anything bad, Miss Butterworth?"

I shook my head, and prayed her first to tell me how the girl looked and under what circumstances she came to her; for I was desirous of making no mistake concerning her identity with the person of whom I was in search.

"She is a sweetlooking girl," was the answer I received; "not beautiful, but interesting in expression and manner. She has brown hair,"—I shuddered,—"brown eyes, and a mouth that would be lovely if it ever smiled. In fact, she is very attractive and so lady-like that I have desired to make a companion of her. But while attentive to all her duties, and manifestly grateful to me for the home I have given her, she shows so little desire for company or conversation that I have desisted for the last day or so from urging her to speak at all. But you asked me under what circumstances she came to me?"

"Yes, on what day, and at what time of day? Was she dressed well, or did her clothes look shabby?"

"She came on the very day I advertised; the eighteenth—yes, it was the eighteenth of this month; and she was dressed, so far as I noticed, very neatly. Indeed, her clothes appeared to be new. They needed to have been, for she brought nothing with her save what was contained in a small handbag."

"Also new?" I suggested.

"Very likely; I did not observe.'

"O Miss Althorpe!" I exclaimed, this time with considerable vehemence. "I fear, or rather I hope, she is the woman I want."

"You want"

"Yes, I; but I cannot tell you for what just yet. I must be sure, for I would not subject an innocent person to suspicion any more than you would."

"Suspicion! She is not honest, then? That would worry me, Miss Butterworth, for the house is full now, as you know, of wedding presents, and—But I cannot believe such a thing of her. It is some other fault she has, less despicable and degrading."

"I do not say she has any faults; I only said I feared. What name does she go by?"

"Oliver; Ruth Oliver."

Again I thought of the O. R. on the clothes at the laundry.

"I wish I could see her," I ventured. "I would give anything for a peep at her face, unobserved."

'I don't know how I can manage that, she is very shy and never shows herself in the front of the house. She even dines in her own room, having begged for that privilege till after I was married and the household settled on a new basis. But you can go to her room with me. If she is all right, she can have no objection to a visitor, and if she is not it would be well for me to know at once."

"Certainly," said I, and rose to follow her, turning over in my mind how I should account to this young woman for my intrusion. I had just arrived at what I considered a sensible conclusion, when Miss Althorpe, leaning towards me, said with a whole-souled impetuosity for which I could not but admire her.

'The girl is very nervous, she looks and acts like a person who has had some frightful shock. Don't alarm her, Miss Butterworth, and don't accuse her of anything wrong too suddenly. Perhaps she is innocent, and perhaps if she is not innocent, she has been driven into evil by very great temptations. I am sorry for her whether she is simply unhappy or deeply remorseful. But I never saw a sweeter face or eyes with such boundless depths of misery in them.

Just what Mrs. Desberger had said. Strange, but I began to feel a certain sort of sympathy for the wretched being I was hunting down.

"I will be careful," said I. I merely want to satisfy myself that she is the same girl I heard of last from a Mrs. Desberger."

Miss Althorpe, who was now halfway up the rich staircase which makes her house one of the most remarkable in the city, turned and gave me a quick look over her shoulder.

'I don't know Mrs. Desberger" she remarked.

At which I smiled. Did she think Mrs. Desberger in society?

At the end of an upper passage way we paused.

"This is the door," whispered Miss Althorpe. "Perhaps I had better go in first and see if she is at all prepared for company."

I was glad to have her do so, for I felt as if I needed to prepare myself for encountering this young girl, over whom, in my mind, hung the dreadful suspicion of murder.

But the time between Miss Althorpe's knock and her entrance, short as it was, was longer than that which elapsed between her going in and her hasty reappearance.

"You can have your wish," said she. "She is lying on her bed asleep and you can see her without being observed. But," she entreated, with a passionate grip of my arm, which proclaimed her warm nature, "does it not seem a little like taking advantage of her?"

About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

BIG, HEARTY BABY BOY

Mrs. Beck's Fondest Hopes Realized—Health, Happiness and Baby.

Upper Lahave, N. S., Can.,—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles from which I was a great sufferer, so that I was completely run down in health. Other medicine did not help me, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and strong. I now have a big, hearty baby boy, and praise your medicine for the wonderful lot of good it has done me."—Mrs. ISRAEL BECK, JR., Upper Lahave, Lunenburg Co., N. S., Canada.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

WEAKNESS AND PALPITATION OF THE HEART.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, skips beats, and sometimes seems to almost stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

Many people become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all weakness and heart disorders, and are recommended by us with the greatest of confidence that they will do what we claim for them.

Mrs. George Burridge, Coboconk, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

ON THE VERGE OF A BREAK-DOWN

Wrecked Strength And Shattered Nerves Completely Restored By "Fruit-a-tives", The Famous Medicine Made From Fruit.

MRS. W. N. KELLY.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 29th. 1913

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found ONLY pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case". MRS. W. N. KELLY

A blood purifier, a general tonic, a builder of health and strength, "Fruit-a-tives" is one of the great discoveries of the century in curative medicine. One of the valuable properties of "Fruit-a-tives" is its marvellous cleansing powers. When these tablets are taken, they act on the three great eliminating organs of the body—the bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the system free of waste matter, prevents the formation of an excess of uric acid, and insures the blood being pure and clean. "Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, increases the flow of the digestive juices, makes digestion complete and enables the system to absorb and assimilate an abundance of nourishment from the food eaten.

"Fruit-a-tives" builds up, invigorates, strengthens the whole system. As a general tonic, there is nothing else quite so good. And these tablets are so mild in action, so pleasant to take, that they are particularly suited to women.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FIRST TOBACCO IN ENGLAND

The old slave merchant Sir John Hawkins is generally credited with having introduced tobacco into England in 1565.

Under 1572 Harrison says in his chronology: "In these dayes the taking in of the smoke of the Indian herbe called tabaco by an instrument fashioned like a little ladle, whereby it passeth into the head and stomach, is greatly taken up in England against rheum and some other diseases, engrafted in the lungs and inward parts, and not without effect."

It was Sir Walter Raleigh who made smoking fashionable in England, and smoked a pipeful when looking out from the window of the Tower of London upon the scaffold, a few minutes before being led to the block.

In 1586 a sea captain had attracted considerable attention in the streets of London by "drinking tobacco in the twisted leaves or segars." Aubrey says silver pipes were used by the upper classes and a walnut shell with reed or straw by the poor, and clay ultimately came in vogue.

At hostelries pipes were let out to customers at 6c per pipeful, and the consumers, not the vendors, were originally termed tobacconists. Tobacco sold in the days of Queen Bess for 36c an ounce.

The cause is often difficult to find, but you can readily obtain relief from the dreadful itching by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment. This treatment cleanses the sores and soon sets up a process of healing which leads to complete cure.

Patient and persistent treatment is necessary in severe cases, but as you can readily see the improvement from day to day as Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied you will be encouraged to keep on until you have driven out the disease and restored natural, healthy skin.

Attention to the general health is advisable in order that the cure may be lasting, but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to stop the itching and heal the skin. So well does it accomplish this that many cures it brings about are almost like miracles. Put it to the test and you will be surprised and delighted with the results.

How to Grow Old

Don't smile.

Suspect everybody.

Keep your wireless station tuned to rumors, trouble, gossip or misery.

Specialize the grouch habit.

Envy your neighbor.

When you hear of another man's good fortune, feel mean about it.

When you sit down to dinner tell your wife and the children what everything costs.

Never mind the pleasant day. Rain to-morrow.

These are sure and positive rules.

FAMOUS OYSTER BEDS

The Town of Colchester Ranks High Among Devotees of the Bivalve

The election of the Mayor of Colchester, perhaps the most ancient town in the English County of Essex, has been made the occasion for hundreds of years past, of a great oyster banquet in the town hall.

The oyster constitutes the feature of the banquet because the extensive oyster fisheries at the mouth of the River Colne (on the banks of which Colchester is situated) have belonged for centuries to the municipality, which derives a very large revenue therefrom.

The antiquity of the famous oyster beds of Colchester will be realized when it is stated that the oysters of Camulodunum, the ancient Roman name of Colchester, were considered a delicacy away back in the days of the Roman Emperor Vitallius, who according to Horace used to eat these "English natives" all day long, and is on record as having managed to consume as many as a thousand of them at a sitting.

Colchester is by no means the only city that can pride itself upon thus honoring the oyster. Thus, Louis XI. of France instituted an annual oyster feast at Paris, for the benefit of the doctors and students of the University of the Sorbonne, having been convinced in his own mind that the consumption of this particular form of bivalve had the effect of developing brain, intellect, and scholarship.

There are some grounds for believing that he was justified in his opinion that the oyster is a brain food. For the French encyclopedists were famous oyster eaters; Jean Jacques Rousseau was especially renowned for his devotion to the mollusk; while Turgot used to boast that he consumed a hundred or so before breakfast, just to give him an appetite. Alexander Pope was a devotee of the oyster cult, and so, too, was Dean Swift.

The King's Evil

The practice of touching for the King's Evil continued for nearly a century after the reign of Queen Anne, but sufferers could not obtain the treatment in England. For the touching was performed by the exiled Stuarts, the Old Pretender, and, later, his two sons, being constantly called upon by sufferers in Italy. And this belief in the efficiency of the touch of the exiles apparently had Royal support, for William of Orange, when refusing all applicants, had referred them to James II. at St. Germain. The Stuarts were all busy "touchers," and Charles II. is said to have treated over a hundred thousand people.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Flanford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

ADVERTISING A NATION

How Canada is Made Known Across the Waters

In the course of a lecture made by J. Obed Smith, immigration commissioner of Canada he said: "Because there is very little red tape in this department a great deal of responsibility rests upon the officials. While Ottawa controls the policy, the details, including expenditures, are worked out in London. Outside the British Isles we have agencies at work in Paris, Belgium and in the Scandinavian countries. There is a good deal of work required in advising and planning discipline for 4,000 booking agents who can be made into good advertising agents for Canada.

"In advertising Canada, the department of the interior offers no apology, particularly in the old land, where there are fewer opportunities for farm laborers.

"Correspondence also plays a big part in the propaganda, for while it indicates publicity work, it is becoming most productive. So much information has been diffused about Canada that those writing are not content with one or two questions, but set out voluminous inquiries. This indicates that the enquirers have been reached by advertising, and they in their turn have led others to also seek information. Our department, while primarily concerned with advertising Canada alone, is also obliged to set out the advantages of each province. The policy of the department is set along such lines as to make advertising pay a government as well as a business firm.

"Our work is largely carried on by bringing before the public the advantage of farming in Canada. Our agents attend every show or fair, and distribute literature and also give advice to those requiring it. These results are most satisfactory, but perhaps our most effective work consists of carrying information to every town and village by means of motor and horse wagons. These are in charge of experienced Canadian officials, who stop outside schools, and having obtained permission from the teachers, address the children on Canada, although nothing is said about immigration. Later on we get good results from this campaign.

"Another important phase in advertising is that of giving illustrated lectures. Hundreds are given each season, principally in the winter, and afford us the means of getting into closer touch with the intending emigrant. The most valuable adjunct is the after meeting, when the people gather round and ask questions. We also endeavor to supply news items to the reading public.

"There are good and bad advertisements. The latter consist of derogatory letters and complaints from those who have not succeeded. However, Canada does not want the immigrant to fail, but, on the other hand likes to point to the successful settler as illustration of what can be done out here."

Bruges' Peal of Bells

The famous peal of bells in the belfry at Bruges is played on the principle of a musical box, with an enormous drum weighing 2,000 pounds. In the drum are 30,000 holes for brass pegs which touch the trackers and move the wires communicating with the bell-hammers. The airs are changed once each year, but the drum must be wound up every two hours.

Between Liverpool and New York the screw of an Atlantic liner revolves about 650,000 times.

BLUNDERS IN NOVELS

Women Writers Have Made Some Amusing Mistakes Writing of Sport

That popular novelists make all sorts of funny mistakes and perpetrate marvellous anachronisms when writing their tales is well known. Dickens, Scott, Thackeray, Reade, and so on, even Mrs. Florence Barclay, have all fallen into the trap. But in nothing are so many laughable blunders made by novelists as in relation to sport, and this is particularly the case with women writers.

"Ouida" was probably the most astounding of all great story writers of her sex in this respect. Speaking of one of her heroes who was taking part in a famous boat-race, "Ouida" makes this astonishing statement:

"All in the boat rowed steadily, but none rowed so fast as number six."

If "Ouida" has any blunder to surpass this amusing error in a sporting contest, it may be found in her description of a great horse-race, wherein her heroine is supposed to be the owner of the winner. And, this horse having won, the female novelist goes on to show the sensation made by the lady owner when "she came proudly into the paddock, leading the winner of the Waterloo Cup." The Waterloo Cup is the trophy awarded for the finest dog-race in the world.

Even Marie Corelli is not always accurate. Says she, in "The Treasure of Heaven," when her hero is speaking in that book:

"After school-hours I got an evening job, with a shilling a week, for bringing home eight Highland bull-heifers from pasture." Bull-heifers, indeed! What sort of creatures are they?

One of our living women novelists made her readers wonder, especially those of them who were swimmers or sailors. Indeed, the feat her hero achieved—according to her story—ought to be immortalised in letters of gold. The hero was supposed to have jumped headlong into a raging river to rescue the heroine and the following way is how he did it:

"With one hand he held her lovely head above the seething waters, and with the other he called loudly for help." Another feminine novelist makes her hero win the English Derby and astonish his friends by his prowess at partridge shooting two days later, regardless of the fact that the Derby is run early in June and partridge shooting does not begin till September.

Articles to the value of nearly $1,250,000 are pawned in London every week.

Not "Raised" with Yeast

You can "raise" a loaf of white flour bread with yeast—but you can't "raise" husky, robust Canadian youngsters in that way. The best food for growing boys and girls is

SHREDDED WHEAT

It contains no yeast, no fats, no chemicals of any kind—just pure whole wheat steam-cooked, shredded and baked. The crisp, brown Biscuits are not only deliciously appetizing, but they encourage thorough chewing, which makes them better than porridges for growing youngsters. A Shredded Wheat Biscuit with cream and sliced bananas makes a wholesome, nourishing meal and will give all the strength needed for a half day's work or play.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with hot milk or cream will supply all the energy needed for a half day's work. Try Toasted Triscuit, the Shredded Wheat wafer, for luncheon, with butter, cheese or marmalade.

An Extension Telephone

IN THE RESIDENCE, if the main telephone is downstairs an Extension Telephone upstairs will add greatly to the usefulness and convenience of the service. Upstairs or downstairs a telephone will be close at hand and the necessity of stair-climbing eliminated.

Incoming and outgoing night messages are often emergency or highly important calls. An Extension Telephone upstairs in or near the sleeping apartment will save much time and add greatly to your comfort and protection.

IN THE OFFICE, an Extension Telephone on your desk will save you much time and annoyance. It is most inconvenient to be constantly called on to leave your desk to answer a telephone call at a telephone far removed from the work in hand.

With an Extension Telephone on your desk, telephone calls can be sent and received conveniently with practically no loss of time. With its aid you will be able to accomplish more during the busy office hours.

The additional expense of an EXTENSION TELEPHONE is trifling—only a few cents a day.

A Way to Woo Sleep.

The following method is described as one which is almost certain to woo slumber with success: On going to bed you assume a comfortable attitude in which every muscle is relaxed, but not the attitude in which you are accustomed to go to sleep, though something resembling it. Every movement, coughing, yawning, is strictly repressed, especially the desire to turn over. The same attitude is maintained without change, constantly resisting the longing to move or turn over.

As a rule, by the end of fifteen or twenty minutes of this persistent maintenance of the same attitude you will find yourself growing very drowsy, and then, just as the desire to turn over becomes absolutely uncontrollable, you turn with the least possible effort and assume the position in which you habitually go to sleep, and natural sleep follows at once. This method, it is claimed, seldom fails and should be given a thorough trial, at least before resorting to a drug to bring sleep.

CANADIAN WOODS.

By Mary Gordon Fuzzer.

There's a cool white drift of dew beneath, and overhead, the stars
And the new moon sifting through the pines in shimmering silver bars;
There's the lissome sway of slender birch beyond the dusk of fir,
And the stately cedar, scattering wide its wealth of pungent myrrh.

There's the silken sheen of poplar leaves against the darkening sky,
And a rippling splash where a foam-flecked stream goes mildly hurrying by,—
There's a waiting silence, drowsy-sweet—and then, from the underbrush,
The last clear note of his even-song from the pulsing throat of a thrush.

Canals of Venice as Sewers.

One by one the illusions of life are shattered. Who has not heard of the gondoliers of Venice, the sweet singers whose voices are wafted across the waters as they guide their graceful craft through the canals of the streetless city? "I used to think how poetical it was," said a returned traveler, "but I found the real reason for their singing was a very practical one. Venice has absolutely no sanitary regulations, and the little canals are just so many sewers into which is dumped all the garbage from the houses. There is no system of plumbing, and the refuse is simply thrown from the windows, so unless you let the householder know you are passing by you are apt to get a douche of dirty water or garbage."—New York Tribune.

Took It Good Naturedly.

Four-year-old Tom was expressing his sorrow and anger at the act of a neighbor who had drowned four "beautiful little kittens." "She might have given them to me," said the boy. "Never mind, Tom," said grandfather; "we have lovely kittens of our own. We have a nice little boy kitten"—

"That's me," said Tom proudly.

"And a lovely little girl kitten"—

"That's sister Ella," said Tom, pointing his spoon at his sister.

"And the dearest old cat in California"—

"That's grandma," said the youth exultantly.

Grandma glowered for a second of time, and then she burst out laughing. —Los Angeles Times.

GOING BACK FOR GOLD.

Col. MacGregor Will Look Up Long Neglected Field.

About thirty-five years ago a party of prospectors, while exploring the north-western slope of the Rocky Mountains in British Columbia, came upon promising indications in a secluded valley, hidden in the depths of what was then the great wilderness beyond the divide. They had panned out gold along the Cariboo, and from there had pushed on in the hope of finding new fields. They were interested for a time in a gravel bank on a tributary of the Omineca River, where one hundred dollars a day were secured for every man working on the bank.

Pushing on, the party came to the valley in which they found most promising indications; but the season was far advanced, the supplies were running short, and the party was obliged to leave the valley before thoroughly testing its worth. Returning to camp, the men separated; and of that party, only one member is alive to-day—Colonel Donald MacGregor, of Williamstown, Glengarry, Ont. He knows the location of the valley where gold was found, but which was left unexplored, and he has now under consideration an expedition to the distant place among the still unexplored wilds of the western slope of the Rockies.

Col. MacGregor was in British Columbia in the early days when gold mining outranked all other occupations, and later, when the wealth of the forests began to be turned to account. Much later, and when the Klondike was the latest El Dorado, he spent ten years in the Yukon, principally at Dawson City, where he was chairman of the celebrated Citizens' Committee that brought about reform in the government of the famous mining camp. He now thinks of making one more trip to the West, revisiting the valley found many years ago, and robbing it of the secret of its hidden wealth.

Here Is the Secret of Long Life

While looking forward to health and long life it is possible that you are unaware of the conditions necessary to attain healthful old age. Careful eating, and consequent preservation of the health and vitality of the digestive and excretory organs, is of the greatest importance.

Overeating is the usual cause of torpid, sluggish liver action, and when the liver fails additional work is thrown on the kidneys and they break down. Kidney disorders are the great source of suffering in old age. Rheumatism, bodily pains, aching arms and legs, backache and lumbago are the result.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate the liver, kidneys and bowels, as occasion requires, you not only overcome the suffering, inconvenience and unpleasantness of attacks of biliousness, indigestion and constipation, but you actually prolong life by keping these organs in good, healthful condition. This medicine is a wonderful source of comfort for people in old age.

BE A FOE TO FEAR.

It Never Won a Cause or a Battle Nor Built a Railroad.

Was anything ever done by one who was afraid?

Would Columbus have made his discovery of the new world if he had been burdened with dark forebodings?

Would the gospel ever have been preached to the remotest parts of the world if the missionary had feared his mission?

Would there have been a United States if the signers of the Declaration of Independence had feared for their lives, as well they might?

Would the railroads have crossed the continent and pierced the desert and would our captains of industry have had the courage of their convictions in building our industries—the wonder of the world for size, output and wages—if they had been timid while risking millions?

Was a battle ever won by a general who feared? Was ever a great cause vindicated by one without a strong heart and undying hope? Was ever a prize secured by a competitor who did not enter the race believing he must and would win?

Is anything more contemptible than cowardice? Is anything more noble than courage? Is anything more childish than fear of anything sweeter than confidence in an age of unrest, unreason, suspicion and disturbance?

Let us turn from the dismal swamps and lift up our eyes to the hills. Let hope inspire and courage strengthen and the battle will be won.

This is the lesson to teach the children in our schools, to tell to the patient toiler at his work, to speak to the anxious business man at his desk, to impress upon the preacher in his pulpit and the counselor in the hall of legislation.

And faint heart never won fair lady. —John A. Sleicher in Leslie's.

SONGS SAILORS SING

MOST POPULAR HAVE TO DO WITH THINGS ASHORE.

The Supposed Sea Ditties Are Sung Chiefly on Land While the Salt Amuses Himself With Sentimental Ballads of Terra Firma—Maybrick and Dibdin Succeeded With Ideal Songs.

It is a rather curious contradiction that the supposed "sailors' songs," as the world accepts them, find no favor with the "salts" themselves. Such a one was "Nancy Lee," which everybody ashore sang a generation ago and straggling vocalists manage to revive now when the demands of ragtime are not too imperious. The composer of "Nancy Lee" has lately died in England, and though he published under the name of Stephen Adams his real name was Michael Maybrick. This song is not his only title to fame, however, for "The Blue Alsatian Mountains," "The Midshipmite," "The Star of Bethlehem" and "The Holy City" were his also, and the last of this list may still be heard on popula programs. Some of the notices printed about this composer in English papers scout the idea that so well-written a song as "Nancy Lee" can ever lose its popularity. It is a "breezy song of the sea," says The London Evening Standard, "which Englishmen loved and adored because it gave an ideal picture, all Englishmen being at heart idealists." The peculiar quality of this song leads The Standard to give some interesting facts about sailors' songs:—

"Probably Mr. Michael Maybrick himself never for a moment imagined that he was writing a real sailors' song of the sea. In fact, such a thing hardly exists. The songs chiefly sung and beloved by sailors refer to the land. 'Mother Kissed Me In My Dreams,' and 'Father, Dear Father Come Home With Me Now' are their favorites. The somewhat mawkishly sentimental seems to agree with the constitution of the 'troglodytes' of the forecastle. Nor are they to blame. The inclination is at least as old as Dante who, being translated, wrote: 'Now was the hour that wakens fond desire in men at sea and melts their thoughtful heart,' etc. Next to these sentimental ballads sailors have loved what might be called the utilitarian chantey with long-drawn-out and mostly meaningless phrases suitable for lightening the weary jobs centred on the capstan or windlass. The French sailors' 'J'ai du bon tabac dans ma tabatiere' is an example, or that best of all the chanteys, which Sir John Tenniel was once so fond of singing, 'Farewell and adieu to you, Spanish ladies.' A good second to this came 'Sally Brown, she's a bright mulatteer,' which also, it will be observed, has nothing whatever in it of delight in the sea. It is the landsmen who hymn the glories of the sea. Shakespeare could write of 'cradle of the rude imperious surge' without once going on shipboard; neither Ruskin, who chanted of 'the subtle, fitful, implacable smiting of the black waves, all the Atlantic rushing on behind them to their help,' nor Shelley, who sang of how the Atlantic's level powers cleave themselves into chasms,' knew much more of the sea than the Channel.

"Mr. Maybrick wisely took the idealist line, composed and sang songs which the sailor may possibly sing in some future epoch of the world's history, though not a single sailor chants them now. In this he was possibly less fortunate than Dibdin—another landsman—whose 'Tom Bowling' did actually have a certain vogue among the sailors of Nelson's fleets, and even contributed not a little to the allaying of the discontent which came to a head in the Mutiny at the Nore. But it is all the man in Dibdin's song: there is no breath of sea air, no swing of the waves."

Mr. Maybrick's "fighting song," "The Midshipmite," is "even further away from actuality":

"It contains none of that tremendous enthusiasm which inspires Rouget de Lisle's great song, and, on the other hand, it is above the standard of the rather whining and sentimental, or callous and thick-skinned, or frankly farcical ditties supposed songs in the Indian Mutiny were 'We Will Catch the Whale,' 'Brave Boys,' and 'Oh, Save Me a Lock of Your Hair.'

"Perhaps the chief failing of Mr. Maybrick was that he allowed the fashionable sentimentalism of the day to color his songs. The old ditties, if not jovial in the text, were astonishingly light-hearted in their music. That fine old Irish song, 'My Love, Neil,' with its refrain, 'Oh, I weepit and I wailit, as the big ships sailit to the shores of Americee,' had an air that was full of jaunty and comical music. Later on it was slowed down to suit the demands for pathos. The same transformation has frequently been practiced. Battle songs again are frequently almost brutal in their callous joviality. Meredith hit off the right spirit exactly in his 'Chillianwallah,' with its lines:

'Twas good to be there as at Donnybrook Fair,
With no police when the fun is over.'

"Yet human nature undoubtedly demands pathos in its songs, in practical America as much as anywhere else. What so pathetic as 'The Old Folks at Home,' or 'Dixie's Land'? So Mr. Maybrick's 'Holy City' will live with all its tender melancholy, live longer perhaps than that song which has already taken its place in the repertoire of morris-dancers, 'The Maid of the Mill.' Though sentimental, there is nothing mawkish about these compositions. They ring true."

"Nancy Lee," we are told, is almost as familiar in Germany as in England or America.

Trials of Compositors.

They tell of a Scottish compositor who fled from Edinburgh to London in order to escape the brain exhausting ordeal of deciphering Carlyle's hieroglyphics and putting them into type. He had been at work in London for some time, when one day a "take" of Carlyle's copy was given him to set up. The sight of it appalled him. "Is that man here, too!" he exclaimed. Whereupon he laid down his composing stick, put on his coat and hat and vanished.

Ruskin's copy was also a nightmare to compositors. According to the London Standard, the failure of the establishment that printed his works was the direct result of the enormous labor spent in making corrections in the proofs of his manuscript. What it meant to put his copy into type is shown by the fact that "Cesar Birotteau" had to be reset fifteen times in twenty days.

Made an Enemy.

"Have you ever placed yourself in the hands of a beauty doctor, Mrs. Mugsworth?"

"Why do you ask me that?"

"My husband wants me to go at once."

"Yes I have been taking regular treatments from one for the past year."

"Then I think I'll not go. It seems to be useless."—San Francisco Call.

Double-Faced George.

Capt. Bellairs, formerly of The London Times, who is now traveling in Western Canada, told a good story at the Rideau Club, the other day, about Sir George Reid, the High Commissioner for Australia in London. Reid, when in active politics in Australia, had earned the sobriquet, whether justifiable or not, of "Two-faced George" or "Double-faced George." It was a reference to his alleged agility to always be on the side of the winners. Addressing a crowded meeting in Sydney Town Hall, during the heat of a political campaign, Sir George was frequently interrupted, one man in the front row of the first gallery being persistent in his calls of "Two-faced George." Reid stood it for a little while, and then turned upon his tormentor. "I notice," he said, pointing to the gallery, "that a gentleman has frequently interrupted me and called me 'two-faced George.' Will he permit me to ask him a question?" "Certainly I will," replied the man. Reid thereupon remarked: "May I ask if the gentleman in the gallery has two faces?" "Not on your tin type," came the quick reply. "I might have known that," Reid shot back, "otherwise you would have left that face at home." The cheers and laughter which followed lasted fully five minutes, during which the interrupter made a quiet departure from the building.

Wives and Kiddies Coming.

It speaks well for Ontario, that of the new arrivals from Great Britain and Europe fully 50 per cent. are wives and children coming to join the husband and father, who came ahead and "made good." The number of newcomers is also swelled by the arrival of brothers, sisters, and relatives of those who came before. Then, again, the young immigrant, finding conditions better than those in the old land, does not forget friends at home, and a series of encouraging letters are often followed by friends coming out to join them here.

The two classes which the Government is striving to obtain are the agricultural workers and domestics. The artisan class, which all too frequently but serves to swell the ranks of the unemployed in the cities, is not encouraged by the authorities, and, although it is claimed that some of the transportation companies back to induce such to migrate to Ontario, the percentage is kept as low as possible.

Generous Artists.

One sometimes hears that an artist has actually sold a picture, but seldom of an artist buying a picture, and more seldom still of eighteen artists subscribing to buy a picture by another artist, yet this has actually happened in Toronto.

The other day eighteen Toronto artists decided that the work of A. Y. Jackson was so good that it was imperative that Mr. Jackson be represented in the National Art Gallery at Ottawa, and to ensure Mr. Jackson this honor they co-operated and bought one of his sketches for the purpose of presenting it to the National Gallery.

HOME DRESSMAKING

"Home dressmaking is a matter of careful basting," said a woman who, without any instruction whatever, made the prettiest dresses imaginable. This, too, was before the days of the modern high-class pattern. So with careful basting, and one of the new patterns, there is no reason why certain gowns in the wardrobe should not be successfully made by the veriest tyro.

Styles this year, with their simple tunics and draperies, and general unfitted look, make home dressmaking extremely simple, while the effect is just the opposite.

Everyone has some kind of a dress form at home now. A standing figure may be bought for a few dollars i some of the shops. The difficulty of the inexpensive forms is that the proportions are not always right. If, however, the hip size is right (for it is likely to be too large for the rest of the figure), the matter is easily remedied. Nearly every one has at home an old waist lining or a waist that fitted beautifully. If the surplus trimming and material are ripped or cut off it the affair is simple. This is tried over a dress form till one is found that fits nearest. Then all that is necessary it to stuff out the spaces between the form and the lining where it does not fit with excelsior, cotton wadding, old newspapers, or tissue paper, and there you have the form on which to hang, trim, or fit your waists.

The skirt is done in the same manner. An old petticoat that fits over the hips is stuffed out in the same way, and it is a good idea in these days of narrow skirts to weight the hem of it. If one of the dress forms that will fit every member of the family can be invested in, of course, this simplifies matters. If not, the time taken to make the other will amply repay the woman who makes at least some of her frocks at home.

What A Dental Nurse Thinks About It

A Few Pointers For Those Who Anticipate a Visit to a Dentist

DON'T DILATE

Following are some suggestions which everyone can understand and act upon to help along the cause of oral hygiene, by observing real courtesy in a dental office:

1. Get a good night's sleep beforehand.
2. Wash your hair and dress it simply.
3. Brush your teeth.
4. Take a bath and wear all clean clothes.
5. Wear clothes with a loose collar.
6. Don't say any of the following things—they are not original with you—

"Oh, I'm so nervous."

"I'd rather do anything else than have my teeth worked on."

"Will it hurt?"

"Oh, I just hate to have that thing buzzing around in my head."

"Do you suppose I'll get another crown in heaven?"

7. Don't blow about the care you take of your teeth. You wouldn't have to visit the dentist if you really used that care, you know.

8. A dentist's capital is his time; don't be a petty thief and steal it by telling him long-winded yarns about the teeth in your family. If he needs any personal history to aid him in diagnosing the case, be assured he knows enough to ask about it. If he doesn't, go to another dentist.

9. Remember the eye teeth are not connected with the eyes and the stomach teeth are not connected with the stomach.

10. Give at least twenty-four hours' notice or keep your appointment.

11. The dentist really is a human being, and the more consideration you show him the better work you'll get.

Reduce Fat Without Torture

Fat people are suffering daily tortures and running daily risks in frantic efforts to reduce by the old heart-rending, nerve-wrecking methods. How much better it would be to accept the knowledge and experience of the thousands of happy people who reduced their overfat bodies, found and kept slimness through the now famous Marmola Prescription Tablets. Surely everyone knows of this simple, harmless specific for overfatness which reduces at the rate of 10 ounces or more a day, leaving the body symmetrical, the skin smooth, the complexion clear and the bodily health perfect, without dieting, exercise, dangerous experiments or self-denial of any kind. Visit your druggist today or send 50c to the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit Mich., for a quantity of these sure, safe, convenient little tablets, sufficient to start you well on your way to the coveted goal—slimness.

SOME DISHES FROM VIENNA

Here are a few recipes from Vienna—a second Paris in the realm of culinary art—that are easy enough for any housewife to attempt and good enough for any epicure to sample.

Barley soup calls for only 2 ounces of barley, which should be cooked for three hours in two quarts of chicken or veal stock, with a couple of onions and a big carrot, sliced, a sprig of parsley, and a small bay leaf. At the end of three hours take from the fire, beat in the yolks of two eggs and a cupful of hot milk. Strain all, add a cupful of cooked green or canned peas, heat thoroughly and serve.

* * *

Viennese baked mackerel is a dish for epicures to dream of. Perhaps it is a little too simple and hearty for an epicure, but at any rate it goes right to the hungry spot of most people. Get a good sized fresh mackerel or bonita, skin it and cut it in four pieces—each half should be cut in two. Remove as many of the bones as you can without breaking the pieces. Fry the pieces in butter quickly, drain them and keep them warm while you are making a sauce as follows: Mix a cupful of veal or chicken stock with two tablespoonfuls of sherry and the yolk of an egg. Stir over the fire till the egg is cooked. Now put the fish into a buttered baking dish and pour the sauce over it. Add a little chopped parsley, some minced onion and breadcrumbs. Bake in a moderate oven till it is brown.

* * *

Viennese fried chicken calls for a good-sized fat fowl. Cut as for fricasee. Wash and dry the pieces and place them in a bowl with the juice of one lemon, a cupful of olive oil, a little parsley, a small bay leaf and pepper and salt. Let it stand there covered for three hours. Have a beaten egg at hand and some finely-powdered breadcrumbs. Dip each piece of chicken as you take it from the oil solution into the egg, then in the breadcrumbs, and then fry it in hot butter or bacon fat. In the meantime prepare a sauce by cooking a cupful of white stock—chicken or veal—with the yolk of an egg and ten small mushrooms. Take from the fire and add the juice of half a lemon. Place the pieces of fried chicken, when they are golden brown, piping hot, on a platter and pour the sauce around it.

* * *

Veal cutlets are cooked in this way in Vienna: Take about two pounds of thin veal cutlet and flatten it with a meat hammer. If you have no meat hammer, use a wooden mallet or a wooden potato masher. Rub the pieces with a little salt and pepper mixed together and then dip them in beaten raw egg, then in breadcrumbs, and fry in bacon fat. Serve on a platter with capers, anchovies, sliced lemon and parsley as a garnish. Potato salad, made with French dressing should be served with it.

* * *

For Viennese stuffed squash, you should select a squash that is not too large. Open it in halves and carefully remove the centre pulp and seeds. Now prepare a forcemeat made from breadcrumbs and any sort of chopped meat, mixed with half a cupful of milk or white stock. Pack both halves full with this forcemeat and put the two halves of the squash back together again. Tie securely with a string, and cook slowly in a dish with broth or water. When the squash seems to be tender, drain, remove the string, and serve in a dish with a border of mashed potatoes. If the squash is cooked in broth, the broth can be strained and used for soup.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS

A Top Coat Will Do.

There are so many kinds of good looking sport coats in the shops today and any woman can find so much need for one that she might build an afternoon frock with the idea of being worn under this coat.

It is not the kind of wrap that one wishes to keep on after entering the hall door, and it is unwieldy at the theatre, but it serves on the street on cold days and it is far better to be worn in conjunction with a thin house gown than to attend an afternoon affair with an ordinary coat suit.

Velvet is a favourite fabric for afternoon frocks. The weave known as panne is again fashionable, but it does not wear as well as chiffon velvet. One can never claim for any kind of velvet the best of wearing qualities, because it is so easily marked and spotted, but it is fashionable and it has charm.

Satin is not worn for coats suits these days, but it is exceedingly fashionable for afternoon frocks, and a woman may care to indulge in just one gown of this kind. It may be all black satin, or blue, or Havana brown, and there are some few combinations of black and white, which are exceedingly effective.

It is best, however, to use chiffon or lace, or tulle to arrive at the combinations of black and white, which are exceedingly effective, instead of satin.

HUMILIATED WOMAN

Would Not Attend Social Functions Because of Her Hair

There are many women in this world, handsome in features, perfect in form, graceful of movement and brilliant of mind, who keep in the background just because they have thin, colourless and lustreless hair.

In Paris they understand things about the hair that we do not know in this country. It was a Parisian, Dr. Sangerbond, who discovered that thin hair and dandruff are caused by a microbe.

It is Parisian Sage that proves Dr. Sangerbond's theory to be correct, for it is rigidly guaranteed to kill the dandruff germ and cure dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is a delightfully pleasant hair dressing and invigorator; it is not stick or greasy. It should be used freely in Spring and Summer as it keeps the scalp clean and cool and free from odours.

Parisian Sage comes in large 50-cent bottles and is for sale by the Warne Drug Co. and leading druggists everywhere on the money-back plan. "The Girl with the Auburn Hair" is on every package. Made in Canada by The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont.

Positions In Dancing

In refined dancing one of the first things to be remembered is that there should be no movement of either the hips or the shoulders. In this respect good dancing is like unto walking. You have often seen women who, when walking, move from side to side at the hip line. They look extremely awkward. When one has learned to dance properly such awkwardness of carriage will naturally disappear.

At the same time it must be remembered that the movement in dancing comes from the hips and not from the waist line. The position of the body means everything. A stooping posture robs the figure of grace and makes the mechanism of dancing apparent. Consequently the effect to the eye of the beholder is one of awkwardness and to the dancer one of lack of ease.

If a tall man is dancing with a short woman there is no reason why he need stoop over in order to hold his partner. The right arm should be extended horizontally on a straight line from the body, and the left may be dropped to a position where it grasps the figure naturally and easily. If the woman is taller than the man, it is she who drops her arm to a point where her partner may readily assume the correct position. One of my partners last winter was a man whose footing was easy, light, graceful and rhythmical. But he had acquired the habit of stooping, with the result that he loked like an extremely bad dancer. This is a fault that may be easily overcome with a little thought and practice.

Swaying from side to side, hopping, and dancing from the heel instead of from the toe and the ball of the foot are also common place faults that many people fall into through carelessness on their own part or on the part of their teachers. The worst of it is that these things help to make dancing seem like work instead of pleasure.

All of these faults which were apparent in the waltz have been carried over into the new dances by those who now do the trot, the one-step, and the tango in place of the popular old round dance. The hopping especially is a result of the transition from the slow waltz to a swifter movement, to keep up with which many people think it is necessary to lift their feet from the floor.

Except in unusual cases good dancing comes more naturally to women than to men, since woman is more naturally graceful. On the other hand, it must be remembered that in ballroom dancing the man carries an added burden of responsibility, since he must know how to lead, and must be quick to recognise the faults of his partner and adapt his style and step to her requirements.

A good dancer can lead so as to modify his partner's faults, or at least make them less apparent.

One of the greatest difficulties with men learning to dance is a peculiar diffidence about getting on the floor. It is surprising at times to see a man who would not hesitate to charge a regiment of armed soldiers, all bent on his personal destruction, "stammer with his feet" the minute he gets up on the ballroom floor. The average man, who is not already sure of his skill as a dancer, starts out with short, mincing steps, whereas half the battle is in his courage at the start.

If you are going to dance at all do it with a will. Come out with your feet set firmly on the floor, resting comfortably on the ball of the foot, and take long, gliding steps.

"BUT THIS IS DIFFERENT"

By RUTH CAMERON

It is an epigrammatic and hence popular saying that although no man is far-seeing enough not to make some mistakes, the wise man does not make the same mistake twice.

It sounds plausible, doesn't it, but I doubt if there ever was a man that wise.

Mistakes are such insidious, deceitful things. You see if you knew when you were making them that you were making them, then you wouldn't make them and they wouldn't be mistakes.

But you never do know. Yesterday's folly allures you in a totally new guise to-day; and it is not until to-morrow, when you will have already embraced it, that it will shake off its disguise and you will realize with disgust that you have made the same silly mistake again.

A little neighbour of mine is a very energetic young person who wants what she wants when she wants it; and wants it moreover with all her heart and soul. Occasionally she comes to grief when she has got her own way—even as you and I—and then she is deeply penitent and is sure that she won't be so wilful next time. But when next time comes, of course she doesn't recognise it.

On a very auspicious day last summer she teased her mother to take her on a promised outing. Her mother warned her that it would surely rain, but in the end her teasing prevailed, and they went. It did rain, long and hard; they both caught cold and her mother was quite ill. Margaret was wild with remorse and was sure this lesson would last her the rest of her life. A few days later I heard her begging her mother to let her go for a long walk with two girls who are considerably older than she. Her mother objected on the ground that she would get too tired, but Margaret persisted. Finally her mother reminded her of her experience in having her own way the week before and of her promise to be more reasonable next time. "But this is so different, Mother," she protested, "this is quite another thing."

"I know it, my dear," said her mother, "it's another thing you want to do. It's always another thing. But it's the same headstrong will that makes you so determined and it is the same headstrongness that will get you into trouble again. And then you'll be sorry and say you will be more reasonable next time. And when next time comes you will say, "but this is different."

Isn't that the way with all of us? Aren't we always saying to our consciences or to some external mentor, "but this is different. I admit that was a mistake, but this is different. And then "this" turns out to be another mistake and again we promise ourselves that we will be wiser next time. And again the eternal cycle rolls.

I guess the only way to avoid the mistakes and failures that our particular faults lead us into is to try to understand these faults, and to be always watching for the "nigger in the wood-pile," no matter how inoffensive and different each new wood-pile looks.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed much changed and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Sherma, Plaza, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

THE NEEDED TOUCH

Some women have a knack of making their rooms expressive not only of themselves, but of artistic ideals. Some women have the desire to make their rooms so expressive, but have not the knack of doing it. Usually, it is just some simple touch that is needed—a different arrangement of furnishings and hangings, a simple and perhaps inexpensive piece of furniture, or a little change in the colour scheme.

In the winter much attention must be paid to hanglings of all sorts. In the summer, if they present an artistic problem to the housewife, they can be disregarded altogether, for they are not necessary and often exclude needed air and coolness, in the summer. But a winter living room devoid of all drapery is somewhat bare. There are some beautiful designs in chintz and cretonne and other drapery materials now in the shops. But the newest of them—the big designs in black and white, the striking combinations which involve red fruit, purple flowers and green birds — must be used with care. For the woman who is not quite sure of herself the older and simpler drapery materials are preferable to these newer ones. The plain sunproof silks in soft shades of green or blue or brown, with scrim or net simply hemstitched or run with floss next to the glass, give a good finish to any room.

Study your colour scheme carefully. Make it as simple as possible. There is sometimes something monotonous, perhaps, about a room that is worked out strictly in accordance with a simple colour scheme, but monotonous though it may be it will be restful and in good taste. Yellow and green can be well combined. Brown and yellow, or yellow and grey, would be colour schemes with the sanction of fashion's approval, for these colour combinations have been taken up by the big dressmakers in Europe and America. A room with yellow walls and grey hangings, mahogany furniture, cushions and upholstery of grey and yellow, a brass lamp with a yellow shade, a Chinese rug of grey and yellow, or a much cheaper two-toned domestic rug of grey, a few brass ornaments—and irons and fire equipment, and a brass bowl or two for flowers—and some growing pots of yellow primroses, or some vases of yellow chrysanthemums—this is a room worth living in.

Flowers, by the way, can often be used as the finishing touch to the decorations of a room. Some one who has studied long and lovingly over the furnishing of a room will realise that it lacks a certain vital element. Perhaps this can be remedied by a vase or bowl of flowers. A bright spot of pink is good in some rooms; then roses, carnations, a flowering begonia, geranium, or azalea can be used to supply it. Sometimes a green fern, of artistic shape and size, in a dull pottery jar is what is needed to bring out the possibilities of a room.

"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"

These words or expressions having the same meaning are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past year. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the tumors and ulcers had been removed by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhoea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known in general as Women's Diseases, Orange Lily furnishes a positive, painless, never-failing cure. It is a specific for the suffering sex, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial absolutely proves its merit, I hereby offer to send absolutely free, a box (worth 25c., sufficient for ten days' treatment, to every suffering woman who will write for it. "THE GLAD EYE" IN KINGSTON BARRACKS

"THE GLAD EYE"

The Story of the Play

The story of the famous London farce, "The Glad Eye," which comes to us on Tuesday, Dec. 9th, is formed on irresistible comedy lines.

In Act. 1 Old Mons. Galipaux and his trustful daughter appear so happy at the breakfast table, and the old gentleman's pride, when he finds his son-in-law's name in the local paper is so refreshing, and the discovery that he, too, has been honoured by a paragraph seems so natural that it would be pathetic in any but a comedy surrounding. Then Maurice appears, but he does not seem at all impressed.

Lucienne Boscard is a woman who thinks things out. She is staying with her husband at the country house of Mons. Galipaux, and, having doubts about her husband's behaviour, she causes enquiries to be made which confirm her suspicions. Her form of punishing him is original, and effective, she incurring heavy dressmakers' and milliner's bills. She keeps the knowledge of her husband's infidelity to herself.

Gaston and Maurice invent a little story about a balloon trip when really they intend to have a gay little time in Paris. Suzanne, the wife of Ploignac is genuinely concerned about her husband, but Lucienne, not believing the story about balloon trips, only pretends anxiety, and, after the departure of their husbands, she confides her suspicions to Suzanne, who of course, is immeasurably shocked.

After a couple of days, the husbands return, having spent all they took with them; but no one appears to be at home. Then they learn that the balloon in which they are supposed to have ascended has been blown many miles out of her course, and cannot possibly descend for many hours, and many miles away from their home. Their predicament is patent.

If the balloon has not come down, they cannot be at home, and they decide to leave the house, and go back to Paris, and await the descent. The whole family unexpectedly return, and they find it impossible to leave without being discovered. Their trials and troubles at this point are excruciatingly funny. They run every risk, even to the one of being captured as burglars, and eventually, through the medium, Chausette, get clear away. Many other types are involved in the making of the merriest little play that has been seen for many years: Ki-Ki, a modiste, Chassette, a pretended spiritual medium, an official of the French foreign office, the two unfaithful husbands, the two wives, (the one trusting, the other "wise"); old Galipaux, the incontinent believer in Spirits (of the ethereal order), and others.

The Glad Eye has a veritable triumph in Europe, for, after a long period in France, it ran without interruption for fifteen months in London. There are four companies on the road in the provinces of Britain, one in Africa, one in Australia, and one in Canada.

Mr. Meyer, the owner of the Strand Theatre, London, and part owner of the Garrick, comes out with the merry little farce equipped as few companies that have left those shores have been started. He brings the entire company of picked artistes, all the beautiful scenery (a replica of that used in London), all the beautiful dresses and furniture, etc. The tour will extend from oMntreal to Vancouver, and, turning at Vancouver, the Company will be equipped with another play for the return journey.

SOME FIRE DON'TS.

Have the chimney burned out and cleaned at least once a year, and before the fall season sets in.

Smokers who carelessly leave matches lying around, are a menace to the home.

All sorts of rubbish commonly kept in an attic is just as commonly the cause of a burned home.

Don't keep old clothes in trunks and closets. Better throw them away than have a fire start in them.

Be always on the lookout for defective flues. This has been the cause of 30 per cent. of our fires.

Be particularly careful about cleaning grease out of a gas oven. Many women have been burned to death through a lack of caution.

Clean out the cellars. Rubbish in them is just as dangerous as in attics, and should never be allowed to accumulate in either place.

THE 90th PERFORMING "THE GLAD EYE"

Something About Them

The Company, direct from the other side, which is presenting the great comedy "The Glad Eye" through Canada, has won great praise on its first appearance in Montreal. "The Star" is good enough to say: "Here we have a fine comedy, brilliantly played." The other papers says equally nice things.

Douglas Greet plays "Bocard." Mr. Meyer was at some pains to get him released by a well known London manager. Mr. Greet's personality is just that required for a part originated by Grossmith. His recent performances of this part in Britain were nothing behind the original.

Fred Meabe is no stranger to Canada. He was here with Maxine Elliott, and leading man for Fred Terry. He played "Rolignac" for two years in Britain, and is the best yet in the part.

Augustus Wheatman over in England it is unnecessary to write about. "Gus" is as well known on the streets in any English town, as he is in Australia. He was born on the stage, so to speak, and as a pantomine favourite in Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, etc., he is in the first flight. Some of his great successes are "Uncle Gregory" in "A Pair of Spectacles," and "Preedy" in "Preedy and the Countess." To look at rotund, jolly old "Gus," one would never imagine him in Shakespeare, yet, at the Adelphi Stock, he was one of the best Shakespearean clowns. He has appeared with all the stars. Walter Hicks, Reginald Fry, and Walter Lindsay, are all artists of merit, and in the case of two of them, they have had South African and Australian experience.

Mary Marlowe plays "Lucienne." She came to England from Australia with a great little piece "On our [illegible]" in which she created a furore. She played with Sir Herbert Tree for some months, and then joined Mayo.

Miss Eva Walsh-Hall is from His Majesty's theatre, London, lately, and has played the part of "Suzanne" with Mr. Meyer for the past twelve months. After the tour she returns direct to the Strand Theatre, London, to fulfill a five years' contract.

Miss Katie Yates plays the part of "Ki-Ki." She has made a specialty of Parisiente, frothy parts, having deputised for Miss Ellaline Terriss in "The Gay Gordons," and taken up the part created by Miss Phyllis Dare in "The Merrymaids." She served her initial apprenticeship with the Benson Shakespearean Company, but preferring lighter material, she drifted to musical comedy, and lastly joined the merry little farce, "The Glad Eye."

"ALL-CANADIAN" TOUR, ITS IMPORT TO US

The merry little farce, "The Glad Eye," has opened its all-Canadian tour in Montreal, and it has created a great impression, both by reason of the excellent company Mr. Louis Meyer has sent us from the other side, and for the jolly farce comedy itself.

This tour is more than a tour, it is an idea—an idea long cherished in the brain of one man—Louis Meyer. This idea has been a little soiled by a few undertakings, making the leap in the dark, without preparation, without careful thought, and without the thousand and one other sinews of war—but it cannot be spoiled. As Canada grows, as she continues to do, so will the idea of an Imperial Theatre grow with her. This idea, so conceived, is: "Can the English-speaking races, as a field, support theatrical fare direct from the producing centre—London?" In order to try to prove that they can, Mr. Meyer has started tours for Australia and South Africa in conjunction with managements of the best kind in both countries. To Canadians, the question is, "Can all-Canadian tours, direct through to Vancouver and on to Australia, or back again, succeed?" Mr. Meyer and his advisers think they can. From Montreal to Vancouver, the distance is great, and tours of the magnitude of "The Glad Eye" are limited to a few big towns for big money; but they aver it can be done, and an experimental tour of this kind is pregnant with possibilities or us.

Here is a man with a theatre of his own in London—the Strand, another theatre, the Garrick, he three parts owns, and he has interests in others. He is at the very fount of the producing centre, where the best of plays come from, and it only requires a little encouragement to make of Meyer and his best companies, an annual Canadian event—with not one company with one play, but several. The fact that he is willing to take the big risk to emphasize his point is proved by the fact that he has paid out about $15,000 dollars on the production of "The Glad Eyes" before it left the shores of Britain. There's faith for you!

The "Glad Eye," whatever its title may suggest to the contrary, is a clean play, of humorous situations—a daring idea, and good literature. Its authors are Armand and Nancy, two of the best farceurs in Paris, where farce has to be "au premier" to be of any value. The great reception the play and company have met with in Montreal is a good augury for its visit to us shortly.

"OH! YOU MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"

How Louis Meyer Made a Million Dollars in a Year and a Half Out of the London Run of "The Glad Eye"

The story of how Louis Meyer made a million dollars in a year and a half reads like a fairy tale. It is very tall reading, but it has the merit of being true. Part owner, part editor, and joint managing director of the smart London journal, "London Opinion," Mr. Meyer is also a black and white artist of some note. He had dabbled slightly in one or two plays, having taken an interest in the Squaw Man, and Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case," which drew all London to the Garrick Theatre.

Joseph Levy, an author up to now but little known, adapted a French farce called "Le Zebra" into English, and the play made the round of the London managers without success. Eventually it was offered to Meyer, and he saw the possibilities of such a funny idea. He put but little money into it, producing it provincially, but it proved to be so great a furore, that it was immediately transferred to the west end of London. It occupied the Globe Theatre until the end of the lease. It was then transferred to the Appollo, to work out another lease. It then found its real home, the Strand Theatre, where it completed a run of fifteen months. It has been described even by staid London journals as "The funniest play within memory," etc., etc. Even the doyen of journals, the stately Times unbent sufficiently to remark during the course of its criticism: "The audience found the play vastly amusing—they laughed all the time. The play must be counted a success for some time to come."

The magnitude of Mr. Meyer's luck may be conceived when it is stated that his profits out of the London run alone aggregated $500,000, and that he has four companies on the road in England doing record business.

The play has also found its way to Australia and South Africa and now to Canada. Out of these profits, Mr. Meyer hs bought the freehold of the Strand Theatre in London, and a large interest in the Garrick and other ventures. Altogether, a very lucky young man for the age of thirty-four.

For his Canadian tour, which is an "All-Canadian" tour, extending from Montreal to Vancouver and back again, Mr. Meyer has a picked company—an all-star company, and not one star surrounded by indifferent support. He has sent about fifteen thousand dollars on the production, everything being a replica of that used in London. The company has opened its Canadian season in Montreal and is playing to capacity business. The play is described as one of the most genuinely funny comedies ever seen here, and the company, for an all-round performance, have won high praise, both from the press, and the public alike.

IN THE SICK ROOM.

The food given to a patient must always depend upon medical orders or circumstances, but the serving of it can always be dainty. The home nurse generally does not realize that gruel served in a dainty flowered china bowl on a tray spread with a pretty cloth and decked with a spray of flowers, is quite a different thing to gruel served in a plain basin with a plain serviette. Always use dainty tray cloth and pretty china for serving a sick person's food. As for the tray, for preference let it be one of compressed cane with a rim; they are so much lighter to hold.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat"

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The Wellington Comox Co., Ltd., with a capital of $500,000 and head office at Toronto, has been incorporated.

"Jack the Peeper" Not Craig.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Dec. 6.—Corroboration of the story that a mysterious "Jack-the-Peeper" paid nightly visit to the bedroom window of Dr. Helen Knabe, the Indianapolis woman physician, found slain in her apartment on Oct. 24, 1911, was promised by the state yesterday in the trial of Dr. William B. Craig, former Toronto man charged with her murder.

Mrs. J. W. Smith, who told of the man she saw, "at least thirty times" peeping into Dr. Knabe's window, was unable to identify him as Dr. Craig, and her description did not tally at all with the defendant.

New York women are going into the taxi business regardless of the melancholy fate that overtook the woman cabbies of Paris.

A New York man deserted his wife because she couldn't make pie—in other words. Because she couldn't properly dessert him.

The meanest thief is the one who stole $7 from the San Francisco mint, thereby making it necessary to recount 961,285,060, mostly in coins.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or meats which you may like in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uncomfortable and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of doctoring an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the cause of all the trouble. Get a dose of bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

PLOT DISCOVERED.

Attempt to Dynamite Alberta Prison Found by Convict.

EDMONTON, Dec. 6.—Preparation for an attempt to blow up either the Alberta penitentiary or the mine operated by the prison for the Dominion Government were discovered yesterday. Twenty-one sticks of dynamite were found hidden in some brushwood by one of the prisoners.

Snugly packed in a paper box, apparently placed in this manner so that suspicion might not be aroused should the eye of any passerby fall on the package, the dynamite had been concealed in the bushes, just above the prison mine.

As prisoners were at work cutting away the brushwood late Thursday afternoon, one of the convicts drove his axe into some of the bushes, and when he lifted the brushwood discovered the box. The explosive was carried to the penitentiary.

Ordered Arms To Steal.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—An interesting phase of the Plum Coulee murder and robbery, showing that the crime had been carefully planned, has come to light.

A few days ago a man said to bear some resemblance to the man Krafchenko now wanted by the police, ordered personally from the Hennessey-Smith Arms Co. here guns and ammunition worth $100 for the Plum Coulee Hardware Co. They arrived at Plum Coulee and were delivered to Mrs. Stewart, who has the only hardware business in that town. Next night her store was burglarized, nothing being taken except the guns and ammunition.

Singular Suit Against Priest.

WELLAND, Dec. 6.—Rev. Father Murray of Oshawa will be the defendant in a suit for trespass to be heard in the County Court here on Monday. Catherine Wick and others of her family, who were members of Father Murray's church, allege that while he was the priest in charge of the Fort Erie parish he buried the body of a stranger in their plot without their consent. They are asking that he be made to remove the body. In his defence, Father Murray denies that he trespassed.

Seventy-Five Cent Eggs.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 6.—Welland county farmers predict that the price of eggs will be 75 cents a dozen before Christmas. They are now selling at 60 cents a dozen. The price on the American side is 54 cents. The farmers say the high price of hen fruit is due to the increase in the cost of food.

Deputy May Form Cabinet.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—M. Dupuy called on President Poincare last night and reported progress. He will give the President a definite answer to-day as to whether or not he will form a Cabinet.

RHEUMATISM AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Prof. Budlong Was Quickly Relieved of Both Afflictions by Using Rheuma

If you suffer from any form of Rheumatism, remember that RHEUMA goes to work quickly to remove the cause, not simply to relieve the distress. Many years' use has demonstrated that it goes to the seat of the disease and expels the poisonous matter through the natural channels—the kidneys, bowels, liver, and skin.

"For many years I was troubled with Rheumatism, also with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I suffered awfully. Tried many advertised remedies. After using your truly remarkable preparation, RHEUMA, I was fully cured."—Prof. C. J. Budlong, Sound View, Conn.

RHEUMA is guaranteed by Warne Drug Co., who sell it for 50 cents a bottle.

To Buy Lighting Plants.

CHATHAM, Dec. 6.—At a special meeting of the City Council held yesterday afternoon it was practically decided to purchase the gas and electric light plants of the Chatham Gas Co., at the price of $410,000, to be used as a means for introducing and distributing Hydro-electric power in Chatham. Hon. Adam Beck, Minister of Power, and his chief engineer, Mr. Gabey, and Engineer Jeffrey were present, and Mr. Beck delivered an address.

Hot on Trail of Murderer.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—The man hunt for the murderer of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Plum Coulee branch of the Bank of Montreal, became keen when provincial detectives traced the fugitive to within 12 miles of the city. Provincial and city police now believe their quarry to be in hiding here, and the nooks and crannies of the city are being pierced to bring him to justice.

Control of School Lands.

REGINA, Dec. 6.—A resolution was passed unanimously in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, making a request on the Dominion Government to transfer control of school lands of the province to the Provincial Government.

IF HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS, "CASCARETS"

Your Liver is Full of Bile; Bowels Clogged, Stomach Sour, Tongue Coated, Breath Bad

Get a 10-cent box now.

You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile and properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean, stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good, and never gripe or sicken.

BURNING AND ITCHING ECZEMA

On Hands and Arms. Broke Out in Fine Rash. Had to Give Up Work. Could Not Rest. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lombardy, Ont. — "I had been suffering for two years with eczema on my hands and arms. At first my hand broke out in a fine rash with a burning and itching that was hard to bear. The itching and burning were so bad I had to scratch till my hands and arms bled and were so sore I could not attend to put them in water. I also had to give up my work. Then it spread all over my arms. I could not rest at night as the bed clothes would irritate the eruption every time I would stir or move my hands.

"I tried two treatments giving each a fair trial but they failed to cure me. Then I saw the advertisement in the paper about Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a sample and I began to use them with very little faith, but to my surprise I found relief from the very first. I washed my hands in warm water with Cuticura Soap and dried them with a soft cloth, then I put the Cuticura Ointment on and bandaged them with soft cloth. I used two boxes of the Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap and used them steady for two months and they entirely cured me." (Signed) Mrs. Helena R. McColl, May 17, 1913.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

REGIMENT REMOVED.

Kaiser's Action Pleases Majority in the Reichstag.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—In the Reichstag most of the political parties appear to be satisfied with Emperor William's removal of the garrison as the first step looking to the settlement of the Zabern incident, as it is thought the offending officers thus will be adequately punished.

The clerical members point out that the transfer of the regiment from Zabern to Hagenau also affects the officers who are removed from the comfortable quarters of the garrison and put to considerable expense. The Alsatian members, however, express dissatisfaction on account of the financial loss which will be suffered by the inhabitants of Zabern as a result of the transfer of the regiment. This, they think, will act as a punishment for the people of that town. The Alsatians demand the removal of the offenders.

BACKED BY GOULDS?

Big Railway Interests Involved In New Canadian Line.

PRESCOTT, Dec. 6.—F. A. Knapp of this town, who is promoting the new Canadian Transcontinental Railway from Cape St. Charles in Labrador to Dean Inlet on the Pacific Coast, is now in New York, where the Gould family are reported to be interested in the undertaking.

The company will be capitalized for $100,000,000, and while the names of those interested with Mr. Knapp could not be ascertained, it is known that large financial interests are at his disposal both in New York and in London.

All arrangements are complete for incorporation at the next session of Parliament.

Skin Smooth and Hairless After This Treatment

(Beauty Notes)

Any woman can easily and quickly banish objectionable hairy growths, without pain or inconvenience if she will simply mix a little water with some powdered delatone and then cover the hairy surface with this paste. After 2 or 3 minutes the paste should be removed and the skin washed to take off the remaining delatone and it will be entirely free from hair and as soft as velvet. Buying the delatone in an original package is the only way to insure its full strength and purity.

Nerve of a Doctor.

"I believe," said Dr. John M. Kitchen, "I was the first physician in northern Indiana to make use of chloroform. I was a young fellow not much past twenty-one years old, the ink hardly dry on my sheepskin, when a man came into my office to have an aching tooth pulled out.

"I had a small bottle of chloroform, and with the hardihood of youth I made up my mind to use it. He readily went under the influence of the new anaesthetic. I pulled manfully and the grinder came out. I waited, but the patient did not return to consciousness. I was badly frightened, and hastily seizing a bucket with about two gallons of water in it, I poured it over him. Gasping he came out from the influence of the chloroform. Then he wanted to know what I meant by giving him such a soaking.

"Mustering all my professional sang froid, I calmly replied, 'That, sir, is a part of the treatment,' and he went away, greatly to my relief, entirely satisfied."—Indianapolis News.

DEATH TOLL IS FIFTY.

Texas Flood Fatalities Greater Than First Estimated.

BRYAN, Texas, Dec. 6.—A death roll of more than fifty persons, with scores of flood refugees spending the night in imminent peril, and possibly a thousand others marooned and suffering from prolonged hunger and cold, was indicated by last night's reports from the flooded Brazos river bottoms in this section of south central Texas. For over fifty miles the Brazos was three to five miles wide and running with mill-race speed.

The known dead in Texas floods numbered 53 before reports from the inundated territory in this district began coming in late yesterday. The late reports were brought by men on horseback, and indicated at least twenty more persons had been drowned. About two-thirds of the dead were negroes.

And goes to see the blooded bee,
Also the fatted pig.

Here long he scans the sideshow freaks
Amid a happy throng.

But help a fellow farm.

Pensions Are Urged.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—A deputation representing the Civil Service Federation waited on Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, yesterday and urged the adoption of a system of superannuation for members of the civil service. They asked that 2 1-2 per cent. be deducted each year from their salaries; with the Government to add the same amount. They asked that in case of death of a civil servant, one-half of the pension be continued to the widow, and on her death one-quarter to the children until they attain the age of 18.

May Delay Parcels Post.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—No agreement has yet been reached between the Postoffice Department and the railways with regard to the payment which the Department will make for the carriage of parcels post. At present the railways receive two millions for carrying the mails. They want six millions to cover the loss to express which parcels post will occasion.

As a result of the deadlock it is now improbable that parcels post will be in operation before February.

Better Lighting For Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Dec. 6.—This city is to have a new decorative lighting system, if present plans are carried out. The merchants want the business streets lighted with lamps after the manner of the new decorative illumination system in Fall's street, Niagara Falls, N.Y., and have told the City Council they are willing to pay half the cost of installing and maintaining the lights if the city will pay the balance. Fall's street is now claimed to be the best lighted street in the world.

To Have Smooth, White Soft Skin All Winter

(From The Woman Beautiful)

Does your skin chap or roughen easily in this weather, or become unduly red or blotchy? Let me tell you a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest druggists and use a little before retiring, as you would cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with sudsy water. The wax, through some peculiar attribute, floats off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn-out cuticle comes off just like dandruff on a diseased scalp, only in almost invisible particles. Magnolized wax simply hastens Nature's work. Used as required, it keeps the skin constantly free from devitalized cuticle, skin and only the healthy, young-looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for sunburn, tan, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

Some skins wrinkle easily in winter. There's an excellent remedy in a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving 2 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. This will quickly eradicate every line.

"I am the mother of twelve children. I took a bad leg at the birth of my last child. I was laid up five weeks, with a doctor attending me who does nothing but treat this kind of skin disease. Six weeks ago I heard of D. D. D. As I used to tear my leg at night until it was a bleeding mass I applied a bottle of D. D. D. I can't tell you the ease it gave me! I never used to sleep with the pain. Many a time I nearly fell with dizziness from want of sleep. Now my leg is completely healed up, thanks to the blessed D.D.D. I never expected a cure. I only got D. D. D. to take the terrible itch away. But by degrees I saw the big sore getting smaller. I have a thankful heart today.

OTONABEE POWER COMPANY ASK FOR FRANCHISE RENEWAL

President W. G. Ferguson in an Interview Gives His Opinion on the Superiority of Flat Rates as Contrasted With Meter System

A LETTER TO COUNCIL

The Otonabee Power Company has addressed the following letter to the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Peterborough:

Dear Sirs,—The Otonabee Power Company, Limited, beg to apply to your Council for a renewal of their franchise, which expires in January, 1914. We would like a renewal for a term of ten years, the same as the original franchise, and would be willing to take it on the same terms as set forth in the franchise, or with such modifications as your Council and our Company may agree upon. We are serving a very considerable number of customers in the City of Peterborough with light, on a flat rate basis, and we find that there are a number of people in the City who desire to buy their electricity on this basis in preference to the meter system. We have, as you know, a very considerable indebtedness in the Power Plant and Distribution System and we do not presume you will refuse our request for renewal.

In addition to this I may say that our largest number of shareholders reside in Peterborough and the immediate vicinity, and they are extremely anxious that this renewal should be obtained. We would ask that you call a special meeting of your Council to consider this matter, so that the by-law can be advertised and voted upon at the January elections.

Yours truly,

Otonabee Power Company, Ltd.,

Wm. G. Ferguson, President.

Peterborough Dec. 3, 1913.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, President of the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, spoken to in reference to the subject of the above letter, said the Company's application is a most reasonable one, and the shareholders of his Company have good grounds to anticipate that their application will be favourably considered, owing to the fact that his Company did more to reduce the cost of lighting to the ordinary consumer, and place electric light within his reach than any other influence that has ever been at work in the City, and the Company has always pursued the policy of selling its power and light on the flat rate basis, and without a meter. It costs a great of money to put in a meter and it costs a great deal of money to take the readings of the meter from month to month and that of course adds to the cost that the consumer must pay for his light. Any person who has tried both the flat rate and the meter rate is only too glad to get back on to the flat rate.

Refused to Sell.

Mayor Bradburn stated to-day that the Council would probably meet Tuesday evening when the Otonabee Power Company's application for a renewal of their franchise will receive consideration. The Otonabee Power Company is not concerned in the expropriation proceedings that have been instituted by the City for the purpose of acquiring possession of the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Some time ago, the City signified their willingness to buy out the Otonabee Power Company, but the latter declined to sell.

"The Council will hold a special meeting on Tuesday evening, providing the plans of the proposed Dalhousie Street bridge are ready," said the Mayor.

The plans are being prepared by City Engineer Parsons.

A NEW WAY TO SUPPLY HELP

W. W. Bell & Co. to Begin Operations in This Neighbourhood

Mr. C. H. Woodrow, representing W. W. Bell and Co., Limited. Canadian Immigration and Colonization Agents, was in Peterborough yesterday making arrangements for his firm to begin operations in this neighbourhood. W. W. Bell and Co. supply all classes of farm and domestic help in cases where the employers are willing to advance the fare. There is a difference over other propositions of this kind, inasmuch as the firm assume all responsibility for the money advanced and there is no chance of the employer finding himself without help before the loan is repaid. Mr. Woodrow, while here, went into the matter with Mr. Miller, the local immigration officer, who will give any one interested any information in regard to the scheme. Mr. Woodrow's Canadian address is 51 Huntley St., Toronto, Ont.

C.G.E. CONTRACT FOR ELECTRIC LOCOMOTIVES

To Be Supplied to the Canadian Northern Railway for the Electrification of the Mount Royal Tunnel, Montreal

ONE MILE OF TRACK

The Canadian Engineer of December 4th contains an article concerning the tunnelling and electrification of Mount Royal by the Canadian Northern Railway, in order to reach a terminal in the centre of the City of Montreal.

The equipment for the electrification of the tunnel and terminals, for which the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, Peterborough, has the contract, includes six electric locomotives, designed for an operating potential of 2,400 volts with overhead trolley construction. Two of these locomotives, operated and controlled as a single unit, will have ample capacity and suitable speed requirements for handling the heavy transcontinental passenger trains—1,130 tons trailing load—within the Montreal terminal zone. A single locomotive will successfully handle the freight trains—1,000 tons trailing load—and the local passenger service —500 tons trailing load.

It is for the purpose of facilitating the construction and testing of the above mentioned locomotives that the Canadian General Electric Company desire to construct one mile of track adjacent to their plant. The matter has been submitted to the City Council for consideration by Mr. Frederic Nichols, General Manager of the Canadian General Electric Company.

CITIZENS SHOULD PURCHASE EARLY

Prevailing Custom of the Past Two Years Should be Continued This Season in View of Near Approach of Christmas

IN THE INTERESTS OF ALL

The weather up to the present has been so decidedly unlike the usual accompaniment of the opening of the winter season that most people do not realize the close proximity of Christmas. There has been but little frost and less snow, and the shop early slogan which has eliminated the congested eleventh hour business of former years has not received much attention during the present season. The indifferent attitude displayed by adults is noticeable even among children. Santa Claus has been ushered in with the warmth of autumn, and has received scant attention. Sleds, snow shovels and hockey sticks are still covered with the accumulated dust of summer.

The mere absence of a blanket of snow and the jingle of sleigh bells during the first week of December should not blind one to the rapid passings of the days which will carry us into Christmas week as precipitately as ever. The shop early sentiment was built upon sane ideas. It considered the clerks by extending the shopping period over three or four weeks instead of crowding it into three or four days; it enabled the gift purchaser ample time to secure adequate attention from the same clerks and at the same time to investigate the season's offerings in all the stores.

Peterborough's merchants as a class are as progressive as any in the country. Following the early buying sentiment of recent years they have secured their stocks in anticipation of early purchasing and in most cases are now ready for the holiday trade. In this movement they are not consulting their own, but also the interests of the general public who should "come early and avoid the rush." It scarcely seems necessary to point out the advantages of early buying. They are self-evident to those who arrange their affairs in an orderly manner. There is neither rhyme nor reason to the old time lackadaisical custom of crowding into stores a few days before the big holiday. The very sentiment of Christmas giving demands some thought in the making of purchases. Leaving them until the last moment suggests thoughtlessness apart altogether from the business aspects of the matter.

ONE OF THE CITY'S TWO NEW SCHOOLS WHICH WERE FORMALLY OPENED YESTERDAY

The New King George School, Situated at the Top of Hunter Street, East City. Queen Mary School in the West Ward is Identically the Same in Construction and Appearance

The following official descriptions of the new schools has been furnished to The Examiner by the Board of Education:

The formal opening of the Queen Mary and King George Public Schools took place yesterday afternoon, and with the completion of these buildings the City of Peterborough is not surpassed for school accommodation by any city of its size in the Province of Ontario.

The location of these buildings on the extreme westerly and easterly limits of the city was chosen by the Board of Education after careful thought as being the best available sites for the purpose. The grounds are four and six acres in extent respectively, and of high altitude, where an abundance of pure air is always obtainable. The grounds are being graded all ample in extent and the walks are carefully laid out.

The buildings are imposing in appearance and well adapted for the health and comfort of the pupils. Each building is 90 feet by 110 feet and is constructed to the ground line of concrete; above this point of brick, faced with Hamilton pressed brick and belt sill courses and trimmings of Indiana lime stone, with cornices and balustrading of roof of galvanized iron.

There are three principal entrances to each of the buildings besides separate entrances to the boys' playroom, to the boiler room, and to the kindergarten room. The entrances at the ends are the most imposing as these are used by the pupils.

Above the basement there are twelve standard class rooms each capable of accommodating from 45 to 48 pupils and with each class room there is a cloak room. In addition to these rooms there is provided a principal's room, a store-room, a janitor's room, a lady teachers' private room, and a library room.

In the basement of each school there are three large class rooms to be devoted to Kindergarten, Household Science, and Manual Training classes. In addition to these there are a boys' playroom, and a girls' playroom with lavatories adjoining, and a boiler and fuel room. The corridors in the basement are well lighted and divided at the centre of the building into boys' and girls' divisions.

The corridors above the basement are wide and well lighted. The stairs are placed at the extreme ends of the corridors and are sufficiently wide to admit four pupils to march out abreast, so that in case of fire the buildings can be cleared within the space of a minute.

The above accommodation has been obtained at a cost for both schools of a sum not exceeding $90,000.00, exclusive of sites. A single eight-roomed school recently built in Berlin cost $75,000.00.

In the plumbing of the schools, individual automatic water closets have been installed. There has been provided sanitary drinking fountains on all floors, sinks with hot and cold water in the janitor's room and also in the Household Science room. Lavatories and water closets are provided in the teachers' rooms, also a separate lavatory in connection with the Kindergarten room.

The heating and ventilating system is known as "The Standard System" of "Steam Heating and Ventilating" and is that now almost universally used in all the large schools that are being erected in Canadian, English, and American cities. No other town or city between Toronto or Montreal, outside of Ottawa, has a school with a heating and ventilating system in the same class.

The main feature of the system is the total separation of the heating part from the ventilating part. This prevents any possibility of the contamination of the fresh air by coal gas or otherwise.

The steam is generated by a Kewanee (Ill.) Fire Box Steel Boiler. The boiler is bricked-in in the peculiar Keewanee way. The Kewanee Boiler is built in the largest steam-heating boiler plant in the world and has the reputation for being very economical on fuel.

The radiators are the Safford screw nipple pattern made by the Dominion Radiator Company, and are those almost universally used in this country.

The ventilating part of the system is very superior, being similar to that installed in the Ottawa Public Schools within the last ten years.

The fresh air for ventilating purposes is forced into the rooms through galvanized ducts and is delivered in them about eight feet above the floor line by high power fans which are designed to provide four changes of air per hour per room. The fans ared riven by five horse-power motors made by the C.G.E. Company. The fresh air is heated by forcing it through stacks of Vents Hot Blast Radiators. The foul air passes out of the flues which lead to the roof and is delivered out at that point.

The heating is rendered more easy by the fact that only one side of any class room is presented to the outside atmosphere.

The Building Committee is as follows: Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Col. J. W. Miller, J. J. Turner, Jr., and Dr. M. A. Morrison.

Architect: F. Bartlett.

Contractors: W. J. Johnston and Messrs. Langford & Sheehy, respectively, for the East and West Ward. The sub-contractors being: For the East brick work, J. J. Hartley; cut stone, Sherwood & King; plastering, Jos. Johnston; heating and ventilation, R. G. Sturgeon & Co.; plumbing, Messrs. Durancean & Archibald; roofing, Mr. Maitland; lighting, Messrs. Alexander & Miller; painting and glazing, Ralph Carton; galvanized iron cornice work, W. R. Turner.

Sub-contractors West Ward: Plastering, Wolstenholm Bros.; painting, Mr. Doupe, roofing, Archibald Moore. H. Shurter executed the concrete work in the East Ward School and laid the walks to both East and West. W. James did the grading at both schools.

With the completion of these two schools, the Board of Education has accomplished the plan it outlined seven years ago, namely to provide adequate and suitable school buildings for the Public and High School children of the city.

The King Edward School, the Collegiate Institute, the six-roomer addition to the Queen Alexandra School, the reconstruction of the Central and the old Collegiate buildings, and finally the two new buildings just opened have all been erected or reconstructed during the past seven years.

The value of the school buildings seven years ago was $118,000.00; now their value is approximately $375,000. The extent of the playgrounds seven years ago was less than four acres; now they comprise 22 acres.

The outlay in buildings, grounds and improvements during those seven years has been a quarter of a million of dollars.

This expenditure has been made necessary by the rapid growth of the city. The number of Public Schools pupils enrolled in October 1906 was 1,668, while in October, 1913, it was 2,359. The number of Public School teachers employed in 1906 was 38, while in 1913 there are 58, and four special teachers.

On an average three additional class rooms are required each year to accommodate the increased number of Public School pupils. There are 13 regular class rooms in each of the new schools, and already nine are in use in the Queen Mary School, and eight in the King George School. This will show that it is only a matter of a very few years until all the rooms will be occupied.

That the buildings are necessary is readily seen, and that good value has been obtained for the outlay is as evident.

"RAINBOW" BREAKS RECORD FOR LATE SATURDAY TRIPS

Brought 90 Passengers From Rice Lake This Morning—Geneva is Not Running.

TRIP WAS BEGUN IN THE DARK AND COLD

The steamer Rainbow made its regular trip from Rice Lake this morning and broke the record for late Saturday trips. There were 90 passengers on board, th extra number including many of those who usually come up on the Geneva which has been dismantled for improvements. As a result Market Clerk Fisher loses the wagr he made with Mr. Joseph Green, early in the week on the latter's reputation as a weather prophet remaining unfarnished.

Today's trip stands as a record for the regular week-end visits to the City. Last year there was a trip about th end of November and a load of reight came up a few days later. It is expected that the Rainbow will be up during the week if th weather permits.

BOOK BARGAINS

"A Masterpiece in Book Buying" by C. B. Routley

If you are in doubt as to what to buy a friend for Christmas, buy a book. If in doubt as to what kind of book to buy, C. B. Routley will help you. This popular holiday store is featuring books for Christmas shoppers, and the bargains offered indicate that many good books will find their way into Christmas stockings this year. Gift books, Christmas cards, calendars and other good thought suggestions are also shown in lavish profusion and variety. Whatever Routley puts his hands to is done with characteristic enthusiasm, which brings great crowds to his store at Christmas time.

FORMER ENNISMORE FAMILY ATTACKED BY A LUNATIC

Mrs. John Flood Shot by Insane Farm Hand and Her Three Children are Beaten Into Unconsciousness.

LUNATIC THEN SUICIDE

Farm Labourer Supposed to Have Become Suddenly Insane and Attacked the Whole Family.

AFTER ATTACK ON THE FAMILY HE COMMITTED SUICIDE

The following clipping form an Edmonton paper refers to the family of John Flood, formerly of Ennismore, who moved west years ago. His wife was born in Douro. Bernard and Thomas Flood are brothers residing in Ennismore, and Michael Flood, a former reeve of the township, went west this fall to Edmonton. The shooting occurred about ten days ago and recent reports state that Mrs. Flood will likely recover.

Suffering from a sudden fit of insanity, Ronald Grant, a farm laborer, working for John Flood, whose farm is situated a mile and a half south of Leduc, early this morning shot Mrs. Flood in both shoulders, battered her over the head with the gun till she lapsed into unconsciousness, attacked her three children with the gun, set fire to the house, then shot himself with a .22 calibre rifle, killing himself instantly.

The dead man, who was a Scandinavian, had worked for Mr. Flood for the past three years. He was not addicted to drink, although he was stated to have been under the influence of liquor in the early part of the week. He had got over his spree, and it is not thought that his drinking had anything to do with the awful act. The whole circumstances point to insanity.

Husband in Edmonton

Mr. Flood left Leduc for Edmonton yesterday, leaving Grant in cahrge of the farm. The hired man slept on the ground floor and the family upstairs. At about four o'clock this morning Mrs. Flood was awakened by Grant calling her. She went to the head of the stairs and saw him standing at the foot. He did not speak to her, but fired two shots from a shot gun, hitting her in both shoulders. The unfortunate woman fell, and the noise of the shot and the fall brought the children from their beds to the side of their mother. Grant then set on the children, beating them unmercifully on the head and body with the gun, the force of the blows bending the barrel and breaking off the stock.

Tried to Fire House

Not satisfied with his awful work, the deranged man then spread coal oil around the house and tried to fire it. Providentially, this plan was frustrated, for for some unknown reason reason, the fire he started went out. After he had fired the house, Grant went to the large barn near the house and set that on fire. He then went out to a straw pile, clambered on top and shot himself above the temple.

Constable Willis, who was on night duty in Leduc, saw the fire at about five o'clock this morning, but thought it was a straw stack and did not pay any more attention to the incident until he was advised over the telephone by a neighbor, that the barn was on fire. He immediately went out, and found the dead body of Grant lying on the straw pile. The deceased's finger was still on the trigger of the rifle.

Terribly Injured

He went into the house and there saw the mother and three children lying unconscious. They were all suffering from terrible wounds, and at the first glance the constable said he thought they were all dead. Lying in the kitchen was a shot gun. The barrel was badly bent and the stock had been broken off as the result of the savage attack made on the victim. Evidence that an attempt to fire the house was plain for there was a strong smell of oil and part of the woodwork of the house was scorched.

INCINERATOR WAS FORMALLY TURNED OVER TO THE CITY

In the Presence of Mayor Bradburn and a Representative Gathering of Civic Officials—Nine Tons of Garbage and Refuse Consumed.

PLANT IS ODORLESS

Peterborough's garbage incinerator is a reality. The brand new refuse consumer got its initial impulse on Friday afternoon when the incinerator was charged with over nine tons of garbage in the presence of Mayor Bradburn and a number of civic officials. The occasion marked the formal opening of a modern incinerating plant which is capable of serving the needs of a city twice the size of Peterborough. It also solves a problem that has long been extant with the municipal authorities, namely the satisfactory disposition of the garbage. The appointment of a Sanitary Inspector was the first step towards its solution. This was followed by the institution of a garbage collection system, and then the establishment of a garbage incinerator.

Consumed Nine Tons.

It was exactly 3.45 o'clock when the first shovelful of mixed garbage and refuse was passed into the maws of the incinerator. One hour later over nine tons had been consigned to a similar destiny. It was then that Mr. A. H. Reid, who supervised the operation, ordered a demonstration that revealed th rapidity with which the refuse can be consumed, when the draft that is produced by th hot blast tubes is working at a maximum capacity. The civic officials watched the operation with undivided interest and a look of admiration manifested itself when the last shovelful of garbage disappeared from the collecting floor. The draft was terrific and created an intense heat that was almost of an incandescent hue. A noticeable feature of the demonstration was the almost entire absence of odor. The smoke that escaped from the one hundred and ten feet stack was scarcely dense enough to obliterate from view the Union Jack that was suspended from the top of the chimney.

Natural Draft.

The manner in which the hot blast tubes are controlled is a marvel of ingenuity. By competent manipulation the quantity of garbage that was consigned to the incinerator yesterday, can be consumed in one hour, or can be made to last for several days, according to the will of the operator. The advantage of this is evident when it is known that the continuous burning contributes to the successful operation of the plant. The action and roar created by the inrushing air, when the blast-tubes were opened would exceed the noise created by a power-driven fan or blower. The action of the blast-tubes dispenses with the use of engines, motors, boilers, fans, etc., as used in other types of incinerators for the production of forced draft. The incinerator, which is Mr. Reid's invention, operates with natural draft.

The Construction.

The incinerator is constructed as follows: The furnaces have two compartments, an upper and lower, in the upper garbage is supported on specially built and arranged arches after being dumped in through large manhole openings situated in the top of the incinerator and while supported on the arches it is thoroughly smoked and dried, the garbage then falls into the lower chamber and upon grate bars the fires rapidly burning it up. The hot blast tubes are of special construction and are made from special metals, they are placed through the top of the incinerator, and lead from the top to the furnace. Oxygen is then drawn through the tubes and in such a way as to take any escaped fume or smoke from the top; the air becoming heated to high temperature is rapidly expanded and comes in contact with the fires and refuse at great velocity, thus creating perfect combustion. The ash es remaining are of two grades, the fine, which goes through the grates into the ash pit, and the other a cinder or clinker, which contains burnt tin cans, bottles, melted and other fire proof materials. This residue, which is thoroughly sermpered, is thrown into a dump and can be used for concrete work or filling in.

The combustion chamber, into which the furnaces discharge, is of no particular design, but simply a large flue where the gases intermingle and MEN VS. WOMEN.

We have often been told that the world is growing better, but statistics prove that that unfortunately does not apply to Canada. The revised figures of the fifth census of Canada gives our total population at 7,206,643; of these 3,821,000 are men and 3,384,648 are women. If the world were growing better—in Canada—we should have more women than men. We know by experience that the average man is worse, and wickeder, than the average woman—doesn't so adroitly conceal his wickedness.

NOT SO BAD.

Denials are coming thick and fast of the correctness of the stories, told of the deplorable social conditions obtaining in the northern part of the Trent Valley district. Perhaps the picture was painted in too lurid colours; but unfortunately we in Peterborough—ask the agents of the Children's Aid Society—know that there are social conditions that demand the local concentration of the religious activities represented by the Laymen's Missionary Movement. The conditions may not be so bad, generally, as asserted, but they are bad enough to enlist the active sympathy of the philanthropic, both lay and clerical.

NOT NECESSARILY CONTROVERSIAL.

The Toronto News, Conservative, says the redistribution bill will be the "big controversial question" at the next session of parliament. Not necessarily so; it will only be a question of controversy in case the redistribution bill takes the form of a gerrymander of loading of the dice. If the Borden government, "plays fair," submits a fair distribution bill and in this regard follows the practice of the Laurier government there need be and will be no great contention. The Laurier government put the redistribution bill into the hands of a committee, composed of members representing both sides of the House. The details were amicably settled in committee and when the bill came up for consideration is was found so fair that there was very little objection to it. If the Borden government will do likewise, ti will find that there wil be no big controversial question created by so simple and easily settled a matter as a redistribution bill.

THE CITY ENGINEER

Have we a city engineer, in fact or in name only? When the present city engineer was employed it was understood that he was to have a free hand and that within the special province of his professional and expert knowledge, his judgment and decision in matters referred to him were to be accepted. In a word the responsibility of the results of his advice and counsel were to be placed upon him.

There have been perhaps half a dozen or more instances in which the recommendations of the city engineer have been over-ridden by the City Council. The latest case was that of the Turnbull elevator. The city engineer was instructed to report upon the proposed installation of an elevator in connection with the new building in course of erection, corner Simcoe and George streets. The engineer reported against the proposal and presumably from his point of view, in the city's interest, opposed granting permission for the election of the elevator. The Council, however, overrode his report and granted permission.

The question of whether or not the elevator should be built is neither here nor there, any other instance would serve—it does not enter into the matter as its main element. The point of the matter is the responsibility of the engineer. The question is whether the advice of a competent official capable of, and paid for, giving sound professional advice, should be ignored. If the city engineer is capable as he evidently was considered to be by being instructed to make a report, upon the matter involving the exercise of technical and expert knowledge, his decision should be accepted. The Council confessed its inability to arrive at a proper decision when it directed the engineer to make investigation and report. If the engineer is not considered competent to make a dependable report upon a technical matter, why are his services retained? If the Council knows more or is determined to gamble with the chances of accident or mishap, it must accept the responsibility. What is the use of paying a professional man $2,500 dollars a year when his opinion is not as good as that of an alderman who does not cost the city anything—at least in the way of salary?

In the case in question the City Council may have felt itself justified in taking the course it did; but the principle of relieving the city engineer of responsibility and snubbing him, is a bad one. Our city engineer has only been in office about nine months, and it is stated that in that time his decisions have been over-ridden more than half a dozen times. This is unjust to the engineer; it is a repeated vote of want of confidence in his ability, which does not contribute to effective service. No man can, at his best, put his heart into his work, dig to the bottom of facts, draw upon all the resources of his technical knowledge, in order to make an exhaustive report, if he feels that he is to have his report thrown back in his face and the results of his skilled deduction laughed out of Council.

The question of holding an official to responsibility for his special work, of respecting his responsibility as well as his personality, is an important one. We all know what a state of disorganization obtained in the Fire Department with aldermen interfering in its administration without reference to its head. There was constant friction, bad feeling, low esprit de corps in the brigade and the weakening of the efficiency of the service. All this ended with placing the responsibility upon the Chief and holding him to his responsibility.

If we have a city engineer we should let him justify his place, and earn his salary. He will not do this, if he is subjected to aldermanic meddling, meaning muddling, in the main. Give him his work to do, define his duties—and hold him to their effective discharge. Don't set him to work and then tie his hands. If his work is workman-like accept it. If he can't or doesn't do his work, then — but, in any event, give him a fighting chance. We don't employ a physician and light our pipes with his prescriptions.

THE COST OF LIVING.

It is not unlikely that the Borden Government will appoint a commission to inquire into the high cost of living, or that a Parliamentary Committee will be appointed for that purpose.

Commissions are somewhat out of favour because they are regarded as excuses for delay. They collect vast bodies of evidence and embody them in rports which very few people read. Their proceedings extend over several sessions, sometimes over two Parliaments. Other matters come up. The public mind is distracted, and nothing is done.

This objection would be overcome or lessned if the Government that appoints the Commission would give evidence of its earnestness, of its desire to use the commission as an aid to action, not as an excuse for inaction.

For this purpose, the Government ought to act upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier's suggestion, and remove the duties from food. That would be an evidence of its sincere desire to grapple with the evil. It would certainly afford some relief, and it would clear the ground for other measures of relief. The commission or committee could then devote its attention to such questions as the operation of combines and cold storage, or the improvement of methods of distribution, or intensive cultivation, or any other remedy for high prices. But anything that can be done at once should be done.

Food is a tremendous question, on which a commission might spend several years. But we ought not to wait several years before anything is done. We do not want a mere academic discussion about food. We want action. Remove the food duties at once. Take all kinds of action. Do not postpone one kind of action because it may be argued that some other kind of action is better. Scarcity of food may be due to several causes. Remove them all.—Toronto Star.

SAID FAREWELL TO DR. MARSH AND FAMILY

Enjoyable Concert in Which a Number of Peterboro' Artists Took a Prominent Part.

SPEECHES MADE

The farewell concert in honour of Dr. Marsh and family on Monday evening, Dec. 1, under the auspices of the Springville Presbyterian Church Choir, was an event worthy of special note. A large and select audience enjoyed the different numbers on the programme. It would be difficult to decide which was most appreciated, every number adding to the pleasure of the occasion. Those contributing proving themselves artists of rare quality. A solo by Mrs. Renwick was most heartily encored. Mrs. Renwick responded. Her second number was equally enjoyed. Miss Laura Logan contributed two violin solos. The very decided applause by the audience was but vibrations of the harmony produced by these selections. Miss Logan is an artist of rare quality whom to hear is to appreciate. Master Renwick sang a solo very acceptably. A male quartette from Peterborough added pleasure with two selections, as did also a solo by John Marsh. Mr. Marsh, who has shown special qualities of voice, is a pupil of Professor Renwick. The recitation by Miss Violet Clark was encored. Her response number was also enjoyed. Rev. Mr. Butler, of Cavanville; Rev. Mr. Wickett, of Fraserville; Mr. J. C. Elliott and R. R. Hall, of Peterborough, gave short addresses.

Mr. Cunningham's Orchestra added very much to the pleasure of all. The addresses and presentations were special features of the programme. The chairman invited Mrs. Marsh to the platform where Mrs. A. E. Sanderson read an address on behalf of the ladies of the congregation. Mrs. John McIntosh presented her with a mink muff. Miss Marsh was likewise aided by the chairman. Miss Laura Duncan read a most appropriate address, expressing the regrets of the Mission Band for the loss the cause was sustaining by her withdrawal from amongst them, their earnest desire for her future success, slightly expressed by a certificate of life membership presented on behalf of the Mission Band by Miss Ella White. Miss Marsh briefly replied. The chairman then requested Mr. John Marsh and Miss Mary Marsh to come to the platform, where Mr. Fred E. Wilson read an address on behalf of the choir, expressing their appreciation of the services rendered by John Marsh as organist, also those of Miss Marsh as member of the choir. Mr. Jas. Fowler made further reference to these facts asking Mr. John Marsh to accept a purse of gold as a slight token of appreciation. Mrs. Jas. Fowler made the presentation. Dr. Marsh made brief reference to the events of the evening, reviewing his pastorate of seven years and wishing the congregation continued success. A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Jos. Sanderson, expressing thanks to Rev. Mr. Pogue, who so efficiently presided. To Miss Cathcart for the use of her piano, also all who took part in the programme, especially Professor Renwick, who was the accompanist for the evening. Mr. John McIntosh seconded the motion which was heartily endorsed by the audience.

Lunch was served by the choir and Mission Band in the manse to all those taking part in the programme, also to a number of friends of Dr. Marsh and family. This proved a pleasant feature of the evening. The table decorations called for many compliments from the guests. Thanks to the artistic taste of Miss Wilson and Miss Ella White, the menu was all that could be desired. The following were among the guests: The Rev. Mr. Pogue, Rev. and Mrs. Butler, Rev. and Mrs. Wickett, Professor and Mrs. Renwick, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Easson, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McCannon, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. H. Webber, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Staples, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Semour, Mr. and Mrs. Milligan. Expressions of regret at not being present were received from Rev. Mr. Keith, Mr. R. Fair, Mr. G. W. Mulligan, Miss Barbara Foster, Dr. and Mrs. Morrison, Dr. and Mrs. Neil, Mr. Cowan and others. The many expressions of regret by those assembled were but echoes of those felt by a very large circle of friends for the removal of Dr. Marsh and family to other fields of labour. A brief review of the work accomplished will be sufficient to warrant the expressions. During the Rev. Dr. Marsh's pastorate at Springville this congregation has been noted for advancement in every line, the membership has increased fourfold, the ratio of contritional funds being the highest in the bilutions toward Mission and connec- Peterborough Presbytery. A comparison with present conditions of church property and that of seven years ago is sufficient to show his ability to accomplish good work. By his scientific research he has acquired information which has been sought after by many and inspired a very large community of intellectual men in the study thereof. His ability to meet the emergencies of life has been proved by many. The spirit in which those services has been so often rendered displayed a nobility of character. By his removal a very decided loss has been sustained to this community, which will be more fully realized from time to time. His friends rejoice in the knowledge that he has gone to broader and more congenial scenes of labour, where his many virtues shall gain for him, we trust, the same admiration as now exists in the very large circle of friends who regret our loss, but hope his fidelity to his many talents entrusted to him shall at last merit the "come thou faithful inherit your reward."

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

(BY F. M. DELA FOSSE)

BIOGRAPHY—PART FIVE.

Famous Diaries.

Methods of making memoranda must always have been in existence, for it is hardly to be supposed that before the age of letters men trusted entirely to their memories for the fulfilment of business or other engagements. The keeping of diaries, however, does not seem to have come into vogue till the 17th century, and during that period two of the most famous diaries in the language were produced, viz.; those of Samuel Pepys and John Evelyn. The most interesting and valuable of these is the one written by Pepys, although Evelyn's Diary is by no means to be despised as a source of instruction and recreation. There are many points that render Pepys' Diary especially valuable. In the first place, it can be relied on as absolutely truthful, for it is a chronicle of events, jotted down day after day, evidently under the belief that no other eyes would ever rest upon it. It is written in shorthand and Pepys' feeling and failing are presented in a way that no sane being would venture to present them for publication. Secondly, the accounts contained therein of the Plague and of the Great Fire of London are among the finest records that we possess of those events, whilst the insight afforded into the doings of the court of Charles II. is astonishingly luminous. Evelyn's Diary, on the other hand, bears signs in many places of having been written long after the event, and in this respect therefore, if in no other, it loses a certain amount of weight as an historical authority. The writers of these respective Diaries were warm friends through a long series of years, notwithstanding great dissimilarity of tastes and character. Evelyn was an almost perfect type of the English gentleman, and stands out in bold relief in a licentious age as a pattern of all the virtues. He was a loving father, a fond husband, a patriotic and devoted servant of his king and country. The only act that may be said to stand at all to his discredit is that of having left the king's colours three days after joining them, for which he gave the excuse that he did so "lest he and his brother should be expos'd to ruine without any advantage to his majestie." That Charles II. forgave him for his defection to his father is amply attested throughout the Diary. Pepys on the other hand was of a totally different brand of humanity. He was certainly no Puritan, but he never allowed his predilections to interfere for a moment with his public duties and his name has come down to us as one of the most efficient public servants of the day. As Secretary of the Admiralty he did grand service at a time when a strong man was needed at the helm.

Evelyn's panegyric of Pepys shows what a high opinion he had of him. Under date May 26, 1803, he wrote as follows: "This day died Mr. Samuel Pepys, a very worthy, industrious and curious person, none in England exceeding him in knowledge of the navy in which he had passed through all the most considerable offices, Clerk of the Acts and Secretary of the Admiralty, all which he performed with great integrity. He was universally beloved, hospitable, generous, learned in many things, skilled in music, a very great cherisher of learned men of whom he had the conversation — Mr. Pepys had been for near forty years so much my particular friend that Mr. Jackson sent me complete mourning, desiring me to be one to hold up the pall at his magnificent obsequies; but my indisposition hindered me from doing him this last office."

Pepys writing almost forty years before under date Nov. 6, 1665, has this to say about Mr. Evelyn: "In fine a most excellent person he is, and must be allowed a little for a little conceitedness, but he may well be so, being a man so much above others. He read me, though with too much gusto, some little poems of his own that were not transcendant, yet one or two very pretty epigrams."—There are many appreciative references to Mr. Evelyn scattered throughout the Diary.

It may be noted here that whilst Pepys' Diary covers only a period of nine and a half years, from Jan. 1st, 1660 to May 29th, 1669, Evelyn's runs over a period of close on seventy years. Neither of these Diaries saw the light till the early part of the 19th century, Evelyn's being published in 1817 and Pepys' in 1825. Pepys' Diary had been reposing for years in the Library of Magdalen College, Oxford, and it was not till the Rev. John Smith of Baldock began to decipher its contents that its real value became apparent. In 1825 Lord Braybrooke published part of the work, but it was only given to the world in its entirety in 1893-1896. Our Library possesses two or three copies of the Diaries of these authors.

Whilst Evelyn's Diary deals largely with his travels on the continent, the reader's interest is enchained by his vivid descriptions of men and things. Accounts of a visit to the galleys at Marseilles and of a trip to Naples, including a description of Vesuvius are noteworthy, as also is the account he gives of the ceremony of "touching" for the "King's Evil," which will be found under date July 6, 1660. A strange notion seems to have prevailed from the time of Edward the Confessor that the "King's Evil," or Scrofula could be cured by the royal touch. Queen Anne was the last of our English sovereigns to pursue the custom, and Dr. Samuel Johnson was the last person in England to be treated in this manner for the disease. The office for the ceremony remained in the English Church Prayer Book till 1719.

To Evelyn England is indebted for many reasons. Through his instrumentality the Arundelian marbles were presented to Oxford University. It was by his insistence also that England was brought to a proper sense of the importance of engaging in reforestry and to an appreciation of the beauties of landscape gardening. He was also one of the founders of the Royal Society. Lastly, he has performed no mean service to his countrymen in presenting to them, although unconsciously, a portrait of a man, who both in public and private life was almost the beau ideal of what a man should be.

Other diaries that are deserving of mention are John Wesley's Journals, Swift's Journal to Stella, Fanny Burney's Memoirs (Madame D'Arblay) and the Greville Memoirs.

These are important enough for a separate article but only passing reference can be made to them here. John Wesley's Journals are not in the Library, but there are copies to be obtained of the three others named. Madame D'Arblay's Memoirs are most interesting. They treat of the latter part of the 18th century, and give us splendid pictures of the court of George III., where for a time Madame D'Arblay was installed as second keeper of the Robes. The Greville Memoirs deal with a latter period of English life. Greville was Clerk of the Council for many years and his revelations concerning certain august personages are at times the reverse of good-natured, Disraeli seems to have held no very high opinion of him in speaking to a friend on the subject of these memoirs he remarked that Greville was the most conceited man he had any knowledge of, "and," he added, "I have read Cicero, and I knew Bulwer Lytton"—.

Just See Your Pimples Flee

After You Have Used Stuart's Calcium Wafers and Rid Your Blood of All Its Impurities.

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do no material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuart's Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

"After Using Stuarts' Calcium Wafers My Pimples Went Away Like Magic."

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightful and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theatre, when travelling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which may be obtained for 50 cents a box.

PETERBOROUGH HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

Brief Summary of Great Work Done by the National Sanitarium Association.

If those of our readers who are interested in the good that the Peterborough Health Association is doing in helping to educate the people of Peterobrough to join in the great national cause of wiping out the dread white plague, tuberculosis, that takes such an awful toll of our loved ones every year, the following will be of interest, showing what is being done outside of Peterbbrough by the National Sanitarium Association.

In 1896 the Muskoka Cottage Sanitarium for pay patients, for early or incipient cases, 100 beds; with reception hospital with 10 beds for advanced cases, opened 1912.

In 1902, a Muskoka Free Hospital with 200 beds for early or incipient cases.

In 1907, King Edward Sanitarium, on the banks of the Humber river, near Weston, was established with 200 beds. On the same grounds a night camp for working men who have tubercolis, but can only continue well enough to work and provide for their families if they sleep in the open air and have at least two good meals a day, none of which would be provided in their own homes, and all of which are provided at the night camp.

Queen Alfry Hospital for Consumptive Children, on the same grounds, 30 beds. Opened June 3rd, 1913. 7,000 patients have been cared for in these institutions. This implies that an army of over 4,500 have been sent back to their families once more as bread-winner. 446 patients are now being cared for in these four institutions. 299 do not pay a single cent towards their maintenance. Sixty-eight pay $4.50 or less towards their maintenance, which costs $10.00 per week. One million, seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been spent for the maintenance of patients since the institutions were organized. $220,000 was paid out last year alone for maintenance. Over $570,000 has been expended on the capital account for building equipment, etc.

More important still. How many lives have been saved through the educational work done to prevent the spread of infection. There is a great fighting force, in a resident staff of seven physicians and 46 nurses. A training school for nurses was established, exclusively devoted to the work of our institutions.

Great educational campaign in the publication and distribution of millions of leaflets. Illustrated lectures by our two field secretaries through the provinces, telling how consumption can be cured and prevented. Millions of Christmas stamps distributed each year (over three million issued last year.)

Free dispensary, where all needy patients may apply for examination.

Visiting nurses for following up of patients, arranging for admission to hospitals and nursing those who cannot be removed.

Sanitarium club, organized by a number of ladies of Toronto to co-operate with the free dispensary and visiting nurses in administering to the pressing wants of needy consumptives and their families.

They have the Samaritan Rest Home in Muskoka for women and children in danger of infection through under nourishment, bad housing conditions, overwork or contact with other consumptives in their homes.

This whole anti-tuberculosis campaign will take its place in history simply as one glorious epoch in the fight for the final banishment from among human kind of every sort of communicable disease and as an incident in the long struggle toward the highest development and conservation of physical soundness and vitality.

INCINERATOR WAS FORMALLY TURNED OVER TO CITY

carry on further incineration which the furnaces have left incomplete, and in which is provided a large door for the purpose of admitting slaughter house offal, dead horses, and large articles. From this chamber a draught tunnel leads to the chimney through which the hot gases pass; in this tunnel a steam boiler can be placed, preferably a water tube with the ordinary setting and with a bridge and baffles so arranged as to direct the gases through the space between the tubes.

Will Generate Power.

By the use of a steam boiler, for which the construction of the Incinerator allows, considerable power can be generated and used in many ways, such as operating dynamos, heating buildings, etc., and at a considerable gain. The value of garbage and refuse works out that one pound of refuse will evaporate one pound of water from and at 212 deg. Faht. One pound of good steam coal will evaporate 8 to 10 pounds of water from and at 212 deg. Faht. The incinerator will produce heat enough from one ton of garbage and refuse to generate three horse power.

Mr. Reid stated yesterday that the plant installed in this City would produce sufficient heat, under ordinary circumstances to generate a considerable number of horsepower.

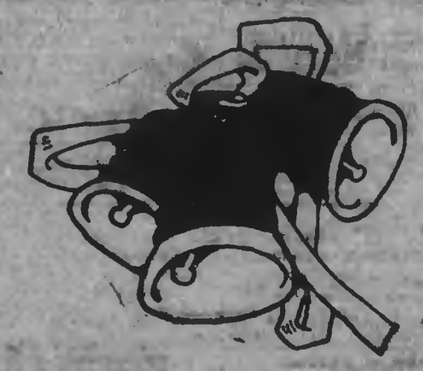
Mayor Bradburn and his colleagues expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the outcome of the demonstration.

Ideal Location.

The building, which is of fireproof construction, is situated on the north side of Townsend Street, almost directly opposite the C.P.R. Station. The site is regarded by the contractors, as an ideal location. Mr. Reid asserts that it would be possible to erect the incinerator adjacent to any public building, where the surplus heat could be utilized for heating or power purposes. "The cost of a similar plant, considering the present cost of materials, etc., would be in the neighbourhood of $25,000," said Mr. Reid. Mr. T. D. MacGregor of Toronto and formerly of Peterborough, supervised the construction of the plant, under the direction of Mr. A. H. Reid of the A. H. Reid Incinerator Company, Toronto. Mr. Reid leaves for the West to-day, where he will install a plant. Two Peterborough men, Messrs. John Gordon and William Withers, will accompany him. They will be employed on the construction work of the western plant.

Among those who were present at the demonstrations were his Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Langford, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan, City Engineer Parsons, Sanitary Inspector Spence, Chief of Police Thompson, Fire Chief Howard, Messrs. V. Eastwood, G. C. Gladman, A. H. Stratton and Mr. A. H. Reid.

At an auction sale at Clacton-on-Sea an aeroplane, with accessories, but without an engine, was withdrawn at £1.



Dainty Jewelry

NEVER before have we been able to offer such a gleaming variety of novel and exclusive designs as we show this season. They must be seen to be properly appreciated. The following descriptions are, however, suggestive of their worth-while nature:

Pendents are quite the vogue. These we show are charming in design and follow the latest Parisian styles in mounting or setting. One in particular composed of emeralds and pearls, makes a most attractive and beautiful gift. Prices from $9 up.

Silverware—Knives, forks, spoons and flatware in Rogers 1847 starting at $1.

Cut Glass—New designs in water bottles, bowls, water jugs, vases, bon-bons, sugar and creams, salad dishes, pepper and salts; etc.

Lockets—Large oval and round plain lockets, bright and Roman finish, round pearl set, hand engraved, plain, square and heart shaped. Plain lockets hand engraved without extra charge. Priced $3, $4, $5 and $10.

Novelties—There is such a bewildering array of good things in this department suitable for father, mother, sister, brother and even the baby, that it would take more space than we can spare to describe them. Let it be one of the pleasant surprises that this store holds out for Christmas shoppers.

DIAMOND IMPORTER AND JEWELER

A WOMAN LOST HER HAIR AND GOT IT BACK WITH HERPICIDE

While there are no thrills in the narration of Mrs. P. T. Nichols, 623 Broad Street, Beloit, Wis., her story is nevertheless one of amazing interest. "Stricken with neuralgia and erysipelas I lost all my hair. My doctor recommended Newbro's Herpicide. I used six or eight bottles, and now have a fine head of slightly curly light brown hair. Not a grey hair in my head. This is the more remarkable as I am middle-aged."

While the results which follow the use of Newbro's Herpicide are always more or less astonishing, they are always natural. Herpicide destroys the dandruff, stimulates the flow of blood to the hair follicles and helps that scalp perfectly healthy. It make possible a natural and luxuriant growth of hair, except in cases of chronic baldness.

While remedies said to be "every bit as good" as Newbro's Herpicide are frequently offered, one should insist upon having "the original germ destroyer," Herpicide. This is genuine. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops. Send 10c in postage for sample to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

PETERBORO'S NEW SCHOOL FORMALLY OPENED YESTERDAY

Queen Mary and King George Schools Visited by Many Citizens —Addresses by Dr. Merchant

SOME LOCAL SPEAKERS

All who attended the formal opening of the new King George and Queen Mary Public Schools yesterday afternoon, were impressed with the advantages offered the pupils who attend those two commodious educational institutions.

The splendid appearance of the buildings from the exterior, and the modern equipment of the schools, was noted with admiration by the citizens who inspected the schools yesterday afternoon and evening. Every facility for the assimilation of the studies by the pupils is provided and during the course of the school day they are in cheerful surroundings.

The length of the school period was considerably shortened yesterday [illegible] the new East and West Ward schools. When the hour for the formal opening came round, they were dismissed, and the teachers, with a number of other residents, attended the opening of their respective schools.

At the West Ward school Messrs. John Crane, L. M. Hayes, B. F. Ackerman and M. A. Morrison represented the Board of Education, while brief addresses were given by Mr. D. Walker, the Rev. C. N. Clarry, the Rev. L. J. Mansell, the Rev. J. R. Webb, Mayor Bradburn and Alderman Buller.

Dr. J. E. Middleton and Mr. V. Eastwood, of the Board of Education, were present at the opening ceremonies in the East, and speeches were given by Alderman Gillespie, Mayor Bradburn, E. A. Peck, M.P.P., Rev. F. J. Sawers, Mr. Bartlett, Chief Thompson, and Chief Howard.

Dr. Merchant, High School Inspector for Ontario, was present at both schools and delivered two splendid addresses.

In the course of his addresses he complimented the Board of Education on their initiative in erecting the two splendid new schools, and expressed his opinion that the sites had been wisely chosen.

Addressing the gathering, he said that as trustees and parents, we should keep to the front in what we are doing as we are doing it all for our children, although at times when business is pressing, we think we are neglecting the children, but, as a matter of fact, we are not. Everything we do is for the children. The question is "What shall we do for them? What are the citizens endeavouring to do?"

"Children cannot be fashioned as potters' clay. They literally grow to what they are. When we see a little fellow going wrong we would like to shake him, but it's an impossibility to change him by shaking. He has to be used like a flower and let him grow as God would have him."

In speaking of the new school, the speaker said that it was one of the most modern and best equipped schools, and also a well appointed school. The school is for the child, physically, mentally and morally. We often find schools planted in little courts. It's a great mistake. Dr. Merchant spoke of the great advantage obtained from the spacious playground and entreated the Board not to sell if they became short of money in carrying on their work.

"I suppose some of the people are against a school being on a hill, but I am greatly in favour of it," said the speaker with emphasis. "Nobody can ever make a mistake by building a school on a hill. The physical condition of the child dwells considerably on the healthful conditions of the school. You don't have to argue with the people in regard to the physical being of the child now as in former days.

Activity in the child must have a discharge; therefore the Kindergarten is for the small child. The end of life is service. Service is action. A child cannot serve as anything without the use of muscles, and there is no service apart from the muscles. The child must learn through a habit to have control of the muscles. They must grow along these lines as well, as mentally. "The enterprise that built this school will do other great things for the city," concluded the speaker.

Mayor Bradburn in a short but interesting address, congratulated the Board on their foresight in having the school erected on the hill. He admitted that at first he was in doubt about it but now he was sure no other site could have been selected.

In opening his brief address at the East Ward school, Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., said he was surprised to see what opportunities had been given, and how, in the new schools, every modern idea of sanitation had been complied with. The heating system and the provisions for ventilation were excellent. The school board deserved credit for keeping the site of the school in spite of a lot of adverse criticism. Looking back over the school history of Ashburnham, the speaker said that when he first knew Ashburnham Mr. John Wood was principal of a one-room school which was the sole institution of learning in the Village. He traced the need for greater educational effort until, finally, the demand for the fine new school. "So far as the site is concerned I never had any doubt but what it was the right one. This is a most central situation," said Mr. Peck. But just as the school buildings had changed, so our idea of education had changed. The old-time idea of education was that of getting facts, which might or might not be of use to the pupil in after life. To-day it was thought that education was preparing the child for every event that could be foreseen, in his future life; to tackle the problems of life and conquer them.

In conclusion, Mr. Peck said great credit was due the Board of Education for the introduction of domestic science, industrial schools and medical inspection. The results would be, he said, highly satisfactory.

The Rev. Mr. Sawers said that words failed him to express the degree of appreciation he felt for the advantages and equipment of the new school. He complimented Principal Park and his capable staff on the manner in which they carried out their duties. He could say from experience that the staff, as a whole, was doing most efficient and splendid work.

In education the idea of intellectual training must be first accomplished. But this demanded work on the part of the pupils, and a desire to learn. Unless the pupils displayed industry the most willing and able teachers could not give them intellectual training.

The untrained child was a nuisance, but the untrained child developing to manhood and womanhood was a menace to the whole community. In the school the children should be laying the foundation for citizenship.

But unless, concluded the speaker, the children were trained in courtesy kindness and gentleness, a great part of their education was still undone.

Chief Thompson and Chief Howard also spoke briefly.

In his address at the West Ward school, Mr. D. Walker, Principal of the Normal School, said that when he first came to Peterborough, sixteen years ago, as Public School Inspector, his first report recommended a new school building in the West Ward. It had taken the Board of Education sixteen years to act on this report, but now that they had done it, they had done it well.

The parents and ratepayers should feel that the schol was their's, and should realise that the education for the boys and girls of twenty years ago was not the education for the boys and girls of the present day.

A good deal of the cost of the educational system went for teachers' salaries, and as the cost of skilled labour and the high cost of living was to be considered, it must be expected that the teachers' salaries would increase.

Mr. Walker suggested that as the parents should realise the school was their's, they should let the Board of Education know what they wanted done in the schools.

REV. BYRON STAUFFER TO LECTURE HERE

Will Give an Address in George Street Church on Monday Evening

Rev. Byron Stauffer, Pastor of Bond Street Congregational Church, Toronto, will give an address in George Street Church on Monday evening. Rev. Byron Stauffer is well known for his ability as a lecturer, and an exponent of democratic principles. He personally dislikes the popular short sermon, 1914 model, and that he invariably preaches from forty to ninety minutes each Sunday, to a crowded Church, is a striking attestation of his oratorical and executive ability.

MR. E. G. PATTERSON IS PRESIDENT OF CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Club, Mr. E. G. Patterson was elected president and Mr. W. H. Denham was elected vice-president. The appointment of the other officers will be made at a meeting of the executive in the near future.

SOME BETHEL NEWS ITEMS

NORTH DUMMER, Dec. 5. — The weather here has been very remarkable. The cattle are all on the pastures yet. This will help out the winter feed of which there was a great shortage. Bethel Church was re-opened on Sunday, Nov. 30th with a large attendance at each service.

Rev. Mr. Ross of Eldorado, preached two eloquent sermons and addressed the school in the afternoon. This fine church has been re-papered, varnished and painted and is very neat inside. Owing to the lateness of the season the outside had to be left until spring.

We hear the chimes of wedding bells for December 10th.

Mr. Albert Jory arrived home from the west on Saturday.

Melville Hunter is also home.

Miss Ethel Pearson, the popular school teacher, is busy preparing the anual school concert, which will be given by the scholars in Zion church, Dec. 19th.

Miss Laura Jory is visiting Miss Bessie Crowe.

Mr. W. A. Gow of Vancouver is in Lakefield this week renewing acquaintances.

Miss Ida Jory spent Sunday with her parents. She had as her guest Miss I. R. Selkirk of Warsaw.

Mr. D. H. McMillan, who has been the guest of Mr. Nathan Payne, returned to New York on Wednesday.

Dummer is getting ready for a hot time at the municipal elections.

Mr. Wm. Crowe sustained a severe loss when his team was burned, along with five other horses in a Madoc hotel stable last Monday night. Mr. Crowe has been teaming for the Bell Telephone Co. for four years.

Mr. Levi Payne of Warsaw, has disposed of his property at Warminster to Mr. J. H. Payne of Lakefield.

Hamblin Bros. and Richard Batten have put in R. T. litter carriers in their barns during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Cooper are giving a dance on Friday night to their many friends.

Allan Payne of Payne's Mills, has taken the contract to supply cedar for a new wharf at Juniper Island, Stony Lake.

Miss Ethel Cuffe, Miss Deyell and Miss Mary Spence spent Sunday with Miss Dora Payne at "Woodburn."

WILL ADDRESS THE CANADIAN CLUB

On Wednesday evening next, Dec. 10th, the Canadian Club will have the pleasure of listening to an address concerning Canada's problem of dealing with the foreign immigrant. The speaker will be Mr. W. W. Lee, Canadian Y.M.C.A., Secretary of Immigrants at Quebec. Mr. Lee has addressed a number of the Canadian Clubs very acceptably on this subject, and the papers of the cities where he has been, all speak highly of his address. At the present time, the subject is a most vital one. The influx of the foreign element into our country is enormous and the diversified character of this element makes the problem all the more difficult and the more serious to solve. All the large centres of population in Canada to-day have to face this issue of the foreign element within their gates, and Peterborough is by no means free from the danger of a too diversified population. Even a casual observer of our city's interests will admit this.

Mr. Lee, intimately connected as he is with the department of immigration, will be able to offer some suggestions as to the best method of handling this problem of the foreign element in our city. Mr. Lee invites discussion of his subject, and it is hoped that a number of the members will take advantage of his invitation. The members are assured of a pleasant and profitable evening.

Lecture At The Normal School Attracted A Large Audience

Prof. DeWitt of Victoria University Gave an Entertaining and Educative Travelogue on Ancient Rome —Stereopticon Views Were Exceptionally Good

COURSE APPRECIATED

An illustrated lecture on Rome, the City of course, is usually a guarantee of a large attendance. Let the public know that there is no admission charge, and you can assure yourself that the lecturer will look out upon few vacant chairs. It was a foregone conclusion, therefore, that Prof. DeWitt, of Victoria College, who lectured at the Normal School on Friday evening, would be greeted by an encouraging audience. As a matter of fact the auditorium was comfortably crowded by a representation of the intellectual element of the city, and apparently the majority of the student body of the school who must be given a place of prominence among those to whom ancient history and the classics appeal.

Prof. DeWitt was very interesting, and the humourous touches that tinged his narrative journey were as so many little resting places affording light resible refreshment. He dwelt for the most part upon the Rome of the emperors, and included entertaining sketches of medieval and modern life. Very often the charm of lectures upon this subject is found in the impressions of the speaker, and there is generally variety of matter and treatment arising from the fact that every traveller finds objects that appeal particularly to him, and forms ideas that differ from those of other observers.

Emphasis was laid upon the greatness of the Romans by reason of their accomplishments. The durability of their buildings is an example of the honesty of the contractors. The tawny bridge of Fabricius erected in 63 B.C. still stands while others of more recent building have been washed away by the Tiber's sometime rampages. The devastations of time and man have robbed the temples and tombs of their original beauty, but the vast concrete skeletons endure. And in other respects Prof. DeWitt pointed out that the generations who built the Pantheon, the coliseum, the Appian way and similar works, must have produced many great men, not to mention those who stood out as military leaders, lawyers, artists, and so on.

Present Day Parallels.

One need not be a Ferrero nor yet a DeWitt to grasp similarities between men of the present day and the Romans of old. The countenance of Trajan staring from the screen was not unlike many that the average person in the audience recalled. Appius Claudius was enrolled in the ancient hall of fame as the builder of the Appian way, and the family were otherwise mentioned in the old records. Some present day men form a parallel with this publicity, and their names may endure with structures which they have erected. Cecilia Metella married the richest young man of her time, but her happiness was short lived for her husband was killed in battle. War may not make many widows to-day, but the Reaper just as effectively terminates many marriages even among the young people of the present generation.

Reference to the theatre of Marcellus illustrated the mean utility to which some of the ancient buildings have been subjected. The Tarpeian Rock, the Pantheon, Hadrian's Mole, St. Peter's Church, the Arch of Titus, and numerous other illustrations were shown. The lecture was highly entertaining and there was satisfaction in the splendid attendance. Mr. Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School introduced the speaker, and at the conclusion of the lecture thanked him on behalf of the audience. A vote making the fullest [illegible] move their hats eliminated any inconvenience similar to that reported by a gentleman who attended the address of a week ago. There were a half a dozen giggling gamins who might have been invited to go home by an usher to the satisfaction of those who chanced to be seated near them. Ancient history is too strong for the average boy, and it taxed even the attention of one young lady who first nodded began the suggestion of a snore, if it is not gentlemanly to say it, that drew forth an awakening nudge from her companion. But then, studies require much midnight oil.

The Liberal Policy Of Free Food

Whole Liberal Policy Tended in Direction of Making Living Conditions Easier

In their efforts to minimize the effect of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's demand that the taxes should be taken off food in order to reduce the high cost of living, the Conservative press is asking why he did not avow this policy sooner. "Has he just discovered the high cost of living?" they ask. "It was during his fifteen years' administration that prices reached their present height; but he paid no attention to it." This is very far from being correct.

Highest Under Borden.

It is true that for several years past the price of food stuffs and articles of household use have been steadily increasing. But the advance has been greater since he went out of power. It is under Mr. Borden's rule that prices have gone higher than ever. This year is the worst yet, and all the indications are that the worst is still to come. This great problem is pressing for solution now as it never pressed before. More than that ,the customs tax is higher now than it ever was under the Liberal administration. Under the Liberals the average percentage of duty had come down to 15.87.

Taxation Greater, Too.

The last year of Mr. Borden's Government according to the report just issued from Ottawa, it had run up to 17.03. This has been brought about not by any raising of the tariff by legislation, but through the system adopted hy the customs department of so interpreting the law that he highest duty has been charged wherever possible Higher taxes and higher prices for food have characterized Mr. Borden's two years. The need for a change is greater to-day than when the Liberals had the control of affairs.

Nor is it correct to say that the Liberals did nothing during their fifteen years. The percentage of tariff taxation the year before Sir Wilfrid became premier was 18.28. They began to reduce it, and it went down to 15.87.

The Liberals Tried.

The Liberals introduced the preferential tariff in the interests of the Canadian consumer, and for the furtherance of imperial trade. And, finally, they went out of power in the effort to give Canadian producers a better market, and Canadian consumers cheaper goods. You may condemn the policy; but you cannot honestly say that the Liberals have not been steadily working for lower taxes and greater markets. Sir Wilfrid's demand to-day is no new thing. If it is emphasized more strongly to-day it is only because the need of the people is greater.

Tariff Was Lowered.

The charge that when the Liberals attained power they did not reduce the tariff to as great an extent as they had promised is often made, but the charge is unfounded. They never promised free trade. While some of [illegible] the opinion that free trade as in England was the idea to be sought, they all admitted that under the circumstances of the country it was impracticable. They had no intention of throwing business into confusion, and suddenly disturbing long-established interests, and they did not try to do it.

As Rapidly As Expedient.

But they moved in the direction of a lower tariff as fast as it was expedient. We know that some Liberals did not think the Government was doing enough, though when their first tariff bill was introduced Sir Charles Tupper saw visions of smokeless chimneys and deserted factories, which never materialized. But they moved with caution. That they felt further changes should in time be made was evident from Mr. Fielding's budget speeches. And this, as he frequently pointed out, was all the more necessary in view of the uncertain results of tariff agitations in the United States.

Both Parties Sought Reciprocity.

Conservatives and Liberals alike had been seeking reciprocity with our southern neighbour. It was necessary to move with caution, awaiting the opportune time. When that time came, in the judgment of the Liberal leaders, prompt action was taken. If an alliance between Toryism and Nationalism defeated the movement, and balked the Liberals, they certainly should not be blamed because they did not do something. The cry at the last election was that they were trying to do too much.

The Liberals have been moving as fast as public sentiment would permit. Their demand for free food is only in line with the efforts they have been making all through their administration. If they emphasize it now that is only because the need for their policy is greater than ever.—London Advertiser.

EKO CLUB RECEPTION

Members and Guests Spent Evening in Dancing and Progressive Euchre

The Eko Club held an enjoyable reception last night in the club rooms in the Bank of Commerce building. In the unavoidable absence of the chairman, rM. aJok Comstock presided in a most efficient manner.

The evening was spent in progressive euchre and dancing.

Mr. Boness and Mr. G. B. Wilson won the gentlemen's prize and rMs. Simpson and Mrs. Mills won the ladies' prizes.

During the evening refreshments were served and the affair was a decided success.

The officers of the club are looking forward to holding another reception in January, and a good time is anticipated.

FORMER ENNISMORE FAMILY ATTACKED BY A LUNATIC

That the place was not burned to the ground with the four victims was nothing short of a miracle.

Willis immediately rushed back to Leduc, where he got Drs. Sutherland and Wood who went out to attend to the injured woman and children, and they have hopes that none of the four will succumb to their injuries.

Mr. Flood was got on the telephone and immediately left for his home by automobile with William Tipton from the south side.

Cannot Account for the Attack

The occurrence has shocked the whole neighborhood. Mr. Flood, who is an old-timer in the district, is very well-to-do and greatly respected by all in the community. His loss is great for when the barn was fired there were four horses, seven cattle, and many hogs in it, which were all destroyed.

He cannot account for the savage outbreak on the part of Grant, who he says has been working for him for three years and has borne a good reputation all that time. Grant was about thirty years of age, and had been in Canada for about six years.

The children, who are aged 12, 9, and 6 years, although badly hurt, are not in such a critical condition as their mother, for besides being shot in both shoulders, she has some nasty wounds on the head and body.

EGGS WERE 42C ON MARKET TO-DAY

Pork was Plentiful and Apples Were Freely Offered

It seemed that every other waggon on the outside market this morning was freighted with pork. Plentiful is not the word. You might say abundant and there would then be but a slight exaggeration. The opening price was 14c. for fronts and 16c. for hind quarters, and for a time at least there was not the slightest variation from these quotations, a fact that might have aroused some suspicion among buyers. The quantity offered was pleasing to the large number of citizens who made the rounds of the market, especially as the quality appeared to be all that could be desired.

Lamb was 14 and 16 cents with at least one demand for 17c. for hind quarters. The supply was limited.

Apples were quite plentiful with quite a few Spies offering. One man was asking $4.50 a barrel for Spies and Greenings were $3.50 a bag. Russets were scarce. Snows were from $1.25 to $1.50 a bag. Talmands were $1.50 a bag. The Ben Davis occupied a humble position, but $1.25 was the quotation for them.

Potatoes were from $1.15 to $1.25, with the latter price predominating during the early hours of the market.

"This is no place for me," essayed a local storekeeper as he glanced in at the door and then beat a hasty retreat. He had contemplated making his way into the inside market where standing room was at a premium and eggs were forty-five cents a dozen. Less than three weeks remains until Christmas, a fact which is evidently patent to both the buyer and seller.

Sanitary Inspector Spence made his usual round of the market, and at its conclusion was able to announce that everything was satisfactory. A few days ago a diseased turkey was sold to a local consumer. The bird was turned over to the Sanitary Inspector who diagnosed the case as one of advanced tuberculosis. The following market day the original owner of the bird was located and the money refunded to the purchaser.

Eggs Were Scarce.

A large quantity of butter was offered for sale this morning at thirty cents a pound. Eggs were scarce and sold as high as forty-five cents a dozen.

Fowl was plentiful and more than one Christmas shopper secured a first mortgage on a well-nourished looking turkey at eighteen to nineteen cents a pound. Ducks sold at $1.65 a pair and chickens could be obtained at one dollar a brace. Geese ranged in prices from $1.75 to $2 each.

CASE HAS BEEN WITHDRAWN

Local Butcher Agrees to Comply With Regulations

The case against a local butcher who was charged with a breach of the Meat Act, has been withdrawn. It was alleged that the butcher in question fed raw offal to hogs that were intended for food consumption. The defendant has agreed to carry out the regulations recommended by Sanitary Inspector Spence, with the result that the prosecutor has decided to withdraw the complaint.

Dr. Hamilton, M.H.O., has approved of the action and has received a letter from the defendant, in which the latter assures the authorities that he will comply with the regulations.

IMPORTATION OF ARMS IS PROHIBITED

ustoms' Officials Seize Quantity of Rifles and Ammunition

Special Wire to Examiner:

LONLON, ENG., Dec. 6.—(Special cable.)—There is much excitement in Ireland over the order prohibiting importation of arms, and many of the most rabid on both sides declare that they will ignore the order, and by smuggling and other underground routes seek to make Erin an armed camp. It is admitted this morning that the King's proclamation hits both the Unionists of Ulster and the Nationalists of Dublin as both parties are credited with piling up arms and ammunition in the expectation of a struggle. In England and Scotland this move of the government is regarded as a very wise precaution. However, quietly thinking people regard the prospects of settlement of the vexed Home rule question was never so good as now. Even the Pall Mall Gazette organ of fighting Unionists, this morning adopts a conciliatory tone.

SEIZED ARMS.

BELFAST, IRELAND, Dec. 6.—In pursuance of a Royal proclamation against the importation of arms into Ireland, the Customs authorities today seized and confiscated several large consignments of rifles, bayonets and ammunition.

RESULT OF THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

After the evening service in St. John's Anglican Church to-morrow evening, a social hour will be spent in the Sunday school room, to which all the congregation is invited. At the gathering the results of the recent missionary canvass will be made known, and brief speeches will be given by members of the congregation.

PORK CAKE—IN THE FLESH

A lady has sent in to the staff of The Examiner a pork cake. Its quality is excellent, and the maker attributes her success to having made home-made flour—Quaker flour, the best, perhaps, because it is made in Peterborough. If any other lady thinks of submitting a pork cake of her own concoction to the judgment of the jaws of a jury of reporters an unbiased verdict will be rendered ven if her pork cake should result in stomach-ache for over indulgence in a good thing.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS ELECT OFFICERS

A Large and Enthusiastic Gathering

A large and enthusiastic gathering assembled in St. John's School House last night for the annual meeting of St. John's Bible Class. The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows:

Hon.-Pres.—Rev. Canon Davidson.
President—Mr. T. Tooms.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. E. Tucker.
Secretary—Mr. A. Theobald.
Treasurer—Mr. D. J. Eldred (re-elected.
Leader—Mr. A. Kingdon, (re-elected.
Chairman of Reception Committee.—Mr. H. Flowers.
Chairman of Social Committee.—Mr. D. J. Eldred.
Chairman of Devotional Commitee.—to be appointed.

After the business was concluded Canon Davidson referred to the excellent work of the class and faithfulness of the past officers and members, in very flattering terms. He took occasion to eulogise the good work of Mr. W. D. Packwood, who is leaving Peterborough for the Mother Land next Thursday. General regret was expressed at the Church's loss in the removal of Mr. Packdood from their midst and all members wished him God speed and assured him of their continued interest and prayers.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT AT BUFFALO

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Dec. 6.—With the body of an unconscious man lying across the throttle, a Lake Shore locomotive ran wild in the yards here to-day, struck a switch and turned over on its side. The mangled body of J. J. Bannigan of Buffalo, was found in the wreckage. He was a freight conductor and was in the cab with Engineer Wooster and Fireman Keenan when it was sideswiped by a freight train. Keenan jumped, Wooster was thrown out by the force of the collision and Bannigan was threwn back stunned against the throttle. That threw the throttle wide open and the engine started at full speed, carrying Bannigan to his death.

Young Men's Club Entertained

The Young Men's Club of St. Luke's Church entertained the Girls' Auxiliary in their clubrooms, Hunter Street, East, last evening. A large number were present and a very pleasant time was spent, playing progressive games. The winners were presented with handsome prizes. Mrs. Robert Long, Miss Barter, and Miss Clara Storey carried off the honours for the ladies, while Messrs. Clifford Cox, F. Legon and A. Knott were the winners for the men.

At the conclusion refreshments were served.

TRAINING A DAUGHTER

How her daughter was trained for marriage is told by a woman contributor in the Woman's Home Companion. The assitance of the servant was a material help. Following is an extract:

"For a time her most serious trouble seemed to lie in buying meats. Our bill increased alarmingly. One morning I heard Maggie remark:

"'Well, Miss Helen, if you say to the butcher'I don't know a thing about meat; send me a nice steak for six,' he sure will cheat you. And it ain't any use for you to poke your fingers into a piece of meat and look wise. He'll see through you. You got to know meat.'

"This appealed to me as sound reasoning. Every morning during the next fortnight I went with Helen to the market, where the butcher offered to explain cuts to us if we came in early. Thanks to this plan, Helen now knows how to buy meat.

"Before she learned values in the household linen, we added to our supply some more undesirable 'bargains.' She will never waste Robert's money on the same sleary, mercerised towels or sheeting.

"And directly she could spare time from her practical course of training as a purchasing and disbursing agent, Maggie, the faithful, began to instruct her in plain cooking.

"All this has not been easy for Helen nor her mother. But it will make things much easier for Helen and her husband. Doubtless she will make mistakes. The best and most experienced of us older women do that. But she will know how to cover those mistakes with a brave smile. Her husband will never gaze at her in helpless dismay while she implores him to take her home to 'mother' until a new servant is installed in her kitchen. Above all things, she will know the purchasing value of her husband's salary, because she has learned it as she should—at her mother's expense.

"Last night, when she turned over the bank and account books, she said to Robert:

"'You'll never know, dear, what Mumsey has saved you. No, not just in money, but in temper and tears. I have watered many of her coat collars that yours might be dry.'

"I smiled at them both, but said nothing. Why should I tell Robert the truth?—that I had been trying to make good as a mother-in-law for him in order that my precious daughter might be happy with him."

The Benefit Of Home Games

In encouraging children to be alert and take an interest in family games, we are teaching them to form a very valuable habit, namely, to think, and all our educationalists today are lamenting the inability of our young people to think. We used to play a game in school "I'm thinking of something," and the teacher used to remark she could tell in a minute which child had the mind under best control. There is a mental development—yes, and a spiritual development too — in games and home amusements.

A GAME OF DEFINITIONS

This is a game for the family circle or the social evening. To play it, select a word of more than one meaning; for instance, belle, bell. You proceed in this manner to describe it: "My word is in both meanings a common noun. In one it describes a useful manufactured article; in the other it is sometimes applied to young women." If this suggests the word to one in the game, he does not guess it, but "throws a light" thus: "It can only be applied to a popular young woman." You admit that he is right; then the next "go"; then "lights"; fall more broadly until all have it. The one guessing last has the privilege of calling the word itself. This game can be carried on indefinitely. Aside from general information regarding the meaning, analysis and spelling of words, it teaches a correct phraseology for the delinications must be true or the real issue of the game is lost.

GOING TO JERUSALEM

It seemed to me that there could be no young person who had not enjoyed the old fashioned game of "Musical chairs," but I found a party of young people recently who had never heard of the game. The game requires music. Chairs are placed in a row, alternately facing in opposite directions. There should be one chair less than players, and the guests march or dance around them while the music plays. When it stops they must all sit down. The one who finds no chair drops out of the game. When the music resumes, one chair is removed and the march recommences. This is kept up until only one person is left. The success of this game lies largely with the musician. He may play more slowly until everybody expects him to stop, and then suddenly begin to play rapidly and stop when nobody is expecting it.

PROGRESSIVE PUZZLES

The simplicity of this game is its great attraction, and it is interesting as it is simple. Provide as many small cards as there are guests, several pairs of scissors, a prize if you like, and the game is ready. Seat the party in a circle around the room. Each one then receives a card, and every third or fourth player scissors, which he shares with his neighbor. Each player then cuts his card twice across so as to make four pieces. They may be cut any shape.

Each player now mixes his puzzle and passes it on to his right hand neighbor. At a signal every one tries to put the puzzle together, and the first player who succeeds calls out all must stop then and pass the puzzles to the right again. The game then goes on until the time limit is up, when the person who has the most marks to his credit receives a prize.

THE NONSENSE RHYMES GAME

Who doesn't enjoy Lear's "The Book of Nonsense?" His metre is so simple that almost any can imitate it, in a way, and an amusing game may be played with this for a motive. Each person receives pencil and paper and is asked to produce a nonsense rhyme according to Lear. The following is an example:

"There was a young man of Bridgeport
Who sat on the stove just for sport,
And though he was burnt,
No lesson he learned
This eccentric young man of Bridgeport."

This form of amusement often leads into unsuspected channels; for instance, the writer had been indulging in the fun of writing Limericks. Imagine my surprise when I received word I had been awarded a piece of property for my Limerick.

THE GAME OF SCOUTS

In this game the players divide into two parties and go into different rooms or part of the garden. Each party sends out a "scout," and the scouts meet and decide on some different thing to guess (some local object, the left eye brow of Julius Ceaser, etc.), and then return to the parties, each scout going to his opponent's party, where questions are fired at him in quick succession, as the side guessing first is the winning one and takes possession of both "scouts."

Only those questions, which can be answered by "yes" or "no" or "I don't know" are allowable. As in other games, it is first discovered whether the object is "animal," "vegetable" or "mineral," and after this is settled the questions come thick and fast until one of the parties has won the guessing race, when a shout or whistle promulgates the fact to their opponents.

SPECIAL MEETING OF CURLING CLUB

A special meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held on Monday next, December 8th, at 8 p.m., in the Curling rink. The purpose of the meeting is to get the members together to vote on the applications of a number of persons who wish to join the club, as well as to consider such other business as may come before the meeting. Every member is requested to turn out and help get things ready for the coming season.

Y. W.C. A. NOTES

Vesper service will be held as usual in the "Green Room" of the Y.W.C.A. at 5 p.m., Sunday, December 7th.

Mrs. Kerr will give the afternoon's address, assisted by Mrs. Peter Kerr and Mrs. Boyd, who will contribute the vocal number. Our vesper services this year have been very interesting and well attended, and we hope everyone will feel free to attend them as a cordial invitation is extended to all.

SUFFRAGETTES AT IT AGAIN

Burn Down a $60,000 Exhibition Building

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MANCHESTER, ENG., Dec. 6.—Carrying on their promised campaign of destruction in retaliating for the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst, suffragettes burned the Exhibition building here with a loss of sixty thousand dollars. They left a card inscribed: "To Premier Asquith—this is your welcome to Manchester."

BIG BLAZE AT BOW PARK FARM

$50,000 Damage Done by an Early Morning Fire

Examiner Special:

BRANTFORD, Dec. 6.—Another disastrous fire broke out at Bow Park Farm, owned by the Dominion Canners, one of the best known farms of Canada, at 3 a.m. to-day. A loss which totalled $50,000 was occasioned by the burning of a brick barn, 250 by 50 feet and the burning of thirty-three horses, half a dozen cattle, four thousand bushels of seed peas, some thousands of bushels of oats, a large quantity of hay and some implements. The blaze is supposed to have been caused by a fire bug. The farm is located about two miles from Brantford and consists of nearly one thousand acres and was formerly used as a government experimental farm.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

The Irishman had had a serious accident and had been hustled off to the hospital to be operated upon. As he lay upon the bed he beckoned to the nurse and said weakly:

"I'll not be operated upon by that doctor. Ye must find another one."

"Why?" remonstrated the nurse. "He is one of the cleverest surgeons in—"

"Jayhe," was the reply, "but he has an unlucky name. I heard them say his name was Dochter Kilpatrick, and, ye see, me name is Patrick."

GOSPEL HALL NEWS.

At the Gospel Hall last night Mr. Irvin gave his second illustrated address on the two roads and two destinies of man, to a deeply interested gathering. He proved, from the Scriptures, that there are two fixed and eternal abodes, where the saved, in conscious bliss, and the lost in conscious torment, exist, after death. He will speak, Sunday night, on death, and the next great event of this age, "The second coming of Christ and who shall follow." All thinking people and Bible students, along with the general public, are invited to hear this momentous question cleared up of the mystery which obscures it from the average mind. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Everything is free and no collection.

NO CHANGES IN LEAGUE CIRCUIT MADE AT THE ANNUAL MEETING

Magnates of the Canadian League Gathered in Toronto Yesterday —President Fitzgerald's Address

HAS BEEN RE-ELECTED

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—President J. P. Fitzgerald presided at the meeting of the Canadian Baseball League held yesterday afternoon in the Prince George Hotel. Those present were:

Ottawa—F. Shaughnessy.
London—S. Stevely, George O'Neil.
Brantford—T. Nelson, R. Brown.
Hamilton—G. Lee, J. Burns, and M. M. Robinson.
Guelph—W. A. Mahoney.
Berlin—W. Witt, E. Clement.
St. Thomas—C. Stanley, R. Chandler.
Peterborough—W. H. Denham.

President Fitzgerald addressed the delegates as follows::

"Gentlemen,—After our preliminary meeting there remains but little to cover in our annual meeting to-day. We have every reason to congratulate ourselves on a most successful year. True some of the clubs lost money, but that is unavoidable in any league under any circumstances. A league of our size cannot hope to break even on gate receipts. It is not done in any Class C organization and if some of our cities have done so it is because they are particularly good ball towns—and we are blessed in that respect. The hope of any league of our classification lies in sales and drafts and we have done fairly well in that department. Fortunately a couple of our clubs who most needed assistance, got it through sending players to higher grades.

"It emphasizes what has been brought out year by year, that the marketable players are to be found in young fellows. A year under a manager who knows his business will do wonders in developing a green young lad from the lots. Ten years under an incapable leader will teach nothing and develop nobody. It all leads again to the oft repeated but none the less truism that saleable players are to be found among youngsters. An old-timer or two may be necessary to steady and assist in the development of the younger boys, but it is a decided mistake to load up with them.

"In view of the fact that the past season was disastrous to several smaller leagues and none too prosperous in the larger ones, we have every reason to feel satisfied and more.

"All over America our league is looked upon as a credit to baseball, and at the meeting at Columbus I found that we were regarded as an ornament on the continent's baseball map, and an enduring and growing power. Nowhere can there be found a better or more able class of men than are behind the teams in this league. The baseball world realizes it and our standing is an enviable one. Our financial statement shows a substantial dividend besides our $1,000 sinking fund after meeting all expenses. We don't owe anybody a five cent piece and all our clubs are squared up.

"I would suggest that our ten per cent. rake-off to the league be continued as an assistance by our stronger to our weaker clubs. Whether we shall continue to add $1,000 a year to our sinking fund or divide the entire ten per cent. after expenses have been paid, remains with you and I think should be discussed at this meeting.

"The returns of the scorers were decidedly unsatisfactory with two or three exceptions. There is a motion before the meeting to-day for your consideration, which should carry—to issue averages twice a month. It can be done, but not complete unless you owners see to it that your scorers be prompt. I think if the rule on our books of a fine of a dollar a day for all delinquents of over five days would have the desired effect if the clubs made it clear to the scorers that any fines inflicted for delays would be taken out of their salaries. I think if the clubs insisted on the scorers handing in the scores daily or at latest at the end of each series to the club secretary to forward to the lague president there would be no further trouble.

"Umpires, as usual, were more or less scapegoats. I do not intend to ask you to believe that ours were perfect—far from it. I do, however, think that we had a good average lot—some bad, some good. I hope if I am in authority again to do a little better next year. If it is my lot to look after them again, I expect to get an entirely new staff. In the matter of fines, I erred on the merciful side, asking for payment only in grave offences. I think every fine should be collected, provided the umpires are discreet in imposing them. If the club-owners will give an undertaking that every player must pay his own fine, I will undertake to have a league as free from rowdiness as there is anywhere, and that without undue severity. No one can threaten to do dire things unless such and such a point of view should be taken.

"I believe there is but one more point to touch upon. For the past two seasons there have been rumblings of a desire to shift the circuit—drop two towns, or change them to other cities. I am drawing your attention to what everybody knows, to provoke discussion, thresh it out, and settle it once and for all. That, it seems to me, is the most satisfactory way to all concerned.

"Whatever is done, if there is anything should be done as man to man, over and above board.

"In conclusion, I wish to thank all of you for your kind and courteous treatment of men, and of my requests. I may be allowed to add, without fear of being called a flatterer, that I never have worked with a better or cleaner lot of men in any line of endeavour. Our success is an earnest of it."

The rule of last year will again prevail concerning remittances to the league and 10 per cent. of all gate receipts shall be remitted.

Part of the income so received shall be set aside each year until the fund has reached $5,600, and the balance shall be distributed among the clubs that finish.

The Financial Statement.

The financial statement showed a balance of $2,456, out of which $1,000 was placed in the sinking fund. The expenses during the season were $6,595.23.

The following amounts were paid in by the different clubs from their gate receipts: Ottawa, $1,771; London, $1,408; Peterborough, $687; Brantford, $603; Guelph, $552; St. Thomas, $538; Hamilton, $495, Berlin, $424.

It was decided that a visiting club waiving its date in favour of the home team for the purposes of an exhibition game, shall be paid a double guarantee.

The official averages will be published twice a week; that is, if the official scorers make their returns to President Fitzgerald without the delay which characterized their work this season. The official scorers at Hamilton and Ottawa came in for a lot of criticism for their neglect in this respect this year.

During the meeting Mr. George O'Neil, of London, purchased the Guelph Club from W. A. Mahoney for $2,500. A deposit of $50 was made to bind the sale, which is to be completed by the 15th of January. The deal was made in less than five minutes. Mr. O'Neil says that he has not decided just what he will do with the club. He may run it himself, or may dispose of it to other parties. At all events, he considers that he got a bargain, as with the club he secured a number of valuable ball-players. Mr. O'Neil also opened negotiations for the purchase of the Berlin Club, but the sale was not made.

It was announced that the option held by Mr. J. J. McCaffery on the Hamilton Club had not been exercised. Other parties are after the franchise.

There was some discussion on the admission of a club from Erie, Pa., and the dropping of Berlin. It was plainly stated, however, that Berlin or any other Canadian League Club would be paid a fair price for its franchise if it was dropped to make way for another club. Nothing can be definitely stated about the admission of Erie until after January 1st, although the Canadian League has made claim to that territory.

President Fitzgerald was re-elected for a term of two years. He is not only the president, but is secretary and treasurer of the league. Several delegates spoke warmly in eulogy of his work. President Fitzgerald was authorized to appoint a schedule committee, which will begin its work when the membership of the league is definitely settled. The season will open about May 7 and close on Labour Day, September 7, one week longer than last year's season.

The offer of an Ottawa hotelkeeper to give a silver trophy to the best all-round player in the league was laid over until the conditions imposed by the donor were made known.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 6. — Charles Farquharson of Stratford, the new president of the Ontario Hockey Association, assumed the chair this afternoon; his promotion from the Vice-Presidency was a foregone conclusion. Other officers were also elected as already published. The new executive elected to-day was Frank Hyde, of Woodstock; Sheriff Paxton, of Whitby; R. M. Glover, of Peterborough, and Albert Copeland, of Midland. Two are to be appointed by the president.

HOCKEY

There was a falling off in the attendance at the hockey workout at Brock St. Rink last night. The players should understand that these workouts are of the greatest importance in view of the continuance of the mild weather which will cut the practice season very short and make it imperative that the players should be in the best of condition when the ice gets here. There is a lot of competition for places and it is up to the squad to get out and get into condition at once. There is another workout Monday night and every player is expected out.

THE WEATHER

Unseasonable weather for the month of December still continues, the thermometer yesterday reaching 47 degrees in the shade. White frost has been plentiful the last two mornings, which is a good sign of the near approach of some rain, and rain is usually followed by strong winds, and much colder weather.

CONTROVERSY RE IMPROVEMENTS TO CRYSTAL PALACE GROUNDS

Has Aroused the Ire of the Representatives of the Football Association--See Late Edition of Examiner for Old Country Football Results.

Last week a letter, which may be described as a story of the negotiations between the Crystal Palace authorities and the Football association with regard to the improvement of the Palace ground for the cup final, appeared in the press from Ernest Husey, who has acted as the earl of Plymouth's agent since the purchase of the Crystal Palace by his lordship. The Football association have now replied to Mr. Husey in a lengthy communication signed by Charles Crump, Alfred Davis, Horace A. Porter and Henry J. Hubard. After expressing surprise and regret that Mr. Husey should have given publicity to figures and facts from documents specially marked "Private and confidential" for the obvious reason that when plans had been agreed upon it would be necessary to invite tenders, the representatives of the F.A. proceed to combat his statement that the sub-committee intimated that they would have their own plan, otherwise they would recommend the council to take the final away from the palace.

Noble Sentiments.

Speaking at the jubilee banquet of the Football Association, the Rev. R. S. de Courcy Laffan remarked as follows: "The greatest claim of the F. A. to the gratitude of their countrymen was the noble work they had done for he democratisation of sport which was now not what it used to be—the privilege of any class—but the heritage of the people." In clarion tones of unimpassioned conviction the reverend gentleman, who represents amateurism, asked the aristocracy not to stand aloof from the great democratic movement of sport, but to set themselves at its head and help to promote throughout the whole country that true sporting spirit which made a man and made a nation. "There was a greater victory than sweeping the board at Berlin in 1916, and that was that Englishmen should be the leaders among European and civilized nations in the chivalrous spirit in which sport ought to be conducted."

Like the Irishman, I may remark, "Them's my sentiments."

Odds and Ends.

The latest country to fall into line with the International Football Federation is Spain, which has now set its house in order, and it has been provisionally admitted to membership to the F.I.F.A. The only European country now outside the Federation is Bohemia.

Many continental players are now found taking part in first-class "soccer" in England, and an Italian, Attilo Fresia, from Genoa, is the latest recruit. He has signed a professional form for Reading, against whom he did so well when the English club were on tour on the continent.

The Mayor and Sheriff of Hull were the guests of the Football Association at luncheon at Hull, when England played Holland, and both paid a tribute to football as a valuable national physical asset.

C. Avery, at one time captain of Plymouth and a Devon forward, and who was of recent years a strong supporter of the Northern Union movement in the west, passed away at Plymouth on 14th inst.

The following players have accepted the invitation to play against a strong Partick Thistle eleven in Alec. Raisbeck's beenfit match at Firhill on January 6; Brownlie (Third Lanark), R. Crompton (Blackburn Rovers) and J. Dodds (Celtic), J. Gordon (Rangers) and R. Mercer (Heart of Midlothian), W. Meredith (Manchester United), R. Walker (Heart of Midlothian), R.S. McColl (Queen's Park), J. Croal (Falkirk), and R. McNeill (Hamilton Academicals.)

Ayr United have now three Englishmen in their team. The trio are Dainty, Bannister and Middleton. Other players with English experience in the United are Phillips (West Ham and Carlisle), Herbertson (Fulham), Robertson (Woolwich) and Campbell (Carlisle).

THE PROPER BARRELING OF APPLES

Although the box packing for apples is every year becoming more popular, by far the larger proportion of our Nova Scotia fruit is shipped in barrels and probably will be for a number of years to come. While comparatively speaking, the packing of apples in barrels is a much simpler operation than box packing, that forms no excuse for the hit-or-miss style of barrel pack that is put up by some growers.

Naturally, the first requisite for good packing is good fruit. It is not of much use to talk of packing No. 1's when one has No. 2 stuff to work on. We will presume the proper cultural and spraying methods have been followed and that the fruit is of at least average quality.

While some growers practice out of doors packing successfully, we find it more convenient to draw the fruit to the apple cellar and do the packing there. When unfavorable weather conditions make picking impossible we can work to advantage indoors. Aside from the convenience we have found our cellar a paying proposition as it enables us to hold our fruit over during the winter in the event of a temporary slump in prices.

USE CLEAN BARRELS

The appearance of the package has more to do with the selling of the product than many imagine. Dirty second hand barrels should not be used, especially for export fruit.

Anyone who has packed apples at all is familiar with the operation of nailing the hoops and stamping the head end. Next the pulp head is placed in readiness for the facers. Some place excelsior between the pulp and the barrel head, but with proper packing I doubt if this is necessary. In fact, too much is liable to give the purchaser the feeling that he has had one put over on him; he pays for apples, not excelsior. A more important point is the character of the pulp head. Some are so thin as to be almost useless. This pulp head should have some "body" to it.

Choosing the facers is a point on which many otherwise good packers fall down. The law allows 15 per cent. overface but it is advisable to keep well below this limit. Don't select the very largest apples you have for facers. Let them be of the average size for the grade and a fair sample of the contents of the barrel. It will pay you to buy a stemmer and clip off the stems. Long stemmed varieties are very liable to become bruised by the stems being pressed against the head. In arranging the facers, don't put a few large ones in the centre of the head.

UNIFORMITY NEEDED

In sorting for grades, strive for uniformity. If you have some extra good No. 1's, pack them by themselves. A few extra large apples spoil the appearance of the whole barrel as much as does the same number of small ones. Strive to follow the spirit, not the letter of the law. Ten per cent. and 20 per cent. is allowed for wastey fruit in No. 1's and 2's respectively. A few worm holes are allowable but it is far better not to have a wormy apple in the barrel. See to it that the grade is of the standard set for the variety.

The barrel should be rocked after each basket of fruit has been emptied in. That doesn't mean that the barrel must be shaken till the apples rattle like two peas in a bag; several sharp jars is all that is necessary. To rock the barrel on a piece of plank is a good stunt.

TAILING OFF

Tailing off is the most difficult part of barrel packing. Practice alone will make one proficient. Some packers tail off with two rows, others with one. Two rows make a more satisfactory job. Enough space must be left so that when the two layers are properly spaced the top one will be about an inch above the edge of the barrel. This rule is not infallible, but is usually satisfactory. If the fruit is lower in the barrel sufficient pressure cannot be applied and the barrel goes slack. On the other hand if the fruit is higher, too much pressure is required to get the head in, and the contents are unnecessarily bruised.

Before the pulp head is placed in position and the head pressed in, give the barrel a final racking, pressing the fruit down by hand with a felt-covered "follower." After the head has been pressed in (we find the screw press the most satisfactory) there is no occasion to fill it full of nails; five or six are sufficient.

THE OLD COUNTRY TASTE

"Let us make red cheese, if that is what our customers want." So said veteran Dan Derbyshire at an E.O.D.A. meeting years ago. What do our best customers, the people of Great Britain, want? The following extract from an article in the London Times may give some of the boys an idea, and show them the wisdom of the advice that many cheese buyers have been spreading broadcast:

"Science has greatly modified procedure in the making of standard cheeses. Bacteriological research has made plain much of the mystery that formerly surrounded the processes of manufacture, ripening and flavoring, and one of the results has been to shorten the period required for their completion. The belief that the quality of the article has suffered from the use of artificial cultures has not prevented their adoption nor affected prices; but modern preferences in cheese have changed so greatly in other respects that the producer has been compelled to adapt his methods to suit the popular taste and disregard his own ideas as to what constitutes quality and nutritive value. The change in the demand has been more pronounced in the hard than in the blue-veined varieties. The Stilton, still regarded as the finest cheese produced in any country, has undergone little alteration, for the reason that there has been no call for an article appreciably different from that which earned for it its high reputation.

THE CHEDDAR PREFERRED

In Cheddar and Cheshire, however, a pronounced preference is now shown for a softer cheese, and one more mellow in flavor. The public demand a softer article, and they will not be deterred from gratifying their preference by considerations of cost. They will study their palate rather than the amount of nutriment in the cheese they buy. Makers of the hard cheeses have endeavored to reason with the trade on this point, but to no purpose. The wholesale buyer argues that it is his province to provide the public with the class of article they demand, and, in effect, he has told the farmer that it is equally his duty, not to educate the consumer, but to produce what he desires.

The more skilled makers have adopted this policy with reluctance, but the example of the astute among them has induced them to fall into line. A prominent maker of Cheshire is credited with a statement that sums up the situation He had no doubt, he said, that the cheese now demanded was greatly inferior in quality, but he was going to make the article that would sell, and as he would receive the price of cheese for the moisture it contained he was not going to quarrel with the consumer over the change in his taste.

THE FANCY VARIETIES

The making of fancy or soft cheeses has not made progress in this country. Attempts have been made to develop this side of the business, and all the colleges make provision for giving instruction to students in the manufacture of cream cheeses and other fancy articles of Continental origin. The poor response implies no reflection upon the enterprise of dairy farmers. The districts to which the manufacture of fancy cheeses would be most suitable are engaged in the more lucrative business of supplying the new milk market. On financial grounds the making of cheese and butter ranks after the selling of the milk direct. Besides, the output of standard British makes has seldom exceeded the demand, so that the occasion has not arisen for turning attention from a business of assured stability to another of doubtful advantage.

The wisdom of the British dairy farmer in adhering to the methods he understands, and in which he has been successful, is confirmed by the action of American and Continental countries in emulating his example. Cheddar and Cheshire cheeses are manufactured in large quantities, not only in Canada and the United States, but also in Holland, and even in New Zealand cheesemaking on British lines is a growing and promising pursuit.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The Stock Market today opened strong and irregular, but with a good undertone. The list has been held in check by the high call money rates. The speculative contingent is expecting to see the reserves restored in Saturday's bank statement and if so there may be further improvement next week. It is probable that important supreme court decisions will be handed down on Monday and the usual waiting is anticipated. We think the stock is inclined to wait for the passage of the Currency Bill, which seems to be near at hand, although there is no necessity for such an attitude as we look upon it, the country will get a law from the hills now pending that will give a system better than is now existing. The sooner the better. The best sources are suggesting the purchase of U. P., S.P., B. and O., G.Q., N.P., St. Paul, and Erie, and convertible bonds of the best roads, although admitting a shortage outstanding in industrials now may carry them higher also.

Believe That The U. S. Is Wrong

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 6.—English statesmen find themselves in a quandary over the Mexican business. Every authority here is convinced that President Wilson has bungled the affair. He has prevented the only possible settlement in the predominance of Huerta and is causing the continuance of anarchy. Business interests are being wrecked. London is largely interested in the Mexican developments which are smashed by the present anarchy. All classes here are, however, determined to do nothing even seemingly antagonistic to the United States' policy. England values American friendship more than Mexican wealth, but she believes America is blundering.

SOME SANDWICH FILLINGS

Sandwich fillings may be roughly classified as sweet, meat, and fancy. Here are a few nice fillings of each grade:

Spread slices of brown bread with grapefruit marmalade, through which is chopped candied ginger. Another good sweet mixture is pineapple preserves mixed with candied cherries, delicious is bar-le-duc and cream cheese or grated maple sugar and chopped walnuts.

Never use slices of meat in a dainty sandwich. But the meat through a fine chopper, until it is almost a paste. Cold chicken, lamb, duck and game make a delicious and simple filling by seasoning highly with salt, peper and a pinch of cayenne, then moistening with rich cream —or whipepd cream—until the mixture spreads easily.

Minced ham or tongue is better when moistened with mayonnaise. Cold fish mixtures can be treated in the same way, but are improved by chopping olives through the dressing.

A good fancy filling is made from cream cheese mixed to a paste with French dressing and seasoned with chopped green peppers and slices of olives. Another good mixture is made from the outer leaves of head lettuce—the hearts can be used for salad—cut up fine, mixed with mayonnaise and sprinkled thickly with crisp bacon cut into small pieces.

Artistic and Good.

Red pepper sandwiches are artistic and appetising. Use the canned sweet red peppers, chop fine and mix to a smooth paste with mayonnaise.

For a sumer sandwich nothing is nicer than watercress chopped and mixed with French dressing. Put a thick layer of the cress an the bread and cover with thin slices of small red radishes.

A nourishing sandwich filling is made from the yolks of hard-boiled eggs run through a sieve and mixed with chopped sweet pickle and shredded bacon. Another variety beg grated Parmesan or English cheese incorporated with the egg and a few olives sprinkled over the top. Both mixtures are dressed with mayonnaise.

PROBABILITIES.

Forecasts—Lower Lakes, fresh today to strong breezes to gales easterly with sleet and rain to-night and on Sunday.

MAY BE A CANDIDATE FOR COMMISSION.

It is understood that Ald. Gordon is considering the question of becoming a candidate for the Water Commission. Mr. W. H. Hill's term expires this year. It has been announced that Mr. J. B. McWilliams is clearing decks for a run for the position, and there is bound to be a contest.

During his absence his wife and infant child will reside with Mrs. Dutton, 92 London Street, City.

BEAUTY IN INTELLIGENCE

In commenting on women he has painted, he said:

"The plain woman, so-called, is to the artist frequently a 'paintable' woman. She has for those who watch her with the seeing glance a host of surprises. Sometimes she is radiant, her eyes sparkle, her face is illuminated from within by the soul's candle. You get to the point of hesitating, when some one says, 'Isn't Miss So-and-So plain?' You know she is not, but how can you make the other see what you see?

"To me the face of George Eliot has always been wonderfully interesting. I do not see how the term 'ugly' can be applied to it, so full is it of intelligence. It is so alert and stimulating, though the outline is irregular.

"There is nothing to me, as a man, more dreadful than a woman who has matured physically without developing mentally; there is nothing to me as an artist less worthy of commemoration than the face of such a woman. But think of the horror of seeing that face by your side day by day—that is worse than merely having to paint it.

"I may go so far as to say that if a woman wants to be beautiful she must cultivate her intellectual as well as her physical attributes. Then and then only will she achieve the desired result. To-day we have a distinct type of beauty, indefinable as the elements of which it is composed, for who can describe the Soul, who can put the Mind into words? That is what you would have to do."

GRADING TO SIZE IN BARRELS

The packing season has now commenced, and for the next two months the growers will be at their busiest. In many parts of Canada the crop of apples is a poor one, damaged by scab and of small size, and in these localities the grower will find that he has very few No. 1 apples in proportion to the local crop on the trees. Of course this situation might have been remedied to some extent by thinning early in the season, but as this practice is unfortunately only adopted by the great minority (in spite of the statements which have been published in its favor) it is safe to say that the difficulty already mentioned will exist this season.

The time is opportune, then, to place before our readers a natural conclusion. Great improvements have been made recently in the matter of packing fruit, and these improvements have had a correspondingly great effect upon the tastes of the consuming public. The conclusion is, therefore, that it would be in no sense wise for any grower to think of including in a No. 1 barrel anything but fruit of the choicest quality, free from blemishes, and of good color.

TWO SIZES OF NO. 1

More than that, there are growers —though unfortunately they are few in number—who have gone so far as to split their No. 1 grade into two sizes rather than pack in one barrel apples which, though perfectly uniform in other respects, still show some variation in size.

This practice of grading to size in barrels is a highly commendable one. In the first place it makes a good impression upon the merchant who receives the fruit. There is more in this statement than appears to the casual reader. To please a merchant, to convince him that you are conscientious in your methods, and through him to give the consumer a perfect article, is to take a long step toward that success to which every fruit grower aspires.

There are, in the second place, certain markets which demand a fairly large apple, but there are other markets which desire a smaller size, particularly for table use. The grower who grades to size is therefore able to cater to a variety of markets.

LEADER GOES FREE

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst is Released From Exeter Jail

WENT ON HUNGER STRIKE

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader who was arrested at Plymouth Dec. 4 on her arrival from the United States aboard the steamer Majestic, was released from the Exeter Jail at 10 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Pankhurst began a hunger and thirst strike immediately following her arrest.

Mrs. Pankhurst was driven to an hotel. She appeared very weak and immediately retired to bed. She was in charge of a nurse. Mrs. Pankhurst is liberated on seven days' license. She intends to proceed to London at the earliest possible moment.

Not anticipating the early release of their leader, suffragettes gathered last night at the Empress Theatre, Earlscourt, to protest against the imprisonment of Mrs. Pankhurst. The house was only three-quarters filled, and "Gen." Mrs. Flora Drummond, who presided, explained the empty seats by accusing the postoffice of tampering with letters containing invitation tickets. In denouncing the Government, she exclaimed: "Here and now we swear that never again will the Goverament get Mrs. Pankhurst. We shall organize a body guard which will even face battleships."

A resolution demanding the instant release of Mrs. Pankhurst was carried with enthusiasm, but as the meeting was dispersing the news of her liberation was announced and was greeted with prolonged cheers.

Dropped From Third Storey.

GUELPH, Dec. 8.—A young lad, brought from a neighboring township, on Friday and placed in the children's shelter, dropped from a third storey window at that institution yesterday morning, in an attempt to escape from confinement. He was picked up in a semi-conscious condition and removed to the hospital.

Lad Fatally Kicked.

SARNIA, Dec. 8.—A fatality occurred Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neal MacArthur, London road, Sarnia Township, by which their son Bruce met with almost instant death, by being kicked by a horse which he was leading to the watering trough.

CANADIANS SLAIN

Two Toronto Men Killed by Striking Copper Miners

WERE ASLEEP IN BEDS

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 8.—The most vicious crime of the campaign of outlawry which has accompanied the strike of the Western Federation of Miners was perpetrated at Painesville, near here, at four o'clock yesterday morning, when two Canadians, Arthur James, aged 29, and his brother, Harry James, aged 24, were shot dead by a mob of unknown strikers as they lay asleep in bed in their boarding-house. In the fusillade which killed the James boys a third mine employe was fatally wounded, and an eight-year-old girl was shot through the shoulder.

The two James brothers arrived here Saturday morning, having come here from Toronto, and in the afternoon, in company with several other new men, they were sent to Painesville, where the mines of the Copper Range Consolidated Co. are located. The men were quartered in a double boarding-house on Baltic street, conducted by Thomas Daly. About four o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Daly, who was sitting up awaiting the arrival of a party expected on a late train, heard a bullet whiz by her head and bury itself in a partition a short distance away. Then, as though the first shot was a signal, there followed immediately a fierce fusillade of shots from just outside the house.

The bullets went in all directions as is evidenced by the fact that the two James boys, who were sleeping in a room in the third storey of the house, were both instantly killed. Thomas Daly, proprietor of the boarding house, who lay asleep in his room on the second floor, was shot through the lungs and died last night.

Immediately following the shooting, the house was surrounded by a score of deputies, but when they arrived there was no sign of the murderers, who are thought to have been strikers. A search of the woods in the vicinity revealed nothing, and the deputies were rushed in all directions in hope of heading off the fugitives.

The examination of the Daly House shows that at least five different kinds of rifle bullets were used.

Yesterday morning's shooting was the climax of a long series of lesser crimes which have been perpetrated by strikers in an effort to check the Copper Range Co.'s attempts to restore normal conditions.

Six Months For Theft.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 8.—Colin Corcoran, the Jasper farmer jointly accused with his employe, D. Petrie, of the theft of 120 hens from a neighbor, was discharged after a hearing before Judge Reynolds. Petrie, who previously pleaded guilty, was called as a witness and exonerated Corcoran from any part in the theft. Petrie was sentenced to serve six months in the Central Prison.

No Trace of Desperado.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 8. — Although three days have elapsed since the Bank of Montreal at Plum Coulee was robbed and Manager Arnold killed, the desperadoes who perpetrated the crime have not yet been apprehended. The belief still persists that the men are hiding in Winnipeg or vicinity, and the search for Jack Krafcenko, suspected by the police, is kept up.

Negro Boy Arrested.

HALIFAX, Dec. 8.—George Ash, colored, 17 years of age, was committed for trial Saturday on a charge of murder. The victim was John Ruddick, another colored boy, who was shot on Nov. 15. It was claimed at the time that the shooting was accidental, but since then, it is said, incriminating evidence has been gathered against Ash.

Aimed at Wagon, Hit Horse.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 8.—One of a party of four boys, on a shooting expedition just outside the corporation limits, took a pop at a passing delivery wagon with a 32-calibre rifle. He aimed at the tailboard but the bullet went wide of the mark and lodged in the leg of the horse, which is thought to be permanently injured.

CARDINAL OREGLIA DEAD.

Dean of Sacred College at Rome Was 84 Years Old.

ROME, Dec. 8.—Cardinal Luigi Oreglia, dean of the Sacred College, died here Friday of pneumonia. He was 85 years old and was the only surviving cardinal created by Pope Pius IX.

Luigi Oreglia Di Santo Stefano was head of the cardinal bishops or dean of Sacred College. He was born at Bene Vagienna, diocese of Mondovi, on July 9, 1828. He was created and proclaimed a cardinal by Pope Pius

CARDINAL LUIGI OREGLIA.

IX. on Dec. 22, 1873. He was bishop of Ostia and Velletri, arch chancellor of the Roman University and prefect of the congregation of ceremonies.

The pope was deeply grieved when told Saturday morning that Cardinal Luigi Oreglia Di Santo Stefano Aloysius had passed away. Although the aged cardinal's death had been expected, the Pope sustained a shock when Monsignor Giovanni Bressan informed him as cautiously as possible of the occurrence.

BOW PARK HAS FIRE.

Big Farm Is Visited With Loss of About $40,000.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 8. — Thirty-three horses and six head of cattle perished in a disastrous fire believed to be of incendiary origin, at Bow Park farm, early Saturday morning. The fire makes the second of its kind suffered by the management within a few months.

Besides the horses and cattle valuable seeding and farm machinery, as well as hay and stock, was destroyed, and the total loss, it is estimated, will be around $40,000.

The big building, which was the scene of the blaze, consisted of the main stables of the farm. It was of brick construction with slate roof and had been standing for some years. The other buildings about were new, having just been completed, following the bad fire last spring.

An investigation has been launched, the services of County Constable Kerr being called in.

HORSE LEAPS INTO AUTO.

Runaway Animal Strikes Thomas Reid Killing Him.

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 8.—Thos. Reid, aged about 45 years, who resided on the Caledonia road in the vicinity of Marshall's lime kiln, met almost instant death late Saturday night. Reid was riding homeward in the tonneau of an automobile being driven by Harley Wilson, of Ryckman's Corners. At a spot about half a mile south of the mountain brow on the Caledonia road, a rig, driven by Arthur Bedell, 113 Young street, who, it is alleged, was racing another rig in charge of Willis Mulholland, 30 North Caroline street, collided with the machine. The frightened animal plunged forward and landed partly in the tonneau of the auto with its fore feet striking Reid full on the head and chest. The victim was rushed to the city hospital, but long before that institution was reached he died.

PELL IS A PAINT

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Many spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

FORMS A CABINET.

Gaston Doumergue, Socialist, May Be Premier of France.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Although Senator Gaston Doumergue, the Socialist leader, has deferred until to-day notifying President Poincare that he will take the responsibility of forming a Ministry, it is believed that he will accept the task imposed upon him. He arranged a provisional Cabinet yesterday afternoon, which included for Minister of Foreign Affairs either Alexandre Felix Ribot, Jean Dupuy or Theophile Delcasse. This proved a stumbling block, as neither M. Ribot nor M. Dupuy would accept the office and it is generally thought that M. Delcasso, who is now in St. Petersburg as ambassador to Russia, will also refuse, in view of the effect his nomination would likely have on opinion abroad, notably in Germany. It is, therefore, considered probable that M. Doumergue will eventually take the Foreign Office himself, following the example of M. Poincare when he was Premier.

Other members of M. Doumergue's provisional Cabinet include Gen. Dubail as Minister of War, with Gen. Barrail as chief of staff; navy, M. Noulens, now Under Secretary of War; Instruction, M. Viviani; Finance, Joseph Caillaux; Commerce, Fernand David; Agriculture, Louis Malvy or Maurice Raymond; Colonies, M. Lebrun; Public Works, M. L'Hopiteau; Labor, Rene Renault.

Moderate opinion, while it would have preferred M. Ribot, M. Dupuy, or some other statesman less committed to advanced views, considers M. Doumergue reasonably safe as Premier. There is apprehension among the Conservatives that M. Doumergue, when in doubt, will accept the counsel of M. Caillaux, the Radical leader, or ex-Premier Clemenceau. The public, especially that portion of it identified with finances, will be relieved if the political crisis can be settled to-day.

Russian Aviator Drowned.

LIBAU, Russia, Dec. 8.—Lieut. Washmuth, while making an overseas flight yesterday in a hydro-aeroplane, fell from a considerable height and was drowned.

Low Spirits From Weak Nerves

Low spirits, depression, discouragement are a form of nervous disease. You worry over little things, and at the slightest ailment apprehend the gravest dangers and diseases. You form the habit of looking at the dark side of things.

Indigestion is a frequent accompaniment, and you probably do not sleep or rest well. The cause of the trouble is to be found in the exhausted condition of the nerves. To get well you must build up the feeble, wasted nerve cells by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure forms new, rich blood, and thereby nourishes the nervous system back to health and vigour. There is nothing like new nerve force to bring back hope and confidence to the weak and discouraged. This treatment works in natural ways to restore health, and, therefore, cannot fail to prove of benefit to you. Put it to the test and you will be surprised with the building-up influence that will result.

British Postal Employees Will Take a Strike Vote

NEARLY 100,000 INVOLVED

LEICESTER, Eng., Dec. 8. — The threatened strike at Christmas of the Government's postal and telegraph employes, numbering nearly 100,000 men, probably will be averted, but the movement will be only postponed, as a result of the action of a conference in which are participating 200 delegates representing 22,000 members of the various postal organizations who met here yesterday.

The delegates adopted a resolution rejecting the report of the Government commission recommending a slight increase in the salaries of the employes. At the same time they pledged themselves to push their original demand for a 15 per cent. increase of wages throughout the service.

The strike proposed was debated at length and the meeting finally decided to leave the decision to a general vote of the members of the organizations.

A proposal that the postal organizations should unite with the miners' and railwaymen's and the transport workers' unions was discussed and met with much favor among the delegates. The conference decided to oppose the Government candidates at all Parliamentary elections until the demands of the postal employes are acceded to and the delegates decided to select four candidates to contest several constituencies on the platform of improving the conditions under which the postal employes work.

"We are very near a parting of the ways," said Mr. McCarthy, the chairman, in opening the conference. "I hope sincerely the Government will not persist in forcing our hands. We are going forward unflinchingly to our goal. I ask you to weigh well your words and your decisions and when the time comes to translate those words and those decisions into action, and to act with swiftness, determination and courage.

There has been much agitation among the postal employes for a general strike at Christmas time, while the postal work is heaviest and most important, but yesterday's action of the conference makes necessary a general vote of the employes on the strike question and it is doubtful whether a strike can be organized in time to become effective by Christmas time.

The postal employ a base their demands for an increase of pay largely on the argument that the postal service yields to the Government great profits in which the workers should have a larger share.

The Postmaster-General, Herbert Samuel, in his last interview with the leaders of the postal employes organization, threatened that if there was a strike all the employes who quit their work would be permanently discharged, but the men hope to be able to make a political issue of their demands and to gain the support of the large trades unions.

The Government is making tentative arrangements to enlist the services of military telegraphers to take the place of strikers in case of need as the French Government did during the great railroad strike in that country in October, 1910.

The postal employes unions are fifteen in number, and have a membership of about 97,000. They comprise employes of the postal, telegraphic and telephonic services all of which are controlled by the Government.

ATTACKED IN JAIL.

Prisoner Assailed and Sulphuric Acid Thrown at Him.

KERROBERT, Sask., Dec. 8.—Friday the local jail was broken into by two men and a prisoner named Pettit, who was recently brought back from Toronto, was attacked, and a mixture of sulphuric acid and other corrosives thrown on him. He was left unconscious, but revived later and made his way to a Mounted Police detachment. He is now in the hospital suffering from burns and concussion of the brain. The mounted police have taken up the chase.

Pettit has had his trial postponed. It is believed that some of the men implicated in the death of several horses at Lumsland attacked Pettit, fearing disclosures against them.

First Seizure of Arms.

BELFAST, Ireland, Dec. 8.—The greatest excitement has been created among the rank and file of the Ulster Unionists by the royal proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms and ammunitio into Ireland.

The customs authorities made their first seizure under the terms of the proclamation Saturday morning, when they detained 39 cases of ammunition and eight cases of rifles and bayonets.

To Enlist "Movers."

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 8.—In a final effort to find her husband, Cecil F. Lavell, the Columbus, Ohio, college professor who disappeared from here a couple of weeks ago after going for a row on the bay, Mrs. Lavell, his wife, who is at present in Toronto, will try and have her husband's picture flashed on the curtain in every motion picture house in the country.

COWAN CONCLUDES.

Sums Up Argument for Reduction of Western Rates.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—If the east is entitled to low freight rates because of water competition, then the west is entitled to the same privilege because of the natural advantages, was the synopsis of the argument advanced by M. K. Cowan, K.C., before the Railway Commission at the western freight rates case on Saturday.

The natural advantages of the west, explained Mr. Cowan, who is counsel for Saskatchewan and Alberta, are no grades, no curves, and several other features not found in the east, and all rates according to the minimum cost of operation of a railway. Contrary to common belief, water transportation only benefits those places in the east touched by the water, and not the entire section of the east, declared Mr. Cowan.

He contended that the same rates should prevail from Fort William west as prevail between Fort William and points in the east.

The rates between the distributing centres in the three prairie provinces, he said, should be on the same basis as the rates from Fort William.

It looks as if the famous case will not be concluded before Thursday or Friday, as only three of the eight counsel to be heard in argument have presented their views. Isaac Pitblado, K.C., representing the Winnipeg Board of Trade, will have the floor. He will be followed by L. G. McPhillips, K.C., for British Columbia.

The argument in defence of the railways will be opened by F. H. Chrysler for the C.P.R., who will be followed by Hon. F. H. Phippen, K.C., for the C.N.R., and Eugene Lafleur, K.C., for the G.T.P.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES.

Effort To Settle Dublin Transport Strike Is a Failure.

DUBLIN, Dec. 8.—The attempt to reach a settlement of the Dublin strike, which has been in progress for fifteen weeks, has failed. A conference, composed of employes and employers, assisted by labor leaders from Britain, sat for twenty hours thrashing out every point, but broke down yesterday on the workers' demand for complete reinstatement of the strikers. This the executive of the employers would not concede.

The result of the conference is a great surprise and disappointment, as the prolonged discussion gave hope that the disastrous strike, which had caused the eviction of hundreds from their homes, was nearly an end.

The employers had offered to reinstate 80 per cent. of the strikers.

Hit By a Bullet.

TORONTO, Dec. 8.—While handling a loaded 32-calibre revolver at his home at 211 Wallace avenue yesterday afternoon, Samuel Taylor, aged 21, accidentally discharged the weapon, the bullet entering his left shoulder and travelling upwards, coming out at the left side of his neck.

He was attended by Dr. Morgan, 317 Lansdowne avenue, and taken to the Western Hospital in the doctor's motor car, where he is reported to be in a bad condition.

"Arson" Operator Convicted.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The seventh conviction in the "arson ring" trials here was obtained Saturday when Joseph Clarke, a fire insurance adjuster, was convicted of burning to defraud. Clarke was found guilty of hiring John Danles, a confessed incendiary, to set fire to a business building here.

"I suppose you try to make your home so attractive to your husband that he will wish to spend all his spare moments in it."

"Yes. I keep matches and cigars where he may always find them handy; there isn't a tidy or a sofa pillow or anything of that kind in his room, and I allow him to have portraits of his father and mother hung in places that are just as good as those which are devoted to the pictures of my own parents."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

'Circumstances justify it in this case," I replied, admiring the consideration of my hostess, but not thinking it worth while to emulate it. And with very little ceremony I pushed open the door and entered the room of the so-called Ruth Oliver.

The hush and quiet which met me, though nothing more than I had reason to expect, gave me my first shock, and the young figure outstretched on a bed of dainty whiteness, my second. Everything about me was so peaceful, and the delicate blue and white of the room so expressive of innocence and repose, that my feet instinctively moved more softly over the polished floor and paused, when they did pause, before that dimly-shrouded bed, with something like hesitation in their usually emphatic tread.

The face of that bed's occupant, which I could now plainly see, may have had an influence in producing this effect. It was so rounded with health, and yet so haggard with trouble. Not knowing whether Miss Althorpe was behind me or not, but too intent upon the sleeping girl to care, I bent over the half-averted features and studied them carefully.

They were indeed Madonna-like, something which I had not expected, notwithstanding the assurances I had received to that effect, and while distorted with suffering, amply accounted for the interest shown in her by the good-hearted Mrs. Desberger and the cultured Miss Althorpe.

Resenting this beauty, which so poorly accommodated itself to the character of the woman who possessed it, I leaned nearer, searching for some defect in her loveliness, when I saw that the struggle and anguish visible in her expression were due to some dream she was having.

Moved, even against my will, by the touching sight of her trembling eyelids and working mouth, I was about to wake her when I was stopped by the gentle touch of Miss Althorpe on my shoulder.

"Is she the girl you are looking for?"

I gave one quick glance around the room, and my eyes lighted on the little pin-cushion on the satin-wood bureau.

"Did you put those pins there?" I asked, pointing to a dozen or more black pins grouped in one corner.

"I did not, no; and I doubt if Crescenze did. Why?"

I drew a small black pin from my belt where I had securely fastened it, and carrying it over to the cushion, compared it with those I saw. They were identical

"A small matter," I inwardly decided, "but it points in the right direction';' then, in answer to Miss Althorpe, added aloud: "I fear she is. At least I have seen no reason yet for doubting it. But I must make sure. Will you allow me to wake her?"

"O it seems cruel! She is suffering enough already. See how she twists and turns!"

"It will be a mercy, it seems to me, to rouse her from dreams so full of pain and trouble."

Perhaps, but I will leave you alone to do it. What will you say to her? How account for your intrusion?"

"O I will find means, and they won't be too cruel either. You had better stand back by the bureau and listen. I think I had rather not have the responsibility of doing this thing alone."

Miss Althorpe, not understanding my hesitation, and only half comprehending my errand, gave me a doubtful look, but retreated to the spot I had mentioned and whether it was the rustle of her silk dress or whether the dream of the girl we were watching had reached its climax, a momentary stir took place in the outstretched form before me, and next moment she was flinging up her hands with a cry.

"O how can I touch her! She is dead, and I have never touched a dead body."

I fell back breathing hard, and Miss Althorpe's eyes, meeting mine, grew dark with horror. Indeed she was about to utter a cry herself, but I made an imperative motion, and she merely shrank farther away towards the door.

Meantime I had bent forward and laid my hand on the trembling figure before me.

Miss Oliver," I said, "rouse yourself, I pray. I have a message for you from Mrs. Desberger."

She turned her head, looked at me like a person in a daze, then slowly moved and sat up.

"Who are you?" she asked, surveying me and the space about her with eyes which seemed to take in nothing till they lit upon Miss Althorpe's figure standing in an attitude of mingled shame and sympathy by the half-open door.

"Oh, Miss Althorpe!" she entreated, "I pray you to excuse m. I did not know you wanted me. I have been asleep."

"It is this lady who wants you," answered Miss Althorpe. "She is a friend of mine and one in whom you can confide."

"Confide!" This was a word to rouse her. She turned livid, and in her eyes as sh looked my way both terror and surprise were visible. "Why should you think I had anything to confide? If I had, I should not pass by you, Miss Althorpe, for another."

There were tears in her voice and I had to remember the victim just laid away in Woodlawn, not to bestow much more compassion on this woman than she rightfully deserved. She had a magnetic voice and a magnetic presence, but that was no reason why I should forget what she had done.

"No one asks for your confidence," I protested, "though it might not hurt you to accept a friend whenever you can get one. I merly wish, as said bfore, to give you a message from Mrs. Desberger, under whose roof you stayed before coming here."

"I am obliged to you,' she responded, rising to her feet, and trembling very much. "Mrs. Desberger is a kind woman; what does she want of me?"

So I was on the right track; she acknowledged Mrs. Desberger.

"Nothing but to return you this. It fell out of your pocket while you were dressing." And I handed her the little red pin-cushion I had taken from the Van Burnams' front room.

She looked at it, shrunk violently back, and with difficulty prevented herself from showing the full depth of her feelings.

"I don't know anything about it. It is not mine. I don't know it." And her hair stirred on her forehead as she gazed at the small object lying in the palm of my hand, proving to me what saw again before her all the horrors of the house from which it had been taken.

"Who are you?" she suddenly demanded, tearing her eyes from this simple little cushion and fixing them wildly on my face. "Mrs. Desberger never sent me this. I—"

"You are right to stop there." I interposed, and theh paused, feeling that I had forced a situation which I hardly knew how to handle.

The instant's pause she had given herself seemed to restore her self-possession. Leaving me, she moved towards Miss Althorpe.

"I don't know who this lady is,' said she, "or what her errand here with me may mean. But I hope that it is nothing that will force me to leave this house which is my only refuge."

Miss Althorpe, too greatly prejudiced in favour of this girl to hear this appeal unmoved, notwithstanding the show of guilt with which she had met my attack, smiled faintly as she answered:

"Nothing short of the best reasons would make me part from you now. If there are such reasons, you will spare me the pain of making use of them. I think I can so far trust you, Miss Oliver."

No answer; the young girl looked as if she could not speak.

"Are there any reasons why I should not retain you in my house, Miss Oliver?" the gentle mistress of many millions went on. "If there are, you will not wish to stay, I know, when you consider how near my marriage day is, and how undisturbed my mind should be by any cares attending the wedding."

And still the girl was silent, though her lips moved slightly as if she would have spoken if she could.

"But perhaps you are only unfortunate," suggested Miss Althorpe, with an almost angelic look of pity—I don't often see angels in women, "If that is so, God forbid that you should leave my protection or my house. What do you say, Miss Oliver?"

"That you are God's messenger to me," burst from the other, as if her tongue had been suddenly loosed. "That misfortune, and not wickedness, has driven me to your doors; and that there is no reason why I should leave you unless my secret sufferings make my presence unwelcome to you."

Was this the talk of a frivolous woman caught unawares in the meshes of a fearful crime? If so, she was a more accomplished actress than we had been led to expect even from her own words to her disgusted husband.

"You look like one accustomed to tell the truth," proceeded Miss Althorpe, "Do you think you have made some mistake, Miss Butterworth?" she asked, approaching me with an ingenuous smile.

I had forgotten to caution her not to make us of my name, and when it fell from her lips I looked to see her unhappy companion recoil from me with a scream. But strange to say she evinced no emotion, and seeing this, I became more distrustful of her than ever; for, for her to hear without apparent interest the name of the chief witness in the inquest which had been held over the remains of the woman with whose death she had been more or less intimately concerned, argued powers of duplicity such as are only associated with guilt or an extreme simplicity of character. And she was not simple as the least glance from her deep eyes amply showed.

Recognising, therefore, that open measures would not do with this woman, I changed my manner at once, and responding to Miss Althorpe, with a gracious smile, remarked with an air of sudden conviction:

"Perhaps I have made some mistake. Miss Oliver's words sound very ingenuous, and I am disposed, if you are, to take her at her word. It is so easy to draw false conclusions in this world." And I put back the pin-cushion into my pocket with an air of being through with the matter, which seemed to impose upon the young woman, for she smiled faintly, showing a row of splendid teeth as she did so.

"Let me apologize," I went on, "if I have intruded upon Miss Oliver against her wishes." And with one comprehensive look about the room which took in all that was visible of her simple wardrobe and humble belongings, I led the way out. Miss Althorpe immediately followed.

Suffered Intense Agony With His Back.

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak aching back, and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic in The World.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

Comb Sage Tea In Hair To Darken It

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Thick

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening grey, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

Mecca's Polluted Well.

A scientific analysis has been made of the Zem-Zem water from the sacred well at Mecca, which, according to the Arabs, is the well that the angel showed to Hagar and whose water saved the life of Ishmael. After reading the results of the analysis one cannot wonder that pilgrims who drink the water frequently are attacked by cholera. The specimen examined contained sixty-nine grains of chlorine to the gallon. Water which contains so little as nine grains of chlorine to the gallon is ordinarily regarded as scarcely fit for human consumption. Moreover, in the case of the Zem-Zem well it is believed the chlorine originates from the custom of pouring the water over the pilgrims and allowing it to run back into the well. The sacred water was found to possess an extraordinary degree of "hardness," three times as great as that of average water. It also held twenty times as much ammonia compounds as drinking water should contain.

A Touch of Human Nature.

The doors which open from the sidewalk into the lobby of a big building are heavy ones and are very hard to open. Yesterday a little hunchback stepped out of an elevator on the first floor, followed by a great big man. The hunchback reached the doors first and threw himself against one. Although he pushed with all his might, he couldn't open it. Chagrined, he stepped back, and the big man stepped up. Noticing the look of humiliation on the face of the little fellow, the big man said:

"I've got a sore wrist. Come on; let's see if we both can't open it."

The hunchback and the big man both pushed on the door, and of course it opened. The two went out smiling.

The big man had no sore wrist at all. Two or three people looking on felt like cheering for him.—New York Telegraph.

How to Walk.

There is no virtue in a dawdling saunter. The slow and languid dragging of one foot after the other which some people call walking would tire an athlete. It utterly exhausts a weak person, and that is the reason why many delicate persons think they cannot walk. To derive any benefit from the exercise it is necessary to walk with a light, elastic step which swings the weight of the body so easily from one leg to the other that its weight is not felt and which produces a healthy glow, showing that the sluggish blood is stirred to action in the most remote veins.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG.
CANADIAN PACIFIC

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has ben so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, October 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arirving Winnipeg at 8.25 a.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment; Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continues to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

CONSUMPTION AND THE GOSPEL

Ravages of Disease Part of the Penalty of Sin.

RELIGION AND WHITE PLAGUE

Pastor Russell Calls Attention to Sin's Relationship to Sickness and Death—"The Wages of Sin Is Death"—Man's Battle Against the Curse a Losing One—"In God Is Thy Help"—God Is For Us—The Result Will Be Glorious.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

New York, Dec. 7.—Pastor Russell, speaking from the platform of the new City Temple to a crowded house, announced his text from Leviticus 26:16: "I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning plague, that which consumeth (before) the eyes, and causeth sorrow of heart." His topic was chosen in harmony with the general movement against consumption, the white plague, which he declared is annually sweeping more millions to the grave than are all the wars of all the world.

True, the Pastor's Divine commission is to preach the Gospel. Nevertheless, since the Gospel is the Good Message of the Divinely arranged recovery from sin and death, he considered it eminently proper to call attention to the ravages of the white plague as a part of the penalty of sin. He would not in this be understood as meaning that all consumptives are especially sinners. Some of the most saintly of God's people have died of consumption and other ailments. The Redeemer is credited with having died of a ruptured heart, a disease not unknown to medical practitioners.

The speaker declared that much confusion prevails amongst Christian people respecting sickness and health. It seems only logical for us to reason that God wishes His creatures to be healthy and happy always, especially such as seek to live in harmony with Him. True, we have received the Bible instruction that sickness is a part of death; that death is the Divine curse, or sentence, or penalty, for sin; that sin entered the world through the disobedience of our first parents; and that all mankind therefore are under the curse, or sentence of death, of which sickness is merely a forerunner—the dying process.

Still it seems natural for us to think that after we turn from sin and consecrate our lives to God, He would relieve us of the penalties of sin and restore us fully to His original favor—to human perfection and to everlasting life and to happy conditions. When we find that some of the best of God's people, including the Saviour, the Apostles and the Prophets, have suffered, even unto death, and that none are immune from this penalty, a perplexity takes possession of our minds which only the Bible sets straight.

God first announced to Abraham His ultimate purpose of blessing the world—releasing them from the curse of sin and death. He did not explain how this would be done, except that it would be accomplished by Abraham's posterity, or Seed. Four hundred and thirty years later God proposed to the Israelites that if they wished to inherit the Promise made to Abraham, the door was open to them. God entered into a Covenant with them at Mount Sinai, through Moses, the mediator. In that Covenant God agreed to certain things, and Israel to other things. Israel agreed to keep the Divine Law perfectly; and God agreed that if they would do so, He would bless them with everlasting life, and open the way by which they might be the saviors of the world, to help all out from under the curse and back to the favor of God.

But Israel failed to keep the Divine requirements perfectly, as God foreknew they would. Hence they never gained everlasting life for themselves, but died like other men. Hence, also, they were not able to be the world's uplifters from sin and death. Later, God explained to them that a greater than Moses would come; namely, Messiah, who would, so help, strengthen and uplift from sin and death a select Seed of Abraham that such, with Him, would be qualified to constitute the Kingdom of God—the ruling power which God would use in putting down sin and Satan, ignorance and wrong, and in lifting up mankind under the Law Covenant renewed.

Our text is a part of God's message to Israel, in which He assured them that if they would keep the Law they should have all the blessings of His favor in their earthly lives; but if they were disobedient, various sicknesses would come upon them as chastisements. As for the other nations of the world, they were not in covenant relationship with God, and were subject to the mutations of their dying condition.

Only with the Israelites was consumption specially stated to be the penalty for sin, and only the Israelites were promised immunity from these sicknesses on condition that they would live in obedience to the Divine Law. God never had any such arrangement with any other people. They are all sinners, all under sentence of death, all dying, justly, regardless of whether it be a more gradual wearing out, or instantaneous death—whether it be by hunger, accident, white plague, black plague, or other ailment.

But should not the followers of Christ expect exemption? some inquire. We answer, No! Quite to the contrary, these enter into a special Covenant of Sacrifice—surrendering or resigning all their claims to an earthly life, earthly hopes, earthly joys, in exchange for the Heavenly ones which God has promised to all the followers of Jesus. Only those who suffer with Him will reign with Him. Only those who die with Him to the earthly nature, etc., will live with Him on the Heavenly plane, and be kings and priests and joint-heirs with Christ in the Heavenly Kingdom which is to bless the world and restore it to human perfection.

Few seem to have noticed that Jesus neither healed Himself nor any of the Apostles. The miracles of healing were performed on outsiders, with a view to evidencing the Redeemer's teachings; and even these attesting miracles, as St. Paul pointed out, ceased after they had accomplished their work—after the Church had been established. But, we are asked, did not Jesus say in Mark 16:17, 18 that the healing power would be an evidence of discipleship throughout this Age? No, we answer. All scholars now agree that no part of the 16th chapter of Mark after the 8th verse was written by St. Mark. That the portion from the 9th verse to the end of the chapter was added long centuries after St. Mark was dead is clearly evidenced by the fact that those verses do not occur in any manuscript of earlier date than the fifth century.

The rewards of this Age, offered to the Church, are Heavenly, spiritual, to be attained fully in the resurrection change of the Church. Nevertheless, the faithful followers of Jesus enjoy certain special blessings of mind and body in their present life—such as "the peace of God, which passeth all understanding," a rest from the worrying cares common to the remainder of the world. These, indeed, bring often a measure of health to persons previously annoyed by every trying difficulty of life, but now enabled, through faith in Christ and acceptance of the Divine promises through the Holy Spirit, to take no anxious care in respect to the future, knowing that their Father careth for them and has promised that all things shall work together for their good, whether it be sickness or poverty, or what not.

The Gospel has a special Message to every one smitten with the white plague or the black plague, or any other of the hundreds of forms of death. That Message is that the present life is but transitory, a vestibule to a more glorious life, an anteroom of instruction, preparatory to entering the life which God has provided for all of our race who are willing to accept it on His terms through the merit of Christ's sacrifice.

The broad Message of the Gospel, while it has only one offer in the present time, assures us of a future opportunity for all. Those who now accept the grace of God have the great privilege of becoming members of the Church of Glory. Others have the assurance that there will be a resurrection, not only of the just, but also of the unjust; and that this signifies an opportunity of rising up out of sin and death conditions to human perfection. But even to attain that blessing would mean to attain an earthly instead of a Heavenly inheritance.

Moreover, that blessed opportunity of attaining eternal life and earthly perfection will not mean an escape from the penalty of wilful sins of the present life. It is a part of the Divine Law that whoever sins shall suffer; and that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." But those who have known the Master's will, and failed to do it, will receive more and severer "stripes," more punishments, than others who have not known His will, and have done equally evil things—the heathen, for instance.—Luke 12:47, 48.

The light of the Millennial Morning, gradually breaking through the darkness, ignorance and superstition of the past, is showing us more particularly what disease is and how it should be combated. And although we cannot hope to accomplish great results, it is our duty to do our best in opposing the reign of Sin and Death—to do all in our power to stamp them out. All the diseases of our bodies are aggravated by sin and more or less relieved by proper living, proper thinking, and a mind and heart resting in faith upon the Redeemer, and His glorious provision for our future.

We are learning, too, that as the sunlight of Truth is good for our minds and morals, so the natural sunlight is good for our bodies. It is an important factor in the healing of all diseases. As the Word of God is the pure Food which builds us up spiritually and makes us strong in the Lord, so pure foods, nourishing foods, are necessary for our physical bodies—the more so if they are afflicted with the white plague—consumption. In a word, cleanliness, pure air, and pure nourishing food, are the most prominent factors for the relief of sufferers from this plague. These may be supplemented by a tablespoonful of pure glycerine, three times a day, and by a biochemical salt, calcaria phos.

All should know that this dreadful disease, which literally burns up the vitality of the patient, is highly contagious through the excrement. All discharges contain the elements of disease liable to spread the contagion. Discharges from the head should preferably be on paper, which should be burned in the fire before becoming dry. When dry, the dust carries the infection to whoever may breathe it.

This also reminds us that sin is like disease. It is contagious. Every sinner, therefore, who realizes his condition, will strive against contaminating others. Indeed, who does not know that the impression made by words may do far more harm in the hearts and minds of others than all the deadly diseases we could imagine? Oh, how careful we should be that evil coming into our minds should be put away, that we do not spread the contagion of moral sin, even as we should be careful to avoid spreading the contagious physical ailments; and thus will our influence for evil be minimized!

Under the Mosaic Law, leprosy seems to be indicated as a special type of sin. When in India nearly two years ago, I was invited to the Leper Hospital to address the poor inmates. I tried to tell them of the love of God and the glorious provision made for all mankind through the death of Jesus, not only for the healing of leprosy and all diseases, but for the healing and overthrow of sin; and that all this is near at hand, to be brought to mankind by Messiah's Kingdom. But alas, poor creatures! I could see that although they understood the words of the interpreter they had no hearing ears or seeing eyes of the heart.

The Apostle's words came to mind: "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." Oh, yes, I said, it is only he that hath an ear that can hear; only he that hath an eye that can see! Where Satan's work has been so fully accomplished, and men are blinded by ignorance and superstition, the Gospel Message can do nothing. We must wait for the Kingdom power. We wait in full assurance of faith, knowing that He who hath given His Son gave Him not in vain, noting also that the Son, "who gave His life a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time," will yet "see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied."—1 Timothy 2:6; Isaiah 53:11.

Oh, what a blessing is knowledge in association with faith in God! How differently we can look upon all the dreadful evils which afflict the world, mentally, morally, physically, than before our eyes were opened! What manner of persons ought we to be in "showing forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light!" How generous and sympathetic we should be to all who are in any trouble, physical or moral or mental! We should be like unto our Father in Heaven, who is kind to the unthankful, and sends His sunshine and rain upon the evil and the good. How we should prepare ourselves at any and every cost that we might be accounted worthy of a share with our Redeemer in His excellent glory! —Romans 8:17, 18.

Another dreadful disease, often considered incurable and therefore like sin, is cancer. Consumption (tuberculosis) is a disease of the blood, which afflicts more or less every part of the body. Cancer, on the contrary, appears to be a fungus growth which feeds upon the human tissue, and propagates itself at the expense of those parts of the body which it attacks. This more particularly corresponds to the vices which attach themselves to humanity, and are destructive to our usefulness in respect to those parts of our character which are especially afflicted.

Only a most radical treatment seems to affect the cancer. Ordinarily, it is claimed, only the surgeon's knife, pursuing every root and branch of the cancer, will arrest its growth. And often this is ineffectual. So in the treatment of vice. If we

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets Quickly Put Disordered Stomachs Right

It's a revelation to the chronic dyspeptic to feel no discomfort after a hearty meal, when that meal is followed by one Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet. He is hardly prepared for the almost magic relief which the tablet gives him from the various discomforts to which he is accustomed after eating.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets sweeten stomachs that are sour—relieve stomachs that feel as if a stone had been swallowed—stop heartburn—and give the needed assistance to stomachs that are weakened.

Containing in themselves the active principle needed for digesting every kind of food, Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets enable even the weakest stomachs to get the good out of what is eaten, preventing the accumulation of undigested food and gas. With a little help for a while, the digestive organs recover their strength, do their work properly, and your troubles are over.

and that it has an added appeal to personally, or to our city or village drastic measures are the only ones which will give relief.

In the interests of many who are suffering from cancer, let me here mention that quite recently I came into possession of a cancer cure. It can be used only for cancers upon the surface of the body, and not for those which fasten themselves upon the internal organs. It is highly recommended by many who have used it. We are informed that the recipe was sold on one occasion to a physician for a thousand dollars, after he had seen the good results. We are informed that he has erected a sanatorium for the treatment of cancer and is meeting with success.

The death of the doctor who discovered the remedy brought it into the hands of a relative. That relative gave it freely to me, and I am offering it free to all who desire it. I would publish the recipe, but experience teaches me that more will likely be benefited by it if obliged to writ for it. Any reader of this sermon is welcome to the recipe, and he can purchase the ingredients of his own druggist for a dime. I may be addressed either at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, Brooklyn, New York, or at the London Tabernacle.

While urging all to help themselves and each other in the fight against the ailments of the flesh, the dying conditions of the present time, I still more particularly urge that we all fight sin and assist one another in finding the remedy which God has provided in Christ. "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." But we can have access to the blood only by faith now, and by becoming footstep followers of the Redeemer, counting the present life and interests as loss and dross in comparison with the glory, honor and immortality promised to the faithful beyond the veil.

Warm Covering.

Private Jones was relating his experiences of the Boer war. He said he was once taken prisoner, and the Boers stripped him of all his clothing.

"Did you feel the cold much?" asked a pal.

"No," replied Jones, "not at all. You see, they carefully covered me with their rifles."

Mr. Birrell's anticipation that, owing to the bigness of heaven, it will not be inevitable that we shall knock up against our acquaintances there may have been suggested by one of Dean Ramsay's best Scottish stories. It should be mentioned that at Hawick, the scene of the anecdote, the people used to wear wooden clogs, which made a clanking noise on the pavement. As an old woman lay dying some friends said to her, "Weel, Jeeny, ye are gaun to heeven, an' gin you should see our folk ye can tell them that we're a' weel."

"Weel," said Jeeny, cautiously, "gin I should see them I'll tell them, but you manna expect that I am to gang clank-clanking through heeven looking for your folk."—London Tatler.

Herbert Spencer and the Sea.

To illustrate the advantages the modern child enjoys in seeing so much more of the world than children of earlier generations did, Herbert Spencer mentions that he had never seen the sea until after he was twenty-one. This is the more remarkable, because his father always spent his summer vacation at the seaside, rambling along the coast from one place to another. But the son never went with the father until he was a man. One result is that we have a first impression of the sea by a self studying adult. It produced in him "a mixture of joy and awe—the awe resulting from the manifestation of size and power and the joy from the sense of freedom given by limitless expanse."

ON THE BRINK OF NIAGARA.

Three Hours of Peril, but He Still Clutched His Knife.

On the afternoon of June 1 1872, an old painter named William McCullough while painting the bridge above Niagara falls between the first and second Sister islands fell into the rapids. Instantly he was swept furiously toward the cataract, but whirled into lesser waves, so that he struck against and seized a rock not far above the brink.

Hundreds quickly gathered on the shore and watched, all eager to help, but ignorant what to do. Among them was Thomas Conroy, who secured a coil of rope, fastened one end to a tree on shore and with the other end in his hand waded out as far as he could and occasionally swam, the water being from eighteen inches to six feet deep.

He aimed far up stream to allow for the power of the current and at last with great difficulty reached the unfortunate painter and bound him to himself with the rope. They were swept off their feet several times on the way back to shore, but the rope had been firmly fastened, and they finally landed safely.

When they reached shore it was found that McCullough still clutched his putty knife firmly in his hand, having held it during the three hours he had been on the brink of the falls.

The mermaid was ill. She sat leaning against a rock, unmindful of the sand that was settling on her beautiful tail. In fact, she was too far gone to care about anything.

Later, when Father Neptune came along to inquire how she felt, she cheered up a little.

"Oh, Father Neptune," she cried "could you not slip up and ask the people on the beach if there is a doctor amongst them?"

Neptune, only too glad to be of use departed and was seen returning with a young man of professional appearance.

The young man presented his card the mermaid smiled, read it and—fainted.

Serious Harm From Noise.

Investigations made by physicians prove that there is appreciable harm from noise, and serious harm too. It is no doubt true that a normal nervous system can apparently adjust itself to all sorts of adverse circumstances. We couldn't exist otherwise. Nevertheless the inimical agents make an impression, and, like water dropping on a stone, can overcome resistance in time. These investigators have found many abnormal nervous conditions in those who have long been immersed in loud noise, utterly unaware that any harm was being done.—London Tit-Bits.

And he was.

Going at $750!

Harry: "What'll we do, fellows, now that the Wellesley seniors have voted not to marry a man who isn't making five thousand dollars a year?"

Larry: "Huh! Wait till the mark-down sales just after graduation!"

LE MINARET.

"It cert'inly is fierce, Mrs. Simmons; but if them jokers is Parus says it's the thing, we'll hev to come to it, and that's all there is to that."

Under Pressure.

"Did you tell Charley that you loved him?"

"Yes! I didn't want to, but he just squeezed it out of me!"

Unpleasant Logic.

A man with a serious disease of the throat consulted a specialist. The surgeon recommended the removal of the larynx, an operation which the patient feared might prove dangerous.

The surgeon, however, smiled reassuringly, and said:

"Oh, no! You are quite sure to recover."

"But," persisted the patient, "I understand that this sort of operation is very serious indeed."

"My reason," continued the surgeon, "for saying that you are sure to recover is this: The mortality is nineteen out of twenty, and I've had nineteen deaths already."

Remaining Distant.

"Do you think a person can be too healthy?"

"My rich uncle is."

The Boy Bolted.

A boy, who had been well worked and badly paid for two years, succeeded in getting a better job.

His last day with the old firm, he was sent out with a load of valuable china. He returned in an hour or so, and the china, instead of having been delivered, lay in the bottom of the cart, smashed into thousands of pieces.

"What does this mean?" the proprietor roared.

The boy, as he stepped out of the shafts, answered calmly:

"It means, boss, that you've worked me like a horse and treated me like a horse for two years now. So this morning I shied at a piece of paper, ran away and had a-smash-up."

So saying, the boy turned and set off, blithely whistling for his new and better job.

How They Became Friends.

A lot of able friends of ours are traveling abroad right now. There's Edmund Vance Cooke, the well-known poet; George Fitch, the well-known humorist; Irving Cobb, ditto ditto; Karl Kitchen, journalist—oh there are a lot of them! And they are sending us postcards. Fitch found a comparatively blank one and wrote a whole story on it. This is the story:

A very polite Frenchman was introduced to a very polite American. The Frenchman talked English and the American talked French, each out of compliment to the other. And finally the Frenchman said, "Monsieur, ven I fairat 'eared you spik ze Fr-rench, weez ze so gr-rand accent, weez ze so w'at you call pair-feck pronounceash'n. I t'ought yeo vare a Parisian!"

And the American replied, "Kwaw, vraymong? Oh, ay mwaw, kog je yoon gy vew poor le premiarh fwaw, jay ponxay, par voter mannyair de voos habillyay ker voos etty oon Americain!"

And they immediately became fast friends.

Too Long To Wait.

At the American Electric Railway Association's convention in Atlantic City John Morse Rogers, the Omaha statistician said:

"It is too early yet for the three-cent fare. The trolley roads stand toward the three-cent fare as old Gobsa Goldo stood toward the beautiful typewriter girl.

"It wasn't old Gobsa Goldo's age that lost him the beautiful girl's hand. Gobsa swore he would love and cherish her till death, but she shook her head. She didn't tell him he was too old, tho. No, indeed. She told him he was too young!"

Easy Mark.

Madge—I hear he's very sweet on you.

Marjorie—Rather! He's good for about two pounds of candy every week.

The Cheerful Waiter.

Gent: "Is there any soup on the bill of fare?"

Waiter: "There was, sir, but I wiped it off."

Sulzer's Epigram.

Ex-Governor Sulzer was talking in New York about a politician who had gone under.

"The poor fellow," he said, "tried to do what was right, but he was poor and the losses played on his poverty. Without prospects, without regular employment, he had a hard row to hoe."

Mr. Sulzer ended with a grim smile:

"Life is no joke when you live by your wits."

Unstudied.

Louise: "Does your husband treat you with studied indifference?"

Julia: "No, his unconcern is quite natural."

"You said you would make papa come to terms."

"I did; and they were the vilest anyone ever applied to me."

In Sumatra.

Wifey: "I see by the paper that in Sumatra a man can buy a wife for $3. Isn't that perfectly awful?"

Hubby: "Oh, I don't know! A really good wife is worth that!"

The Little Man (sarcastically to aggressive party): "I'm very sorry, madam, but I cannot read your paper unless you allow me to get at my spectacle case."

Trouble Assured.

"What are you going to call the new baby?"

"Reginald Claude," replied Mr. Bilkins.

"Isn't 'Reginald Claude' a rather affected name?"

"Yes. I want him to grow up to be a fighter, and I fancy that 'Reginald Claude' will start something every time he goes to a new school."—Washington Star.

Good Advice.

An unprepared man went to address a Sunday school. Thinking to be funny, he asked this question: "What would you do before so many bright boys and girls, who expect a speech from you, if you had nothing to say?"

"I'd keep quiet," replied a small boy.

Her Eye Was Upon Him.

A well-known writer was present recently at a dress rehearsal of a comedy played by amateurs. The rehearsal went well, but the hero, B—, seemed rather hard and cold. The novelist sat in a box next to a charming woman of middle age. She said, at the end of the third act, "It goes beautifully, doesn't it?"

"Beautifully," said the gentleman. "But B—doesn't make love to that pretty girl in as ardent a manner as I could wish. His lovemaking, in fact, strikes me as very tame and spiritless."

The woman frowned. "He won't put any more spirit in it while I've got my eye on him, let me tell you," she said. "I'm Mrs. B—."

Average Economy.

An average man, who is alternately a tightwad and a spendthrift, was traveling recently, when one of those sudden and unheralded spasms of economy seized him. He tightened his belt, about noon, and said:

"I'll pass up lunch in the diner and save about ninety cents."

He sat there in profound consciousness of his virtue for half an hour, the pangs of hunger growing all the time. He bought a ten-cent cake of chocolate from the newsy, three apples for a dime, a five-cent package of chewing gum, a cornucopia of grapes for ten cents, and when the train reached a lunch counter, twenty miles further on, he got off and inhaled two sandwiches at ten cents each, drank a cup of coffee for ten cents, ate a piece of pie for ten, and that evening he paid fifty cents for a bottle of dyspepsia tablets for his heartburn that had somehow or other attacked him that day. That is about the way the average human economy works out—about fifty per cent. loser.

How Could He Know?

"King Lear is a great character," remarked the friend.

"Yes," answered the actor; "I suppose you remember my performance last season?"

"No; I must confess I have never seen you in the part."

"Indeed!" was the rejoinder, in a tone of gentle surprise. "Then how on earth did you know it was a great character?"

His Own Weigh.

"Will you object to my weighing myself?" said a meek-looking man to his wife as they stood near a weighing machine on the platform of a railway station.

"What do you want to weigh yourself for?" she asked snarply.

"Only to see, dear, if you would allow me to have my own 'weigh' for once."

Matches and Umbrellas.

"An English judge," said Justice Martin C. Conway, at a banquet in Duluth, "recently decided that matches and umbrellas were public property, and nobdy could be prosecuted for taking either of them.

"There's a young lady typewriter in this town who wouldn't agree with that English judge.

"She was lunching at Dennett's when a man took her umbrella by mistake. She held him up sharply, and, with a smiling apology, the man returned her umbrella and walked out.

"This man, on his way home that evening, stopped at an umbrella shop and got six umbrellas, the property of various members of his family, which had been getting mended. On the car, afterward, as he sat with his six umbrellas on his lap, he noticed the young lady of Dennett's.

"When she rose to get off, the man amidst his umbrellas gave her an embarrassed look, and she said coldly, as she passed him:

"'You seem to have had a good day after all.'"

The Rebuff.

Mrs. Pankhurst, discussing with a New York reporter her reception by the government, said:

"I was, I confess, taken aback. I entered the bay with my heart glowing with the warmest sentiments, and they shipped me off to Elba Island as an undesirable.

"I felt like that young man who said, handing over a beautiful young girl passionately:

"'Miss Higginson—Arabella—there is something has been trembling on my lips for the last three months.'

"'Yes. I've noticed it in certain strong lights,' she answered. 'Why don't you shave it off?'"

Off and On.

"Save when you're young." The speaker, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was addressing a Y. M. C. A. meeting in Cleveland.

"Save when you're young," repeated Mr. Rockefeller, with a smile. "The years will pass swiftly. Then, when you find yourself well on, you'll also find yourself well off."

Scotch Condolence.

Neighbor—And how is yer guid man this mornin', Mrs. Tamson?

Mrs. Tamson—He died last nicht.

Neighbor—I'm real sorry to hear that. I'll no remember if he happened to say onything about a pot o' green paint before he slippet awa'.

A New Name for Dirt.

A Washington housewife employs a negro servant girl, who sweeps and dusts on the theory that you don't have to worry about the dirt you don't happen to see. The other day her mistress was making an inspection of a bedroom, which the girl had just cleaned up in preparation for an expected guest, who was known to be very fastidious. The woman looked under the bed and saw there a very visible deposit of fuzz and dust. Calling the girl to the spot, she pointed this deposit out to her and asked, "What do you call that, Rosaline?"

"What does I call dat?" asked the shifty maiden, in the effort to gain time. "Why, don't you all know what dat is? Dat ain' dirt. It's house moss, ma'am; yas'm—dat's jes' house moss."

Escaping Danger.

While visiting his nephew in the city, Uncle Sam Shimmerpate stopped in front of a motion-picture billboard on which were displayed pictures of lions, tigers, elephants and other African wild animals.

"Great guns, Henry," he said to his nephew, "I'm mighty glad I leave town Saturday afternoon!"

"Why are you so anxious to get away?" asked the nephew.

Pointing to the billboard, Uncle Sam read aloud the words: "To be released Saturday night."

Music As Medicine.

Someone asked Oscar Hammerstein the other day if he believed in the new therapeutic idea that music was a medicine.

"Believe in it? Of course I do," the impresario replied. "I know at least three operas that are a drug on the market while as for popular songs, there isn't one of them that doesn't make me ill."

On the Make.

Effie's Brother: 'Do you love my sister Effie?"

Effie's Steady Company: "Why, Willie, that is a queer question. Why do you want to know?"

Effie's Brother: "She said last night she would give a sovereign to know, and I'd like to scoop it in."

The Supreme Test.

"Does your husband treat you kindly?" asked the lawyer.

"Certainly not," said the unsubstantial woman.

"Then why do you want a divorce?"

"I don't actually want a divorce. I merely want to apply for one. Then I can judge by the kind of a fuss my husband makes whether he really cares for me or not."

ARK—AIC. BY GEORGE BELCHER.

Inquisitive Little Boy: Were you in the ark?

Peevish Old Gentleman: No; of course I wasn't.

Inquisitive Little Boy: Well, why weren't you drowned then?

Aiming at Profundity.

"There are some parts of your speech that I find hard to understand."

"Point 'em out," replied the great statesman, "and I'll rewrite the other portions. I intended the entire speech to be that way."

His Definition.

Little Horatio: "Pa, what does 'ovation' mean?"

Walker Hamm (the eminent tragedian): "It is a word derived from the Latin 'ovum,' meaning egg, my son!"

Cruel.

"Men are inconsiderate things," observes the bride of a few months.

"You are not growing pessimistic already?" smiles her friend.

"Well, they are selfish! Yesterday Harry had the cook broil for him the nice lamb chops I had ordered for my dog!"

One Form of Invitation.

Algy: "If I were to steal a kiss, would it scare you so that you would scream?"

Hebe: "I couldn't! Fright always makes me dumb!"

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

Yesterday the earth was all aglow
With summer heat and wind;
To me it seemed so fair and good,
Your smile was sweet and kind.
You said you loved me, loved me true,
I had no care or fear;
The world it seemed so good to me,
Dear heart, when you were near.

To-day it seems so dark and drear,
The years so long and cold;
You said for me your love had ceased,
Life nothing now can hold.
As through life we journey on,
Our ways so far apart;
For ever I shall cherish, dear,
Your image in my heart.

QUAINT AND USEFUL TREES.

Which Yield Milk, Bread and Butter, Candles and Fresh Water.

If one could gather together the products of the different food-producing trees, he could get quite a substantial meal.

For instance, in Venezuela is the cow tree, which derives its name from the fact that when the trunk is cut a stream of milk gushes out—milk of thick, creamy consistency, with a balmy fragrance. The milk flows best in the early morning and at sunset. At these times the natives come from far and near with bowls or pails to get their family supply.

Another one of nature's dairies is the butter tree tree. The name is also given to several tropical trees which yield certain oils that can be used for butter. The real butter tree grows in central Africa. From the kernels of the fruit is obtained rich butter that can be preserved for a year or more.

In order to make the meal complete, there should be bread to go with the butter, and this is provided by the bread tree, which flourishes in the islands of the Pacific. The tree is of good size, with large lobed leaves and fruit of a roundish form, from four to seven inches in diameter. This fruit, when baked, resembles bread somewhat, and is eaten by the natives as such.

A boon to the weary traveler is the traveler's tree, found in Madagascar. It will grow in the most arid desert, and no matter how dry the weather is, a quart of water always flows out when the stalk is punctured. The water is pure, clear, and pleasant to the taste. The leaves of the tree are from 10 to 15 feet in length.

In order to provide light for their darkness, the natives of the South Sea Islands make use of the candle tree. Its fruit is heart-shaped, and the seeds when boiled make tallow that is excellent for candles. The natives remove the shells, bake and string the kernels, and preserve them. Five or six of the kernels are enough to supply a good, clear light.

In Jamaica is found the so-called "life tree." If the leaves are broken from the plant they will continue to grow. Nothing but fire will destroy this tree.

A tree that loves darkness rather than the light is the "sorrowful tree," found in western India. It is so called because it weeps every morning. The tree flourishes only in the dark. Through the day and up until sunset not a flower can be seen, but after darkness has fallen, the tree becomes a mass of blossoms. At sunrise the flowers drop off in a shower, thus producing the effect of weeping. The blossoms open every night in the year.

Another kind of traveler's tree has leaves that closely resemble the plantain. No part of it is edible, but the large leaf stalks are used for the partitions and walls of houses, and the leaves themselves for thatch roofing.

In China can be found many interesting tree growths, but most of the peculiar effects are produced by expert tree grafting. For instance, before the gates to many of the temples are evergreen trees split up from the bottom for about six feet. The two halves are then set about three feet apart, and each has the same curve to the place where they meet, thus forming a sort of arch, through which it is expected the worshiper shall pass on entering the temple.

The Chinese are very fond of braiding sprouts together, and allowing them to grow in that way. Throughout the empire many other attempted improvements on nature may be found as a result of the marvelous horticultural skill of the yellow people.

One of the strangest trees in the world is the ambatch, whose wood is the lightest known, being only about two-fifths as heavy as cork. It is found in the waters of Lake Chad, in Africa, a body of water remarkable for the fact that, while it has an area of 10,000 square miles, it averages only six feet in depth.

Sunstroke is caused by invisible violet rays from the sun and not by heat. The temperature to which stokers on Atlantic liners are exposed is far higher than the heat from the sun in the most tropical countries, yet the men are not affected in the same manner.

LISTER'S BOLD EXPERIMENT.

He Used His First Draining Tube on Queen Victoria.

A strange anecdote is related in the life of Lord Lister by Dr. G. T. Wrench. It seems that Lister actually used Queen Victoria as the first subject of one of his great experiments.

Shortly after taking up the chair of surgery in Edinburgh, according to Dr. Wrench, Lister was called to Balmoral to operate on the queen for an abscess. Dr. Wrench goes on to say: "The operation was successful. Lister put in a strip of carbolic lint to keep the wound open for drainage. But, unfortunately, the matter of the abscess did not come away properly, and the queen was still feverish and in pain.

"Lister, disturbed by this unfavorable course, walked alone in the grounds of Balmoral, a lonely walk being his custom when he had a difficult problem to solve. During his cogitations it occurred to him that a piece of india rubber tubing might form an excellent path of exit to the discharge of a wound. It is illustrative of Lister's bold faith in himself that, though his patient was the highest lady in the land, he did not hesitate to make her the first subject of his experiment.

"He returned from his walk, cut a piece of tubing from the spray apparatus and soaked it all night in carbolic. In the morning he made use of it.

"The queen made a rapid and complete recovery. Lister, confirmed by his royal experiment, adopted rubber drainage tubes as a part of his practice."

Knew His Patient.

"My advice to you, sir," said the physician as he diagnosed the case of the dyspeptic, "is to change your hotel. Go over to the Derringdale and live for awhile."

"Why, doctor," said the patient, "the food at the Derringdale isn't any better than that at the Merrington!"

"I know that," said the physician, "but the Derringdale is run on the European plan, and you have to pay for what you eat there, sir."—Judge.

Onion Corn Remedy.

Here is a very simple remedy for corns, but one which is ordinarily most effective. Boil the strong outer skin of an onion until it is quite tender and then bind it on to the toe with a linen bandage while still warm. Put fresh applications on night and morning for two or three days, when the corn should detach itself. The scar will soon disappear and the corn will not return.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Cause For His Love.

"Did you ever really love any girl before you met me?" asked the beautiful one.

"No," replied the tired foreigner; "you are the first girl I have ever known who had money in her own right."—Judge.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE JUDGE

Khiroda, at the fag end of her youth, woke up one morning to find that her lover had departed in the night, leaving her destitute. She found that, in all the 38 years of her life, she had not even made one person her own, nor earned the right even to the corner of a home in which to live and die. She realized that life had no pity upon her and would relax none of its claims which must be attended to down to the smallest detail, and she rolled on the floor, beating its hardness with her forehead in an agony of despair.

Evening came and it grew dark. Khiroda had not the heart to tidy the room, nor to light the lamp. Her hungry child cried till it could cry no longer, and fell asleep. A knock came to the door and a man's voice called out "Khiro, Khiro." Khiroda flung open the door and rushed out at him who stood there with her broom, putting the youth to precipitate flight. Then, convulsively clutching the child to her bosom, she went out of the house and jumped into the well.

The splash brought the neighbours hurrying to the spot and the bodies were fished out. The mother was unconscious, but the child was dead. Khiroda was brought round in the hospital and was committed to the sessions by the magistrates.

Mohit Datta was the Sessions Judge. He sentenced Khiroda to death. Her advocates tried their utmost to get some mitigation of the sentence, but without success.

There was some reason for this severity of his attitude toward feminine frailty, as a glimpse into his earlier history will disclose.

Mohit in his undergraduate days lived near the house of an elderly couple with a young widowed daughter, Sasi. What little of the world Sasi used to see from behind the barrier of her lonely widowhood seemed to her like some golden land of mystery, where happiness stalked abroad. Unsatisfied longing cramped the beatings of her heart.

In the intervals of her domestic duties Sasi sat at the window watching the crowd on the public road. She thought to herself how happy were the passers-by, how free the tramps, what gay characters were the hawkers in the comedy of life, and morning and evening she saw the well-groomed Mohit strutting past in the fulness of his self-conceit. To her he was a demi-god, far above the mortals she saw around her.

Perhaps Sasi could have cheerfully spent all her life playing with her demi-god in the heaven of her fancy had not her evil star made the demi-god smile upon her and materialise the heaven within her reach. It is needless to relate at length when Mohit's covetous glance first fell upon Sasi, how he began to write to her under the false name of Binode, when the first trembling, ill-spelt reply reached him; how, at last, the whole of the poor little widow's world was turned topsy-turvy in the whirlwind of ecstatic surrender.

Late one night Sasi left her father and mother and got into the carriage brought by Mohit, alias Binode. When her demi-god, with all his tinsel showing, got inside and sat close beside her, a sudden inrush of remorse bowed her to the dust. And when the carriage actually began to move she fell at his feet, crying, "For pity's sake, let me go back home." But the carriage rapidly drove away.

To-day there was no one to remember the escapades of young "Binode." Mohit Datta was quite a reformed character. His reading of the sacred books was incessant; he even practiced austerities.

A few days after passing sentence on Khiroda, Mohit happened to be in the prison garden, with a view to securing some nice, fresh vegetables for his own table. He heard from inside the jail the sound of high words, and entering, found Khiroda in the midst of a vigorous bickering with the warder. Mohit smiled a superior smile. This is what woman is! Death at her door, and yet she must quarrel. She would dispute, thought he, amazed at his conceit, even with the doorkeepers of Hades!

As he drew nearer, Khiroda, with clasped hands, addressed him saying, "Mr. Judge, for mercy's sake, tell him to give me back my ring!"

On inquiry he found that a ring had been hidden in the loops of Khiroda's hair, which the warder discovering had appropriated. Mohit was again amused. This desire for a bauble on the steps of the gallows! Oh, woman, woman!

"Let me see the ring," said he to the warder, who handed it over to him.

Mohit started as if it had been a piece of live coal. In the ring was set a miniature portrait on ivory of a young beardless youth. In its gold rim was engraved the name "Binode." He raised his eyes from the ring, and for the first time looked Khiroda keenly in the face. He seemed to see there the fresh, fond, tear-bedewed countenance of 24 years ago. But, ah! what a difference!

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

For weak stomachs and the indigestion or dyspepsia resulting, and the multitude of diseases following therefrom, no medicine can be more adaptable as a curative agent than DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

This famous Doctor's prescription has been recommended for over 40 years, and is today just as big a success. Restores a healthy appetite. Cleanses the blood. Strengthens the nerves. Regulates stomach and liver. Demand the original.

CANADIANS INVADE THE UNITED STATES

Successful Sortie Over the Canadian Border Whereby Spoils to the Value of Several Million Dollars Were Captured From Uncle Sam

The Raid Occurred About Two Years Ago--No Reprisals Expected.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 6th.—Some two years ago, a party of Canadians, headed by D. Lorne McGibbon, of Montreal, and T. H. Rieder and A. J. Kimmel, of Berlin, planned and performed a raid on "Uncle Sam," and returned home with spoils to the extent of several million dollars. It was the biggest coup that has been executed by Canadians in recent years.

Armed with a plentiful supply of quick-firing manufacturing maxims, clothed in most attractive Canadian commercial uniforms, equipped with an ample commissary of mercantile and economic facts regarding both countries, and inspired with the belief that there is nothing too good for Canada and Canadians, these men sallied forth, and the enemy promptly capitulated.

"Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war," and, as a result of that well-planned raid two years ago, Canada now has another gorgeous and graceful feather in her commercial and manufacturing cap, and there is no prouder city in the Dominion to-day than Berlin, Ont.

Hamilton may claim to be the "Birmingham of Canada," Toronto may style herself the "Queen City"; but we in little old Berlin, who usually "say nothing but saw wood," feel as proud as Chantecler in the knowledge that Canada's commercial sun could not rise each morning quite as majestically as He does, if He did not hear the melodious crowing of Berlin's orchestra of factory whistles.

And this orchestra of ours, whose patrons and audience extend all over the Dominion, as well as in every British colony, has just been augmented and rendered more tuneful with the "spoils" of that "raid" of two years ago, and this is how it all happened:

It was in 1912 then, that the "three wise men"—McGibbon, Rieder and Kimmel—saw a star or constellation in the commercial firmament, shaped in this fashion:

And they said: "Lo, we will follow this star, and see whereto it leadeth us." And, behold, it led directly to the offices of a large automobile tire company at Broadway and 58th street, New York, and there it stopped.

But, to drop allegory and metaphor, let me tell the story in plain 20th Century Canadian English:

To-day, by far the majority of automobile tires used by Canadian motorists are the product of other countries. This means that thousands and thousands of Canadian dollars which should stay in the Dominion are leaking to other countries, mainly to the "States." This was also the condition of affairs two years ago.

To stop that leak, or as large a proportion of it as possible, the "three wise men" decided to make a pilgrimage to the "States," to select the best automobile tire they could find—there—a tried and true tire—bring it to Canada, give it a home worthy of its class and reputation, and supply Canadian motorists with the finest tire in the world—"made in Canada."

This they have accomplished.

They found that the most popular, the most serviceable automobile tire in the United States was the "U.S." tire, plain and nobby tread. That "U.S. Tires are Good Tires" is a slogan from Maine to California, and it is equally appreciated by motorists from Nova Scotia to Vancouver Island. Hundreds of Canadian cars are to-day equipped with these tires. They have won their way into the confidence of Canadian motorists by dint of sheer merit, as a result of strenuous service actually performed.

Just as charity covereth a multitude of sins, so doth bombast and brag in the tire world conceal a multitude of blow-outs. "Blow hard, blow out," may safely be said to be the slogan of the tire manufacturer whose product is deficient. Bombast and brag, however, failed to influence the "three wise men" in their selection of a good tire for Canadians. They could have secured the Canadian rights to almost any American or European tire, but what they were after was a "tried and true tire," a tire that would "stand up."

And they got it!

And so the Dominion Tire Company, Limited, of Berlin, Ontario, was launched, and this imposing million-dollar factory, which is completed and now in operation, was commenced.

It is a handsome structure, and utilitarian, too. Berlin is proud of it and all Canada and Canadians will be—of it and its product, the DOMINION tire.

The new factory is constructed of reinforced concrete, and is one of the largest buildings of its class in Canada. It is 432 ft. long by 90 ft. wide, with four storeys and basement. The columns and footings are designed to carry an additional storey, to be added at some future date, and extensions at either end of the building are also provided for.

More than 800 tons of reinforcing steel were used in its construction, and approximately 40,000 square feet of steel sash for the windows. It is, without doubt, the finest and most complete tire factory in the world, and its equipment represents the latest and best apparatus for tire-making that has yet been conceived.

The Board of Directors of the Dominion Tire Company, Limited, is comprised of the following gentlemen:

Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon, Colonel S. P. Colt, and Messrs. Victor E. Mitchell, Elisha S. Williams, A. J. Kimmel, Homer E. Sawyer and T. H. Rieder.

Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon is too well-known a Canadian to need any introduction. He is the president of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited, Ames Holden McCready, Limited, Goodwins' Limited, Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited, and a director of the United States Rubber Company and the Eastern Trust Company.

Mr. McGibbon has been identified with the industrial development and progress of Canada as much as, if not more than, any of his contemporaries, and the fact that he is at the helm of any enterprise is sufficient guarantee of its success.

Colonel S. P. Colt was admitted to the New York Bar in 1876. In 1887 he founded the Industrial Trust Company, of Providence, R.I., and is still Chairman of its Board of Directors. In that year, he also began his career in the rubber industry with the National India Rubber Company, of Bristol, R.I. He is a director in a number of important rubber companies, such as the United States Rubber Company, the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, Limited, Holland-American Plantations Company and the Netherlands Langkat Rubber Company, in Sumatra.

Mr. Homer E. Sawyer is well known in the States as General Manager of the United States Rubber Company, which position he has held since 1904. He has been identified with the rubber industry since 1885, when he entered the employ of the Boston Rubber Shoe Company. He was Assistant Superintendent of the factories of this company from 1888 to 1893, was appointed their General Selling Agent in 1901, and became connected with the United States Rubber Company in 1902 as Manager of Sales.

Mr. Elisha S. Williams has been identified with the rubber industry for the past twenty-two years, and has, for the last five years, been President of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Co., of New York. Prior to that he was connected with the Revere Rubber Co., of Boston, entering their employ as a clerk, and finally becoming their General Manager and Treasurer.

Mr. V. E. Mitchell graduated B.C.L. at McGill University in the year 1896, and was admitted to the Bar in the same year.

He is a member of the firm of McGibbon, Casgrain, Mitchell and Casgrain, of Montreal. He was appointed King's Counsel in 1909, and is regarded as one of the leading corporation lawyers in the Dominion.

Born in Berlin 49 years ago, no man is better known in Berlin than Mr. A. J. Kimmel.

In 1900 he organized the Elmira Felt Co., Elmira, which company was remarkably successful. In 1909, the Canadian Consolidated Felt Company was formed with a capital of two million dollars, taking in the factories of the Elmira Co., The Kimmel Co., and the Berlin Felt Boot Co., with Mr. Kimmel as Vice-President and General Manager. In the meantime, he had also become associated with the larger rubber interests of Canada, which later became merged into what is now known as the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited.

Mr. T. H. Rieder has charge of the manufacturing operations of five rubber footwear mills at Berlin, Port Dalhousie, Montreal, St. Jerome and Granby, and also the large manufacturing plant at Montreal, where a general line of all kinds of mechanical rubber goods are made. At several of these points the company also operates its own last factories and reclaiming mills.

In addition to this, Mr. Rieder directs the selling operations of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, Limited, which has a chain of 26 selling staffs and distributing warehouses throughout Canada—through which the entire products of the foregoing plants, as well as three large felt plants, are marketed.

Other well-known Canadians connected with the new tire company are Messrs. J. H. McKechnie, Walter Binmore and R. B. Jamieson, of Montreal.

As a fitting climax to the consummation of their plans, and to the birth of this new Canadian enterprise, the Directors of the Dominion Tire Company, Limited, have evolved a novel commemorative celebration.

Recognizing the importance to Canadian motorists of the manufacture in Canada of DOMINION Tires, and the keen interest that the opening of the factory will evoke, the directors propose to enable as many motorists as possible to participate in the festivities.

Announcements or invitations, of which a fac-simile is shown below, have accordingly been sent to approximately 50,000 motor car owners in Canada.

Everyone owning a car, whose name and address is available, will receive one. If you have a car, and have perchance not received one of these invitations, one will be promptly sent to you if you will notify the Dominion Tire Co., Limited, of Berlin, or their selling agents, the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited, of Montreal, and advise them as to your license number.

When the most popular birthday has been discovered, the Dominion Tire Company will present a DOMINION tire, plain or Nobby Tread, to all of those motor car owners whose anniversaries occur on it; and Canada will then have another red-letter day in the calendar, and it will be called DOMINION TIRE DAY.

A meritorious product! A strong organization! A fitting celebration! And Berlin takes off its hat to the DOMINION Tire, and to its sponsors! In very truth, the "DOMINION" has captured the "U.S."

Consumption Takes Hundreds of People

every day in the year and the deadly germs claim more victims in cities than in rural districts, due no doubt to the increased number of indoor workers in confining quarters and their lack of sunshine.

Tubercular germs always attack when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, overstrain, confining duties or any drain which has reduced the resistive forces of the body. But nature always provides a corrector and the best physicians emphasize that during changing climate our blood should be kept rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals; the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood—it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and upbuilds the resistive forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known; it builds energy and strength and is totally free from alcohol or any stupefying drug—every druggist has it.

Paderewski Warned Away.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Six detectives Saturday night guarded Ignace Jan Paderewski, the Polish pianist, who received letters threatening his life if he kept his Chicago engagements. The letters were mailed him when he was in S. Louis and promised revenge for his alleged support of an anti-Jewish newspaper at Warsaw. The writer said he would place a bomb beneath the pianist's private car.

Two detectives accompanied Paderewski when he left his car and remained with him until he returned. A half dozen of them were stationed about the car during the night.

Vote on Naval Holiday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—An agreement to vote on the Hensley resolution to authorize President Wilson to co-operate with Great Britain to arrange a naval holiday was made Saturday in the House. Several speakers were heard in support of the resolution.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It is announced that English striking locomotive engineers had decided to accept the terms of settlement.

The prison reform commission may hold a session in Ottawa for the hearing of the evidence of some of the penitentiary inspectors.

One white and two negro laborers were drowned by the bursting of a 60-inch water main at the bottom of a trench 24 feet deep at Cincinnati Saturday.

Prince Charles, eldest son of the Crown Prince of Roumania, is to enter the German army on Jan. 1 as lieutenant in the First Foot Guards at Potsdam.

George A. Cooke, a machinist, while riding a bicycle on the wrong side of the road on Woolwich street, was run down by an automobile at Guelph and badly hurt.

Alec Hurley, one of the foremost coster comedians on the English music hall stage, who was recently divorced by Marie Lloyd, the variety actress, died in London yesterday.

Two Venetians, Antonio Zanardi and Eugene Bisbiarao, who have more time than money, arrived in New York from Havre, with a huge barrel, in which they hope to roll around the world.

The case of the King v. Barcewski, charged with the murder of a compatriot at Port Arthur, was completed Saturday, when Mr. Justice Britton sentenced the prisoner to serve six years in prison.

The British flagship Suffolk has left Vera Cruz for Tuxpam. The transport Progreso sailed from Progreso with troops to reinforce Gen. Maas, operating against Gen. Aguilar in the oil regions.

"DOPING" THEIR VICTIMS.

White Slavers Use Hypodermic Needle In Picture Theatres.

NEWARK, N.J., Dec. 8.—Federal as well as state authorities are likely to take a hand in the investigation of the poison needle mystery growing out of the experiences of Mrs. Marjorie Graff in a moving picture theatre two days ago. So far the only arrest is that of the young South American, Ermand Megaro, who is held in $20,000 bail on an assault charge made by Mrs. Graff, after a man seated near her in a box jabbed a needle into her arm, and she was seized with drowsiness. The cases of five young woman reported to have been victims of experiences similar to those of Mrs. Graff are being investigated by the police of this city, however, and the attention of the federal authorities here has been brought to the Graff case in connection with the enquiry into several white slave cases.

Court-Martial For Officer.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Lieut. Baron Von Forstner, according to a report reaching here, is to be tried by court-martial for wounding a lame shoemaker on Dec. 2 at Zabern, Alsace, during street disturbances. It was Lieut. Von Forstner who started the recent trouble between the troops and civilians at Zabern by making scornful remarks to the citizens when he addressed the recruits of his company some time previously.

Seventeen huge Socialist meetings were held yesterday and were addressed by members of the Reichstag. A protest was recorded against "military anarchy versus constitutional rights." Order was maintained at all the meetings.

Six to One For Hydro.

WINDSOR, Dec. 8.—By a majority of nearly six to one Walkerville on Saturday approved the proposal advanced by the Ontario Hydro-electric Power Commission. The first bylaw, authorizing the council to enter into an agreement with the commission, received 223 votes for and 32 against.

For the second bylaw, to issue debentures for the construction of a distributing station, sub-stations and equipment for the town power plant, the vote stood 222 to 41.

"Back to India" Their Threat.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 8.—Indignant at the widespread agitation which developed following the decision handed down by Chief Justice Hunter, in the Hindu immigration cases last week, many former natives of the Punjab are said to have declared their intention of returning to their own country with "flames in their hearts," as they describe their feelings in the picturesque style of the orient.

This decision was reached at meetings held yesterday, in Victoria and Vancouver.

FIVE MINUTE CURE IF STOMACH IS BAD

When "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches Stomach All Indigestion, Gas and Sourness Disappears

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness nad nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

QUICKLY STOPS THE WORST BACKACHE

Croxone Makes Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatic Pains Vanish

If you suffer with backaching kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders, or are tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, you will be surprised how quickly and surely Croxone will relieve all such troubles.

It soaks right in through the walls membranes, and linings, neutralises, dissolves and makes the kidney sift out and filter away the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, it is practically impossible to take Croxone without results. It starts to work the minute you take it and is guaranteed to relieve you the first time you use it, or cost you nothing.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder trouble, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone really will relieve your misery and do it quickly. An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase if it fails in a single case.

Airship Lost In Fog.

HAMBURG, Dec. 8.—The airship Sachsen arrived here from Dresden in a dense fog yesterday afternoon and was unable to find a landing place although skyrockets were fired. After cruising for a time over the city the pilot completely lost his bearings and finally descended at Quickborn, twenty miles to the north. In landing the Sachsen tore down the telegraph wires over a long stretch.

Porter Is Arrested.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Dec. 8—William Cobb, of Montreal, a sleeping car porter, was arrested Saturday and will be arraigned in the federal court at Burlington to-day, charged with smuggling a Chinaman into the country. The Chinaman was found hidden Thursday night in a cupboard in Cobb's car.

Seminole Not Badly Damaged.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dec. 8.—The Clyde Line steamer Seminole, which has been beached at Puerto Plata, on the north coast, is not believed to be in a serious condition, according to the latest advices received here.

Child Almost Strangled

You never know what minute a child will develop a bad cold or be seized by croup. For this reason it takes a great burden off every mother's mind to have at hand Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Mrs. E. W. Silver, South Milford, Annapolis County, N.S., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my little boy with most satisfactory results. His throat would fill up with phlegm so bad that he could scarcely make a sound, and I thought he would surely strangle. He grew worse, and had frequent bad attacks, so I began using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Scarcely half a bottle was used when the strangling ceased. This medicine had a wonderfully soothing effect, and when he had taken two bottles I could not tell that he had any throat trouble. We have also used Dr. Chase's Ointment with equally good results. It is a grand medicine for salt rheum."

There are imitations, but the genuine Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

GIRLS WALKED AWAY.

Two of Four Reformatory Prisoners Are Still at Liberty.

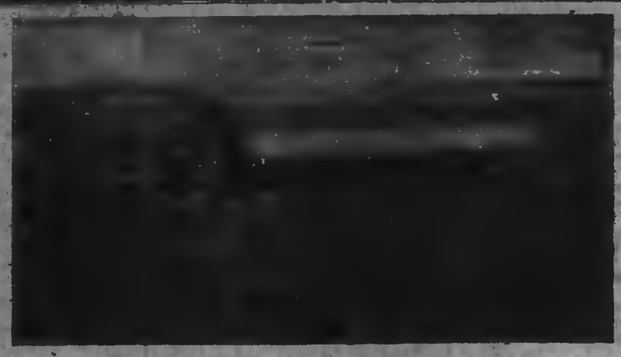
TORONTO, Dec. 8.—Choosing the same day, and almost at the same hour, four girls escaped from Toronto reformatories Sunday evening, two from the Alexandra Industrial School and two from the Mercer Reformatory. Blanche Darling and Lucy Nichols, aged 17 years, evaded the attendants at the Alexandra Industrial School and Alice Booke and Dorothy Hall, aged 16 and 18, in the same manner awaited their opportunity to leave their attendant at the Mercer, and in the dusk of the evening made their way to King street but at a late hour last night they were found half frozen on the beach.

An official of the Alexandra School refused to give any details of the escape to the press.

The superintendent of the Mercer Reformatory stated that the most distressing part of the occurrence to her was that the girls who escaped from her institution were dressed only in their school clothing, altogether insufficient to withstand the cold of last night. Both she said were weak-minded.

Milk Strike Started.

BERLIN, Ont., Dec. 8.—A milk strike was started Saturday morning in this city, as ordered by Mayor Euler. The majority of the milk dealers report a few patrons having quit their supply until the price is reduced, but the strike was not general. It is expected, however, by the special committee of the City Council that a large number of citizens will participate in the strike. Milk vendors do not anticipate losing much trade, as they claim a large number of their patrons will not go very many days without milk. They have no intention of reducing the price as is desired by the civic authorities.



Why Waste Energy Throwing Turnips into a High Wagon?

The great reason that makes a low-down wagon preferable for hauling corn shows applies when hauling roots. This corn wagon, which carries 60 bushels of turnips, is being used by Mr. Brethen, of Peterboro county, for root harvest.

Magnetized by Booth.

The late Bishop Potter of the Episcopal church and Edwin Booth, the actor, were very great friends, and the bishop, in telling of his first meeting with Mr. Booth, said: "I was preaching a sermon at Newport, R. I., and it was a very hot summer's day. The door of the church was open, and I noticed a gentleman get up from a rear pew and go and sit down on the doorstep, but thought nothing of it until after awhile I realized that I was talking to this man only. When the services were over I found out that he was Edwin Booth—that I by some unknown influence had been drawn to speak to him—as if my sermon was to him alone."

Then She Recovered.

"For weeks and weeks after my husband died I was unable to sleep."

"I hope you are all over that now," her sympathetic friend replied.

Chinese Dread of Milk.

A Chinese has the same dread of milk that an American has of oysters out of season. Several evenings ago a Chinese dignitary, who had just come into the country to study educational institutions, was taking dinner with a widely known educator in an uptown hotel. He ate freely of the American dishes until it came to the last course. Looking at the ice cream dubiously for some time, he finally took a mouthful. It must have given him a pleasurable sensation—this first taste of ice cream—for he smiled pleasantly at his host. Suddenly another Chinese, who was present and who had not taken any of the dessert, spoke quickly to him a single Chinese word. In an instant the dignitary spat out his mouthful on his plate, much to the consternation of every one at the table. "What did you say?" inquired the host of the Chinese who had spoken. "I said 'milk,'" was the stoical reply.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

How Macaroni Is Made.

This is how macaroni is made in Italy: To very glutinous wheat flour is added a plentiful supply of dried eggs. Mixed with water, this becomes a dough, which is so thickly kneaded as to be difficult to impress with the fingers. Then it is carried to a round press perforated with holes, through which the dough is pressed by means of a heavy plate worked by a screw. The result is macaroni without holes in the sticks. Pipe macaroni is made through a similar press, with the difference that a round piece of metal makes the central hole. As it issues in long, sunky ropes from the bottom of the press they are violently fanned to prevent them from sticking together and are afterward taken out into the open and laid on long bamboo poles to dry. Two or three days' exposure in the warm, sunny air of Italy makes the tough pipes hard and brittle and fit to use for food.

A Greatly Desired Lady.

It would appear from bits of the social gossip of her day that Miss Burdett Coutts' nearest approach to an acquisition was refusing offers of marriage. It is stated in "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III" that the name of the "prince of adventurers" was connected with hers, that she refused the Duke of Wellington and a score of lesser gentlemen.

For years the great heiress was the most glittering matrimonial prize in England, and when at last she consented to change her condition by marrying an American a London club wit struck a responsive chord by observing: "I don't blame Ashmead Bartlett for proposing to the baroness. I've done it myself. I regard it as a duty every Englishman owes to his family."

The Air Man's Dream.

A French aviation expert is of opinion that the day will come when communication between the earth and the moon and stars will be possible in aeroplanes. Providing that radium is one day found in larger quantities and that some way of harnessing its energies is discovered by scientists, he calculates that an aeroplane weighing a ton should be able to cover the 238,800 miles which separate the earth and the moon in three hours and five minutes. About 900 pounds of radium would be necessary to provide the fuel for the journey. At the current price about $10,000,000,000 worth would be required.

Trips to certain of the stars he considers equally practicable.—London Tit-Bits.

Ants Walk on Water.

It may not be new to observers of animal life, but I have been much interested in watching the common house ant here in Rio de Janeiro. We have an American fly trap. The sugar was one day covered with ants, so I placed the trap on a finger bowl standing in a plate of water. The ants when they came to the edge of the water ran around the bowl until convinced there was no way across, and then calmly took to the water and ran across it by aid of surface tension without getting their feet wet. Having presumably been home to the nest, they returned for more sugar, crossing in the same way, and this went on regularly, a steady procession crossing the water.—Nature.

Not Guilty as Alleged.

The man had been accused of committing an annoyance by flashing a mirror in the eyes of passersby.

"You are quite mistaken," he said to the big policeman. "I haven't any mirror. What these people saw was the reflection of my shining serge coat. I'm a married man, and the coat is four years old."

And, turning hastily to throw the dazzling reflection from his back and elbows into the policeman's dazzled eyes. And by the time the officer recovered he was well on his way.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cookery Points

Stuffed Eggplant.

This is an excellent dish. Cut a fine eggplant in half lengthwise. Do not peel it, but scoop out the interior to within about three-fourths of the edge. Use a large silver spoon for the purpose, and hold the vegetable under water as much as possible while doing so. This prevents discoloration. As the interior is removed put it also under water, and when the whole is finished cover with new cold water, adding to every quart of water a tablespoonful of salt. Let the eggplant both shell and scooped out portion, rest in this salted water for two or three hours, or until the water turns dark. This is to remove its rankness.

After soaking put the vegetable into fresh cold water and let it come to the boiling stage. Boil until tender, salting the water slightly. It will take about half an hour's boiling, but it is well to cook the scooped out pulp longer than the shells, so as to have it very soft. The shells should be tender, but not so tender that they will lose their shape. Set the shells aside on an earthen plate.

It is well not to let them come into contact with tin. Now mash the pieces of scooped out eggplant to a pulp with a wooden potato masher, and to every cupful add two or three cupfuls of soft breadcrumbs. Mix the two together, and if they need moistening in order to make them cohere add a little milk. Season with a tiny minced onion, a scant teaspoonful of salt and a scant half teaspoonful each of thyme, sage and white pepper.

A scant quarter of a teaspoonful of sweet marjoram may also be added. Mix the seasonings thoroughly with the stuffing and fill the prepared shell with it. Spread soft butter liberally over the top and set the shells with their contents in a buttered baking dish. Bake in a brisk oven for about half an hour, or until done.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Mr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. This puts the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

No Scientists In Burglary.

"Scientific burglary absolutely does not exist," says M. Xavier Guichard, one of the foremost detective authorities of Paris. And away at one sweep of official truth vanishes the walking wonder of housebreaking and safe cracking against whose miraculous equipment it were vain to set up ordinary bolts and bars. Along with the scientific burglar, too, we may place in the gallery of the nonexistent the social highwayman, the gentleman burglar, the Arsene Lupins and all their class of gallant, indomitable offenders.

"What people do not realise," M. Guichard continues, "is that burglars belong to an inferior grade of humanity and are very seldom intelligent."

Plain facts of record have shown over and over that a career of crime does not pay. Nor does it appeal to the intellect. A man with brains enough to be a scientific burglar would make an easier and better living without risks in some honest line. As for the romance of crime, it exists only in books, and the man who writes about it knows better than to seek it through experience.—New York World.

CITY'S FINANCES GIVEN IN DETAIL BY ALD. ANDERSON

Replies to Statements Made by a Reader of The Examiner in Regard to the Council's Expenditures—City Father's Responsibility Does Not Cover Every Item of Expense

ALD. ANDERSON POINTS OUT MISSTATEMENTS

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I am afraid that your correspondent in Friday's Examiner, who signs himself "Ex 19% Mill Ratepayer" in his anxiety to criticise, forgets to be fair. He states that I have shown, that instead of the increase being $120,000.00 per year it is $125,000.00 per year. This is not correct.

Your correspondent in Monday evening's Examiner stated that from 1908 to the end of 1912 the debt had increased over $4000,00.00, which for the four years intervening would be $150,000.00 per year, and not $120,000.00 as stated. The figures which I gave, and which were published in Tuesday's Examiner, are correct, and show that the debt has increased not $400,000.00 in that time, but $500,000.00, and not $150,000.00 per year, but $125,000.00.

In the statement which I made, every expenditure which caused the increase in the debenture debt of the City for the years 1908-10-11-12 was given, and I endeavoured to show that almost every expenditure was authorized and approved by the ratepayers at the polls. It would be interesting to know just how many items in the list were opposed by your correspondent.

Instead, however, of specifying a single expenditure to which he is opposed, he shuts his eyes tightly and makes the general, vague charge of extravagance. I would ask him now to mention any one item in the list given and state over his correct signature that he disapproves of it.

Included in the list of expenditures which I gave, was $160,000.00 for waterworks purposes and $115,000.00 for Public schools, or a total for those two items alone of $275,000.00, which is considerably over half the whole increase, and yet the City Council is in no way responsible for either of those requirements. The ratepayers authorized the expenditure of $120,000.00 for the Waterworks dam, and the additional $40,000.00 is for the usual extensions each year. The expenditure by the Board of Education of $115,000.00, includes $85,000.00 for the two new schools which were opened last week. Will your correspondent say that this money has been wasted? If so, it might be advisable for him to give at least some of his attention to the Water Commissioners and Board of Education, seeing that they are responsible for much more than one-half the increase in the debt.

Your correspondent in an issue of last week shifts his ground from the debenture debt to current expenditure. It is quite true that the rate of taxation and the assessment has increased, but while this is the case, it is also true that the demands upon the City have greatly increased. The following statement shows the total expenditure for 1913, for which it is necessary to levy a tax rate of 25 mills as compared with the expenses for 1908:

Expenditure, 1913			$249843 13
Expenditure, 1908			143342 95
Increase			$106500 18

xThe items thus marked are those which do not come under the control of the Council.

It will be seen that the expenditure has increased by $106,500.18, but of this amount $54,021.55 represents increases in expenditures over which the Council have absolutely no control. Of the total expenditure for 1913, about $170,000.00 is beyond control of Council and many of the items, while controlled by them, must be provided for, such as the Fire Department, hydrants, street lighting and many other necessary expenses.

Your correspondent states that the assessment has been increased by $1,000,000.00, which means that the ratepayers have been further "soaked" this year in taxes for $25,000.00 more than last year. It means nothing of the kind, as he knows, or should know, that the increased assessment will not apply until 1914.

As another example as to how near the truth your correspondent comes, I refer to his statement that the assessment has increased by 3,200,000.00 in the last five years. In 1908 the assessment was $8,668,105.00, and in 1913, $10,055,010.00, an increase of $1,300,000.00, not $3,200,000.00. In this case he is only out the insignificant sum of $1,700,000.00 in his figures. I submit, Mr. Editor, it is useless to attempt to answer such wild statements.

To accuse the Council of squandering $256,000.00 per year in the face of the information given, is simply absurd, and as your correspondent does not point out a single expenditure to which he objects, I find it very difficult to correct his statements without covering the whole field of City finances, which would be too great a demand upon your space. In any case, I have no hope of satisfying him, as his statements are most unfair and incorrect. He makes very strong statements, but when he comes to sign them he stoops to the weakness of using a nom de plume.

Notwithstanding all that has been said it is a fact that in the list of 24 cities of the Province, according to latest government returns, Peterborough stands 21st as to taxes per head of population, only 3 cities being below her.

It has been said that you can always tell a man from Boston, but you cannot tell him much. I fear your correspondent belongs to this class.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor,

Yours,

J. C. ANDERSON,

Dec. 8, 1913.

FOUR YEARLINGS BRING BIG PRICE.

Sold by Mr. Stewart Brown to Mr. Elias Lowes and Weighed at the Market This Morning.

Four yearlings weighing 3,660 lbs., brought $242 and some cents at the market this morning. This averages $60 apiece, and is regarded a high price, even by those intimately associated with the handling of cattle. They were raised by Mr. Stewart Brown of Smith, and sold to Mr. Elias Lowes, who has shipped over 50 cars of cattle this season.

TWENTY-EIGHT APPEALS AGAINST VOTERS' LIST

Court of Appeal Will Convene on Tuesday, December 16th—Comparative Number of Qualified Voters

MUNICIPAL VOTERS

The Court of Appeal will sit on Tuesday, December 16th to hear complaints respecting the voters' list for 1913. A few complaints have been entered for adjustment. The changes asked for, mainly concern those who have acquired property since the list was issued.

The new list credits Peterborough with 5478 voters who are qualified to vote at the municipal elections. They are classified as follows:

	Tenant	Free-holder	In-come	Total
1913 List.
South Ward	596	728	4	1328
Centre Ward	599	252	10	861
West Ward	512	799	11	1322
North Ward	517	740	5	1262
East Ward	273	431	1	705
	2497	2950	31	5478

The corrected list for 1912 credits the City with 5,668 qualified voters. A total of 282 names was added to the 1912 voters' list by His Honour Judge Huycke. This large number of additions, was directly attributed to the local option campaign, which was waged last year.

The corrected list for 1912 was as follows:

	Tenant	Free-holder	In-come	Total
1912 List.
South Ward	561	692	6	1209
Centre Ward	610	253	18	881
West Ward	524	779	10	1313
North Ward	599	726	5	1240
East Ward	264	421	2	687
	2486	2861	41	5380

To this list 289 names were added by the Judge and 4 were taken off, bringing the corrected list up to 5,668.

A total of twenty-eight appeals have been entered for the correction of the Court of Appeal.

VERMONT MARBLE COMPANY ANTICIPATE A BUSY SEASON

Among the local industries that anticipate a busy season is the Vermont Marble Company. Peterborough's newest industry presents a hive of industry. Several carloads of unfinished marble have been received and in a few weeks th finished product will be transhipped to its destination. The large overhead crane, which is used to load and unload cars is in daily use and is only one of the many modern mechanical appliances that is used to supersede hand labour in the East City plant.

Mr. T. M. Howard has charge of the Peterborough branch of the Vermont Marble Company.

INTEREST FLAGS IN THE CIVIC ELECTION FIELD

Few Candidates Mentioned for Aldermanic Positions and Crop Looks Thin—Three Aldermen Will Be Back for Re-election

SITUATION IS TAME

There has been very little interest shown in the municipal elections during the past few days. Ald. Duncan was to have announced his decision in regard to the mayoralty race, but only a rumour has been heard that he will not be a candidate. The general discussion regarding his probable candidature influenced the impression that he would run, but nothing definite has since been learned.

Thus far Ald. Buller and Ald. Gillespie have the field to themselves. Ald. Gillespie has opened committee rooms on George Street, and Ald. Buller states that he will have quarters in a day or two.

The Aldermanic field has thus far produced a scant crop of candidates. Ald. Anderson, Ald. Johnston and Ald. Duffus are coming back in the East, North and West Wards, respectively. Mr. A. H. Stratton stands alone for the Centre Ward and Mr. Saunders, Romaine Street, is mentioned for the South Ward. Apparently, municipal interest is beating time for the present until the first weeks of December pass. At any rate the municipal pot is by no means bubbling over.

A Social Hour At St. John's

Reports of the Every Member Canvass Presented

Encouraging reports of the every-member canvass conducted during the past week were given at a social gathering held in St. John's School Room at the close of evensong, yesterday. Rev. Canon Davidson occupied the chair. Different members, who had been engaged in the missionary canvass, reported progress, and although the figures are not complete there has been a splendid increase in the amounts donated to missions, and in the number of subscribers. During the evening Rev. Canon Davidson referred to the departure for his native land to Mr. W. D. Packwood, who has been an assiduous Sunday School worker and leader of the St. John's Athletic Club. He wished him, in the name of all connected with the Church, a happy holiday.

MORE LIVES MAY HAVE BEEN LOST IN STORM

Steamers McKee and Turret Cape Are Missing and No Signs Were Found of Them Up to One O'clock To-day

A TERRIFIC GALE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

GODERICH, Ont., Dec. 8.—At one o'clock this afternoon there is still no sign of the steamers McKee and Turret Cape, which were due here yesterday from Fort William. It is feared here that they met the gale at its height several miles out of here. High winds were accompanied by a heavy snowstorm in this district. Grave fears are entertained. Lookouts have been posted all along the shore, and tugs are venturing out as far as possible. The violence of the winds have driven in the remains of what is thought to be the steamer Wexford. A big hulk has been sighted near Bayfield near here in twelve feet of water. Another body was brought in by the waves during yesterday's storm. It is not known what vessel it came from. An official of the Lake Carriers' Association is here to try to make identification.

Gale Was Terrific.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 8.—Captain Foote, of the Hamonic, told of the terrific gale and snowstorm on the lake as he came up. The wind raged in ferocious gusts and the cold was intense. Most upward bound steamers lost from four to six hours en route on account of the head wind. The wireless reports that Lake Superior is moderately calm this morning, and that no knowledge of any ships in danger has been received. Probably, if the storm should have occurred early in the season it would have been serious, but at the present time very few steamers the on the upper lakes.

Number of Vessels Out.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 8.—A heavy gale from the north is reported at all points on the lakes, and word is being anxiously awaited from many vessels now out both on Lake Huron and Lake Erie. The big Marquette and Bessemer car ferry made the trip safely to-day from Conneaut, but is lying up at Port Stanley until the blow is over.

THE SLIPPERY PAVEMENT

Proves Disastrous to Horse Belonging to Local Fuel Company.

A horse belonging to a local fuel company slipped on the new pavement this afternoon, and nothing but the curb prevented the animal from sliding into the Red Mill theatre. A couple of men made several crude attempts to restore the animal to an upright position. This they did without the expedient of releasing the prostrate horse from the one to which it was attached. The horse, after a desperate struggle, succeeded in regaining its feet, and resumed its journey little the worse for its mishap.

POSTAL SITUATION IN ENGLAND GRAVE

General Strike of Postal Employees is Feared, Following Rejection of Proffered Increases.

OUTLOOK IS BLACK

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 8.—(Special Cable)—With heavy Christmas mail from Canada and other dominions beyond the seas commencing to pour in the gravity of the situation which threatens a general strike of the postal employees following their rejection of the proffered increases by the government is increasing this morning. Although the syndicatists strike motion was defeated at the Leicester postal conference, Saturday, by two votes the Daily Citizen this morning pessimistically says: "The outlook presents no gleam of hope. It is feared some trivial circumstance might plunge the whole postal system into a tie up at any moment. As to the failure of peace negotiations at Dublin it is admitted on all sides that the situation is exceedingly black.

MINOR WAS INTOXICATED

Eighteen-Year-old Boy Says He Was Supplied at a Local Hotel

SIX DRUNKS FINED

A local youth was charged in police court this morning with being drunk on Saturday. He pleaded "guilty" and was fined $2. The young man is only 18 years of age, so the Chief was anxious to find out where he got his liquor.

"Where did you get the liquor?" he asked the young man.

"At the American hotel," was the reply.

In the witness box the young man said that he went into the bar of the American Hotel and got a drink of lager, followed by two of whiskey.

"Did you want to get drunk?" asked the Magistrate.

"No."

"That's the orthodox way of doing it, anyway," said His Worship.

The young man swore that a bartender by the name of Lebarr served him with the liquor. He could remember nothing from the time he took the last drink at 7 o'clock Saturday night, until 3 o'clock Sunday morning, when he was arrested in the Market Arcade.

As a result of his arrest, it is likely that the bartender mentioned above will have to face a charge of supplying liquor to a minor.

Six drunks were assessed $2 each for their spree.

NAME WAS OMITTED

Messrs. Campbell and Best Did the Galvanized Iron Work

In the description furnished The Examiner on Saturday in regard to the new schools, the name of the firm of Campbell and Best, who supplied the galvanized iron ornamentation at the Queen Mary School was omitted. Not only did this firm erect the galvanized iron work, but it was all built in their plant here.

MERCHANTS SHOULD BE CAREFUL

Not to Use Inflammable Materials in Their Christmas Decorations

Fire Chief Howard has received the following letter from the Secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, to which the merchants of the city should pay attention. The letter speaks for itself and reads as follows:

Dear Sir,—Following our usual custom at this season of the year I beg to call your attention to the dangers to life and property from Christmas decorations, displays, etc., which are frequently made at this time of the year. The use of Christmas greens, harvest specimens and other inflammable materials such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, and the like, (especially in connection with electric and other lighting systems), is decidedly an increase of hazard, it being impossible to make displays of that nature perfectly safe.

The Statutory Conditions of your Insurance Policy read in part as follows:

"Any change material to the risk, but within the control or knowledge of the assured, shall avoid the policy, as to the part affected thereby, unless the change is promptly notified in writing to the Company or its local agent."

In addition to the danger to property from the displays referred to, the danger to life in crowded stores or places of meeting, by reason of a panic occasioned by fire, even though it be small and easily controlled, is so great that the Underwriters, who have made a study of such hazards, would fail in their duty should they not give this warning.

By order,

JOHN A. ROBERTSON,

Secretary.

SAID FAREWELL.

It was with much regret that the office staff of the C. O. E. said goodbye on Saturday to Mr. A. J. Alcock, who is taking up other work in the City. Mr. Alcock is held high in the esteem of those who have come into personal contact with him. He has been in the employ of the Company for four years and his many friends join in the most hearty wish for his future success.

ALDERMANIC CANDIDATE FOR NO. 2 WARD

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, has announced his intention to be a candidate for the representative of No. 2 Ward in the City Council, for the coming year. Mr. Dobbin has been a resident of Peterborough for about twenty-five years. He is well known to the public as a journalist, and this knowledge will give the ratepayers an excellent opportunity for appraising his fitness for the position he seeks at their hands.

TWO RUNS FOR FIRE BRIGADE

The Fire Brigade had runs this morning to two different sections of the city, but with the coincidence that the property in each case was owned by Mr. Warren Hall. The first call was to 677 Water street, where there was a chimney fire at a residence occupied by Mr. Hall. No damage was done. Shortly afterward an overheated furnace pipe caused a blaze at a house at 157 Hall street, owned by Mr. Hall, and occupied by Mr. Bert Mason. The fire was extinguished by the use of chemicals, with damage amounting to $100.

NO BOOZE AT BIG PRINCETON DINNER.

PRINCETON, N.J., Dec. 8.—The senior class of Princeton will hold its class dinner this year without the usual beer. At the affair December 17 there will be substituted a non-alcoholic beverage to be known as "1914 punch." Cider also will be served.

Students of the "graduate college" have voted to exclude all intoxicating liquors from their banquets.

BORROW AT HOME.

In spite of a yearly revenue of about 130 millions, the big spending ideas of the Borden Government sends them to the money market of London for loans. We need not fear as some London papers fear, that this action, will ruin Canada's credit. Canadian loans are as sound as the bank, and sounder; for no financial crisis, no adverse financial conditions, can impair our security, which is founded upon the rocks that uphold our heritage—nothing short of an earthquake, shuffling our geological strata like a pack af cards, can destroy Canadian security for loans. But if we must borrow why not borrow from ourselves? The people show their faith in the security the government can offer. Our saving banks contain deposits amounting to about 58 million dollars. These draw three per cent. The people are willing to accept a small interest on account of the gilt-edge character of the security. The security would be the same if the government borrowed this money and paid four per cent. as it does to the London money lenders. France paid off its tremendous German war indemnity by borrowing from its own people. Why could we not borrow from our own people and give depositors in our savings banks one per cent. additional and keep our own money profitably moving?

SOUTH LANARK.

They are having a hot time in South Lanark. Nominations were made on Saturday and three candidates were nominated—Dr. Hanna, the candidate of the Conservative machine; Col. Balderson, Conservative, and Mr. Arthur Hawkes, the "British-born" ex-champion. Col. Balderson says he was "held up by highwaymen" at a convention, which "was not a convention." In protest he is a candidate against the nominee of the machine. Col. Balderson is not an opponent of the government except in regard to its machine methods. That he is feared, on this account, is shown by the fact that two ministers of the Crown came to Perth stealthily—by night—and as he puts it "tried to trap" him into signing an agreement. He is a supporter of the government, but still believes it is a government that will stand watching. He says that he "had a witness present every second the ministers were at his house"—at eleven o'clock at night—to show the urgency of the occasion in the ministers' estimation. Mr. Hawkes had his fun out of the situation. He spoke of the visiting ministers as "Nicodemuses, coming into town at night, then folding their tents and stealing away before the dawn." The situation is interesting as showing the determination of the Borden Government to have machine methods triumph. Both Conservative candidates will support the government, but the government puts its imprimatur upon the machine candidate, and will work every crank, to the end that the efficiency of the working of the machine be not discredited. A plain and unadorned supporter is not enough. He must bear the brand "made by Rogers."

JUDGES' GOWNS AND OFFICE.

The Orillia Packet censures Judge Vance of Simcoe County for holding court without wearing the official gown—the badge of office—and inseparable in thought from the seemly administration of British justice. The judge, on this occasion, established a bad precedent, and if it is admitted as a precedent, and, if other judges do likewise, we are well on the way to the conditions that obtain in western United States courts of justice where the judges sit on the bench in their shirt sleeves, and, in keeping, the lawyers surround their table with a cheval-de-frise of boot soles, and punctuate their points of argument with jets of tobacco juice. We can be democratic without being rowdy. Judicial robes are a sign of the dignity of office, and often confer dignity upon an occupant of the bench, and secure a measure of respect which his unadorned personality would not induce or evoke. A policeman in uniform carries more authority than a plain-clothes man; the uniform represents the authority of the law. The conventions of civilization, even in the most democratic conditions, demand a suitable and fitting attire for certain occasions. A gown on a judge on the bench is as much de rigeur as a dress coat at a formal dinner. There is no difference in the matter of habilimentary decorum between a judge on the bench without his gown, and a man in good society eating his dinner in his shirt sleeves. We may have ultra-democratic ideas, but we must keep to the forms, the symbols, the emblems recognized as fitting even in democratic communities where they are civilised A national flag is nothing in itself; only a bit of cloth—its symbolism is what gives it value. So with the judge's gown, the clergyman's robe and the policeman's and the soldier's uniform. Let us be democratic; but don't open the gates so wide that we become, not democraic, but demagogic; let us be liberal without becoming low.

CANADA'S SEMI-CENTENARY.

La Presse, Montreal, is anxious to have the semi-centenary of Confederation, celebrated by the holding of a World's exposition in Montreal in 1917. Le Presse proposes an international exhibition on a grand scale. It appealed personally to Sir Hugh Graham, of the Montreal Star, to cooperate with it and the Star has fallen into line. There is much to be said in favour of the proposal. In the first place Montreal, as the commercial metropolis of Canada, Canada's greatest city, is a proper centre. It has the wealth and the public spirit too, to be the proper force behind such a movement, and is in all respects well qualified for the leadership. The rest of Canada should follow and assist. But there seems to be some danger of action in this direction, at cross purposes. A Toronto newspaper in referring to the matter suggests that Toronto should steal Montreal's thunder to the extent of making "our own exhibition" conspicuous in Confederation year. Toronto is entitled to great credit for the energy she has given to the making of her great exposition—which has developed into a national affair. It has its success year after year and Toronto might be somewhat satisfied with that and not complicate the movement for a great world exhibition in 1917, with an anti-climax. The Montreal proposal involves the idea of a world exposition, and in order that Canada play her part worthily in such an event, the undivided co-operation of the whole country is necessary. It seems that Toronto might well consider co-operation instead of competition with, if not, opposition to, a world exposition, for which Montreal is moving, to celebrate the semi-centenary of Confederation. Unfortunately we can't unite politically in working for national aggrandizement, but we should easily find common ground upon the exploitation of our national resources and capabilities, and exemplification of the success of the Confederation which has made us, territorially one, as it should make us one in aim and ambition, of material and moral national development.

A CHANCE FOR MR. BORDEN.

The Toronto News says that the Borden Government has not changed the tariff, and that the food schedules are where Sir Wilfrid Laurier left them two years ago. But the News ignores the fact that the change of Government occurred upon this very question of food taxes. The Laurier Government proposed very great reduct ions in these taxes. Mr. Borden and his friends fought for the retention of the food taxes and fought successfully. Surely the responsibility for the retention of the taxes does not lie upon those who sought to remove them. Surely the responsibility for taxation lies upon those who by their control of the House of Commons have the taxing power.

Mr. Borden and his friends may say that they did not object so much as to the method of removal, as to certain political consequences which they feared. Very well. Those objections are now removed. No horrid "pact" affrights us. The Government and the House of Commons have simply to remove the duties, in the free exercise of their power to tax or not to tax.

They are in a better position to act in this way than the Laurier Government was, because the Congress of the United States has already removed or greatly reduced the duties on food and opened the American market to many of the products of Canada. Until recently, it has been said, "Let the Americans reduce their duties first." No doubt the Laurier Government was influenced by this argument, and this was the reason why it postponed action until the Americans were ready to meet it halfway. Now the Americans have done that twice: first by the reciprocity agreement, and second, by the Wilson-Underwood reductions. Consequently he last objection to the removal of our own food taxes has disappeared. The time is ripe for action. Mr. Borden has the chance of his life, the chance to become the Sir Robert Peel of Canada.—Toronto Star.

CREAM OR WHOLE MILK

Not long ago it was suggested, in all seriousness, by a Canadian produce dealer, that we return to the whole milk creamery. This dealer claimed that Canadian butter is deteriorating in quality just in proportion as the number of hand separators is increasing. Apparently dairymen are experiencing the same difficulty in Wisconsin, if we may judge from some recent remarks by Prof. C. E. Lee of that state. Prof. Lee says:

"The difference between butter made from cream skimmed at the creamery and that made from farm skimmed cream is far greater than it should be. In the monthly scoring contests caried on at the College of Agriculture last year the butter made in the factories receiving only whole milk scored two points higher than that made in the factories to which farm skimmed cream was delivered.

NOT A NECESSARY EVIL

"Despite many notions to the contrary," continues Prof. Lee, "every farmer in Wisconsin can produce cream from which superior butter can be made. If he cannot afford a milk house a small tank for holding the cream cans could be so constructed and so located that all the water pumped for the stock will pass through it. It is not advisable to store the cream in a large stock watering tank nor in the cellar. Nor should the cream obtained from one skimming be poured with the supply from previous milkings until after it has stood in the water tank for several hours. The cream in the large delivery cans should be stirred after each new lot is added and once during the day.

"Delivery to the creamery should be made three or four times each week, and a clean can, free from rust spots should be used."

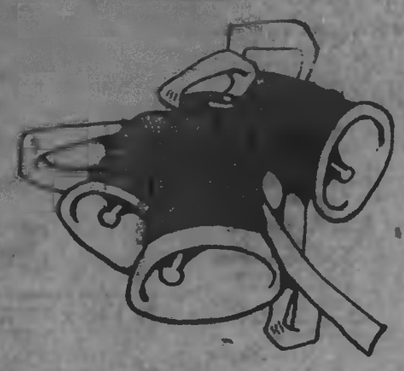
CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS



Dainty Jewelry

NEVER before have we been able to offer such a pleasing variety of novel and exclusive designs as we show this season. They must be seen to be properly appreciated. The following descriptions are, however, suggestive of their worth-while nature:

Pendants are quite the vogue. These we show are charming in design and follow the latest Parisian styles in mounting or setting. One in particular composed of emeralds and pearls, makes a most attractive and beautiful gift. Prices from $9 up.

Cut Glass – New designs in water bottles, bowls, water jugs, vases, bon-bons, sugar and creams, salad dishes, pepper and salts, &c.

Lockets – Large oval and round plain lockets, bright and Roman finish, round pearl set, hand engraved, plain, square and heart shaped. Plain lockets hand engraved without extra charge. Priced $3, $4, $5 and $10.

Novelties – There is such a bewildering array of good things in this department suitable for father, mother, sister, brother and even the baby, that it would take more space than we can spare to describe them. Let it be one of the pleasant surprises that this store holds out for Christmas shoppers.

One Disease That Is The Cause Of Enormous Loss To Turkey Raisers

ENTERO-HEPATITIS or blackhead in turkeys is a disease of fowl, infectious in its nature, usually seen in its most aggravated and fatal form among turkeys. Other fowl may be subject to the disease, but losses among them are small compared with the loss among turkeys. The first investigations as to the nature and cause of the malady were made by Dr. Theobald Smith in Rhode Island, under the joint auspices of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Rhode Island Agricultural Experiment Station during 1894 and 1895. Various investigators have since taken up the study of the disease, as it has become more widely distributed and a distinct menace to the turkey raising industry.

Detailed information relative to the manner in which the disease is transmitted from an affected to a healthy bird is lacking. It is believed that this infection is direct from the droppings or from the ground on which they have been deposited. There is still some difference of opinion as to the exact organism responsible for the lesions produced, but it is generally conceded to be a minute protozoan parasite. We anticipate conducting experiments and hope to be able to arrive at some definite conclusions regarding these and other unsettled points.

The losses from this disease have been enormous, and I believe that it is a factor responsible for the high price of turkeys. The extent of these losses is well indicated from the fact that two decades ago a single small island (Block Island), off the Rhode Island coast, provided two tons of marketable birds each year, while today but 500 pounds are available from the same locality. Statements are also current that in localities in Ontario where 10 carloads of birds were available eight years ago, it is now difficult to secure two carloads. The reason to be ascribed for this falling off in production is the difficulty of rearing stock that can withstand this affection.

In Canada the disease was first mentioned by Gilbert in the Experimental Farms Report for 1900. It has since been repeatedly reported upon evidence obtained at this laboratory and at the Bacteriological Laboratory of the Guelph Agricultural College. From the information which we have obtained through communications received at this laboratory, it is evident that there is not a province in Canada where blackhead does not make its presence felt with more or less severity each season. In some portions of the country the disease has made such inroads on the turkey industry as to almost prohibit the raising of this class of fowl.

HOW THE DISEASE GETS IN

The usual history concerning losses is that an individual having a few fowl desires to supplement his poultry operations by raising a few turkeys. He is an unsuspecting buyer of parent stock or sittings of eggs until experience has made him painfully aware of the fact that he has bought with the birds or eggs the infective agent of this disease which later separates him from his original investment and the time he has spent in caring for the young poults. The season is then too late for him to attempt another start, his premises are infected, and, discouraged at the result, he decides to relinquish further effort in this direction. It is quite common where entero-hepatitis (blackhead) makes its appearance to lose 70 per cent. of the young stock before they are sufficiently mature for table purposes.

The early symptoms presented by affected birds are not particularly characteristic. Affected birds, however, will separate from the remainder of the flock. This separation or lagging behind does not appear to be a desire for seclusion but the result of being unequal to the task of keeping up with the others from physical exhaustion. The droppings are more fluid than normal and may be streaked with yellow. Gas bubbles may be sufficiently numerous to give a frothy appearance. The head may be and usually is darker in color than normal. This dark coloration may disappear and reappear at irregular intervals while the bird is at rest, but excitement usually causes a bright red coloration.

The best means of early diagnosis is the examination of the droppings for evidence of diarrhoea or a yellow coloration of the faeces. Feeding time may prove the most appropriate for this observation. Where this is not convenient owners should provide some means of determining an infection at the earliest possible moment.

COURSE OF THE DISEASE

Affected birds if untreated may die in a few days or may linger for a week or longer after the first appearance of symptoms according to the virulence of the infecting agent. In some cases the onset is so rapid and free from outward manifestations as to be recognizable only by an autopsy. Without treatment or a complete change in diet and surroundings, the course is usually fatal.

The post mortem findings are characteristic. The lesions are confined to the liver and intestinal tract. The liver is the seat of lesions which appear on the surface as circular spots about the size of a five or 10 cent piece, yellow or whitish yellow in color, and surrounded by what to the naked eye appears to be normal liver tissue. At the point between the lesion and the liver tissue, a ring almost bright red in color is observed. These lesions in the liver if cut open, may have a uniform color throughout or in the more chronic cases there may be a core in the centre. The intestines may be the seat of a chronic inflammation. The caeca or two blind guts which lie along the course of the intestine and enter it about six inches from the vent are usually inflamed and in either or both a single or a number of lesions the size of a walnut are usually present. These lesions are yellow in color, have a thick wall and a degenerated centre. There may be in addition to the above in severe, acute or chronic cases, either a localized or general peritonitis (inflammation of the outside wall of the intestines) with adhesions and fluid in the cavity.

PREVENTION AND TREATMENT

The placing of the poults on clean, sanded board floors in a dry well lighted and well ventilated building with a southern exposure, is considered a means of prevention. The continued contact with the floors, however, tends to weaken the poults. I believe it to be an advantage to see that they are quartered on sanded board floors at night and prevented from ranging in the early morning when the grass is wet. When the birds are older the roosting places should receive consideration. The free application of lime and sulphur wash (that used in spraying fruit trees is suitable) on the ground under the roosting places and the ground on which they are reared two or three times during the season, will destroy any infection on the ground.

We believe that persons raising turkeys should be very careful not to introduce the disease when making additions to improve their stock. A turkey tom may be a source of infection when he heads the flock of a neighborhood, or the disease may be introduced with sittings of eggs. The greatest care should be exercised to prevent any possible source of infection reaching a flock or locality now free from disease.

CATCH THE DISEASE EARLY

The early diagnosis of the first case is an essential feature in connection with the prevention and treatment. As has already been indicated, it is the early diagnosis that will prove the most essential factor in successful prevention and treatment. The isolation of the first case may many times prevent further manifestations of the disease. From our experiments, however, it appears that there may be chronic carriers of the disease whose droppings are continually infected, notwithstanding the fact that they exhibit very slight if any symptoms. This suggests that isolation may not be as potent a factor in preventing losses as desired, but I believe that it should be enforced to such an extent as will prevent the old and young flocks intermingling after the first appearance of the disease.

Our experiments in the treatment of entero-hepatitis have been directed to the finding of some agent that will successfully carry affected birds over an acute attack and enable their being conditioned for market.

MURIATIC ACID BENEFICIAL

There is to my knowledge no known specific for controlling the ravages of this affection. The use of muriatic acid in the drinking water was found some six years ago to be followed by beneficial results on affected turkeys that I was trying to raise at my home. Later it was given a further trial and three years ago a single turkey at this laboratory made an apparent recovery. During the past two years we have recommended it as being the best medicinal agent which we know to assist in overcoming the affection. Last year five affected birds recovered after receiving liberal allowances of this acid. One of these which was later autopsied to determine the presence or absence of lesions was found to be normal in every respect so far as we could determine.

Some apparently remarkable recoveries have followed the use of this acid but one cannot hope to bring all affected birds through an attack. I was first prompted to use this acid as I found that the contents of the digestive tract in turkeys dead of entero-hepatitis or black head to be alkaline in reaction.

The acid to be used is a teaspoonful of muriatic acid (Acid. Mur. Dil B.P.) in a quart of drinking water. This acidulated water should be placed in a porcelain or glass vessel and is suggested in the hope that the birds may be carried over an acute attack. At the outset when the birds show evidence of being severely affected, it may be of advantage to triple the amount of acid (using three teaspoonfuls to the quart of water) for the first three days. This amount will not injure the turkeys and may assist them in more rapidly overcoming the infection.

They should be confined during the period on dry, sanded board floors in well lighted and well ventilated quarters and allowed access to no other liquid. If allowed to roam they may obtain sufficient water for their requirements from the dew laden grass or other sources and, therefore, will not drink the acidulated water. If confined green food should be supplied in addition to the grain ration.

Other medicinal agents may give equally satisfactory results in the treatment of affected birds as that above outlined, in which case my advice would be to stick to the remedy that has proved the most effective. If such other medicinal agents are effective we will appreciate learning of them. We will also appreciate information as to the success or otherwise of the treatment herein recommended.

SENDING MATERIAL FOR EXAMINATION

Where it is desired to determine the nature of any condition causing losses among turkeys, an examination will be undertaken provided suitable material is supplied. It is preferable to have affected turkeys forwarded alive by express in order that a thorough autopsy may be made. The express charges are paid by the Biological Laboratory. When the condition has been found at autopsy the tissues may be sent by mail if properly packed and preserved. Tissues may be preserved in fine alcohol or a solution of one part of formaldihyde to nine parts of water. After an examination has been made, suggestions will be forwarded for the prevention of further loss. Specimens sent should be addressed to the:

Biological Laboratory, Ottawa, Canada.

Information concerning the losses which have been experienced should be sent with the material, in order that it may be properly identified. The name and address should be written plainly in order that the result of the examination may be forwarded to the sender with the least possible delay.

LOST SIGHT—THEN LIFE

Apoplexy Rendered Captain Vance Blind Some Hours Before Death.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.— Death came suddenly to Captain James D. Vance, of 854 Manning Avenue.

Going home in the evening, he went upstairs, became blind from an attack of apoplexy, and died some hours later.

The late Capt. Vance was born in Mariposa Township, near Lindsay, 68 years ago. He came to Toronto thirteen years ago, and opened a small grocery store on Borden Street. For the last six years he had been captain of the Maple Leaf, one of the passenger boats plying Sturgeon Lake and the Scugog River. He was very well known among tourists.

In religion he was a Methodist and in politics a Conservative. He is survived by his widow, two brothers and

DIES AND PLATES

Fate of Those Used In Printing Our Money and Stamps.

ALL ARE JEALOUSLY GUARDED

But, While the Dies Are Invariably Saved, the Steel Plates Are Melted Down and Become Some Part of the Armament of Uncle Sam's Warships.

All of the notes, bonds, checks and miscellaneous issues of the government, including postage stamps, internal revenue stamps and the different denominations of currency issued to national banks, are printed from engraved plates in the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington.

The original dies are never destroyed. By a system of transferring the impression or design is passed from the die to a soft steel roll, which is later hardened. A hundred plates can be produced from one hard steel roll.

All of this engraved work receives the same supervision and is accounted for just as accurately as the securities that are printed therefrom. Every morning the plates are issued to the various printing divisions of the bureau, and in the evening, when the day's work is over, they are returned to the vaults of the custodian of dies, rolls and plates, where they are counted, checked and locked up with time locks.

After approximately 50,000 impressions are printed from a steel plate it becomes useless so far as its original purpose is concerned. The delicately engraved lines and geometric lathe work become worn, and the portrait loses its detail. When the plate becomes so affected as to render it unfit for further satisfactory printing a duplicate is ordered to be made for printing future orders from the treasury department. The old plate is then canceled and laid aside, subsequently to be destroyed.

This destruction, or, rather, transformation, takes place just after the 1st of January each year under the direction of a committee appointed by the secretary of the treasury composed of three persons, one of whom represents the secretary and acts as chairman, another the commissioner of internal revenue and the third looking after the interests of the comptroller of the currency.

Under instructions from the department the committee makes a schedule in duplicate of all the canceled material, the original list being retained by the committee to form a part of its report to the secretary and the duplicate placed inside the box in which the plates are to be packed. The boxes are made to hold an average of 150 pounds each. As each box is filled the cover is nailed on and the box numbered and sealed with the treasury seal. The sealed boxes are then stored in the vaults of the bureau until such time as is convenient for their conveyance to the place of destruction.

The committee recently reported to the secretary of the treasury the destruction of 4,826 plates, weighing 41,810 pounds—over twenty tons—withdrawn from the vaults. To convey this vast amount of metal required the services of eight laborers and a team of draft horses attached to one of the huge money wagons of the bureau making eight trips to the United States navy yard, where the cremation takes place in the foundry.

On arriving at its destination the committee directs the unloading. The boxes are removed from the wagon on to hand trucks and taken by elevator up to the floor level of the cupola door. The boxes are here opened, the carbon duplicate schedule removed and the plates again counted and checked as they are cast into the furnace.

From the time the plates are taken from the vaults of the custodian until the last one is thrown into the fire they are under the watchful eyes of the members of the committee, who see that none goes astray, for if one or two of these plates should fall into illegitimate hands and later be put to improper use it would probably cause considerable embarrassment to the government.

In order to ascertain whether the destruction has been complete, the committee must wait until all the melted steel is drawn from the furnace and the cupola opened and cooled. The melted steel is poured into molds covering a great variety of castings that eventually find their way to the armament of our modern battleships.

It may be a yoke for an eight inch gun weighing three or four tons, or it may be some minor casting for a torpedo tube. It is not beyond the range of possibility that the officer who sights one of the immense fourteen inch rifles may have in his pocket at the time a note of some denomination printed from a steel money plate that has developed by a series of evolutions into a part of the very gun he is adjusting to wreak destruction upon any object in the path of its flying projectile.

What appears to be a waste in one department of the government thus becomes a valuable asset in another.—New York Times.

THE YIELD OF CHEESE

A recent bulletin, No. 334, from the Cornell Experiment Station, discusses factors affecting the yield and moisture content of cheese. The conclusions reached by W. W. Fisk, who conducted the experiments, are as follows:

1. Cutting the curd fine causes a larger loss of fat in the whey than cutting the curd coarse. Coarse-cut curd increases the yield of green and of cured cheese and increases the moisture content of the cheese. If great care is not taken and the pieces of curd are broken, the result will be the same as a fine cut.

2. Setting the milk at a high temperature reduces the loss of fat in the whey more than setting the milk at a low temperature. Setting at a high temperature increases the yield of the green and the cured cheese. This increase is probably due to the increased moisture content of the cheese.

3. A low acid at the time of removing the whey increases the yield of the green and the cured cheese. The low acid also increases the percentage of moisture in the cheese. If a high acid is developed, it not only reduces the yield and the percentage of moisture in the cheese, but also injures the quality of the cheese.

4. Stirring the curd with the hand as the last of the whey is removed reduces the percentage of moisture in the green and the cured cheese. Stirring reduces the yield and causes a larger loss of fat in the whey.

5. Pressing the curd fast reduces the yield because more fat is squeezed out of the curd. This loss of fat makes the cheese pressed fast appear to contain more moisture.

6. If the curds are piled deep more moisture is retained in the green and the cured cheese. Piling the curds deep increases the yield of cheese.

7. An increase of salt in the curd results in the reduction of moisture in the cheese.

8. Holding the curd at a low temperature after the whey is removed increases the percentage of moisture in the green and the cured cheese and increases the yield.

9. An increase of rennet to a certain point increases the moisture content of cheese. This is due to greater coagulation, and has the same effect as setting at a high temperature or cutting the curd hard.

10. Cutting the curd soft reduces the percentage of moisture and the yield of the green cheese, and also increases the loss of fat in the whey. Cutting soft has the same effect as setting at a low temperature, or as a small amount of rennet.

Search Warrant Party Had Some Time In Dummer

Head of the Hill House Said to Have Produced Old Sword

COPS' COOL RECEPTION

Detectives Newhall and Meagher, and County Constable Cochrane had their hands full a few days ago when they motored into Dummer to search the Hill home for several fur-lined coats, which were eventually found on the premises.

The story as it was related to an Examiner reporter is one of natural comedy.

Said one of the officers as they entered the house:

"Well, Mr. Hill, I see you're in trouble again."

"Well, if there's going to be any trouble we'll get in and have a slice of it," was the reply from Mr. Hill who possessed himself of an old sword and impressively felt the edge, significantly glancing toward the officers.

The intelligence was conveyed to the family that the officers were armed with a search warrant and Detective Newhall read it according to the usual formality of the law.

"It's bogus," shouted Mrs. Hill who would not believe it, and finally they gave it to a daughter of the house. The latter struggled bravely through the legal language of the warrant, but at times met a word that brought her to an abrupt stop.

Detective Meagher was the only representative of Webster whose word was accredited. Probably it was because he was comparatively unknown to the family. At any rate Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Newhall were designated forcibly, if somewhat inelegantly.

Finally the reading arrived at the section where it named the husband as the owner of the farm and this aroused the ire of Mrs. Hill. "Own this farm," she is reported to have said, "not a single match in the house, not even a stick on the farm," and so on enumerating some of the minor articles around the place by way of emphasizing the husband's position. It appeared that Mrs. Hill played first fiddle around that fireside and she was determined that no statements to the contrary should go unquestioned.

The search was begun at last but not without much excitement in which Mrs. Hill bordered on hysterics, and Mr. Hill received a crack on the jaw, and the officers kept one eye on the dogs which recognized the intruders as such and threatened to take a bite or two out of them.

The expurgated story sounds tame in comparison with that related to the reporter, but sufficient has been given to indicate that the officers had a stormy session before they got the goods.

FIRE BRIGADE'S ANNUAL BANQUET

Will be Held on Thursday, December 18—Preparations Now Under Way

The men of the City Fire Department are holding their annual banquet on Thursday, December the 18th. This takes the form of a family gathering, and the relatives and children of the firemen are invited. Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock, after which a short programme will be rendered. Following the programme will be some speech-making, and then the distribution of presents from the Christmas tree.

The banquet is a custom that was introduced some years ago by Mr. Rogt. Kingan, and it has become an annual affair, to which the members of the brigade look forward with a great deal of pleasure.

Already the firemen are busy decorating the large dormitory, which will be converted into a banquet hall for the occasion. Large red bells and many coloured streamers are stretched across the ceiling, while the walls are decorated with large Union Jacks and flags of the Dominion.

The annual banquet is not only anticipated with delight by the firemen themselves, but by about seventy-five local people who have reason to hope they will be invited to the affair, at which the fire laddies and Chief Howard always make splendid host.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY IS REFERRED TO

"Oh You Peter!" Discusses Some Remarks on This Question

Editor of The Examiner:

Of late, I have been somewhat amused at the little squirts of intelligence that occasionally ooze from the editorial columns of "The Review," particularly in reference to Tuberculosis Sunday.

In their issue of Nov. 24th they even go so far as to make sport of the subject by the introduction of a new Saint, namely: "Saint Tuberculosis."

Now I should like to warn that self-appointed "Reformer" that if the "Bugs," (technically known as tubercle bacilli), ever get into his anatomy they will make short work of him. I have a certain amount of sympathy for him, however, for I believe he has come to our city with a worthy object in view: that of reforming the world at any cost, believing that the medium of the press is better suited to his talents than the pulpit, and that Peterborough, being a notoriously bad hole, is the best place in which to inaugurate his campaign of salvation.

Here, again, I desire to interject a word of caution by hinting that he had better go slowly for I have in mind a host of new-comers who were inflated, with the same notions (and they were not all connected with the press either) who invariably met their Waterloo.

The people of Peterborough, for the most part, have well defined opinions of their own, and any person who seeks to undermine them treads upon dangerous ground. If he thinks he will gain notoriety by making light of consumption and its kindred ailments, he had better beware, for the citizens of Peterborough are thoroughly alive to the subject, and will resent any such levity; for, where is the household or family connection that has not felt the blight of the terrible White Plague?

Perhaps you think I express myself too strongly, then allow me to quote a part of the editorial referred to:

"We have not so much objection to 'Temperance Sunday,' . . . . but 'Tuberculosis Sunday' not only offends our sense of the fitness of things, but the designation is repulsive."

One would think he had come from a country where the curse of drink was unknown, and had suddenly found himself in the midst of a leprosy colony, (he refers to leprosy farther on in the same article).

Taking the above extract for what it is worth is it not a malicious insult to the many unfortunate ones afflicted with tuberculosis?

If he considers the spectacle of a cruel husband, mad with drink, beating his wife and family, as not so very objectionable, while the sight of a poor dying consumptive fills him with feelings of repulsion, then I must say the moral side of his make-up is sadly warped.

O. U. Peter.

GILLESPIE for MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the Municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE

There's a Saving of About Half in the Price of These Coats

$9.50 the one line, and $13.95 the other: both being items from the Sale that followed our reception; the present very low prices ending to-morrow (Tuesday night.)

Those at $9.50 are garments of $15 and $18 worth, and the selection of about fifty coats shows mostly only one of a kind.

Every coat is modishly designed in seasonable materials, and is wonderfully cheap at $9.50

The Coats marked $13.95 are most exclusive in their make-up. Such beautiful fabrics as Soft Velour Cloths, Zibelines, Blanket Cloths, Rough Tweeds, etc. being employed.

Some have smart facings of velvet, and all are of that superior class of outer wear, which is not purchased for less than $25 and $22 in the ordinary way. Very evident therefore is the liberal value at $13.95

Your attention is directed to the display of these two lines, to be seen in our Centre Window this evening and to-morrow

A LEGEND OF EARLY CANADA SUBJECT OF ADDRESS TO LADIES

Miss M. O'Connell Spoke on the Legend of Tadousac to T. A. S. Ladies' Literary

AN INTERESTING EVENING

Story of the French Priest Who Foretold His Death—Legend of the Mysterious Following of Bells.

CANADA RICH IN HISTORY WAS REMARK.

A large and appreciative audience gathered in T.A.S. Hall Friday evening to hear Miss M. A. O'Connell on a 'Legend of Tadousac.' Hed address was short, but very interesting, and evidently enjoyed by all. Tadousac, as the confluence of the Saguenay and the St. Lawrence Rivers, was the first port entered by the French before their arrival at the Rock of Quebec, and was the scene of their first establishment on Canadian soil. From it, went forth the first missionaries to convert and civilize the region of the Saguenay and the mysterious north, making it the cradle of Christianity in Canada. Tradition says that the first mass celebrated in Canada was offered on the site of the present village of Tadousac.

The legend itself deals with the circumstances surrounding the death of the greatest of the apostles of Christianity and civilization in Canada; the Rev. Father Jean Baptiste de la Brosse. On the last evening of his life, being then in very good health, he is said to have predicted his death a few hours later, and to have left instructions for his funeral rites, promising help in the carrying out of his wishes. At twelve o'clock that night ,the chapel bell tolled, and the priest was found lying dead on the chapel floor, his clasped hands resting on the lower altar step. A storm had arisen, but the men of Tadousac, relying on the promised aid, set out and found the priest who awaited the summons on the lonely Isle Aux Coudres, while every bell along the St. Lawrence, in every church tower, rang forth a requiem, "swung by some unseen power." The legend embodied in verse by Professor Caven of Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, P.E. I. was beautifully rendered by the speaker.

Rev. Father Galvin spoke a few words in praise of the power. He referred to the rich material for history, when the Catholic Church did many interesting legends which deal with the early part of Canadian history, when the Catholic Church died so much for the upbuilding of the country and civilizing of the Indians. He spoke of Father Jones, the guardian of the Jesuit archives in Montreal, where a detailed record of the early missionaries' work is kept.

A piano duet was well rendered by the Misses Margaret McDonald and Helen Shaver. Mr. Ed. Desautel's recitation from Drummond was heartily encored, and Miss Margaret Clancy gave a vocal solo.

Accompanists, Miss L. Hurley and Miss L. Clancy. Miss K. McCarthy presided.

Natives Are Well Informed

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I noticed in your paper a short article relating to whether the savage races were more enlightened than we were, in quick communication from one palce to another. With your permission, I will enlighten, perhaps, many of your readers on this matter. I resided for over six years in West and S. W. Africa, and I could quote many instances of the native being better informed as regards the events happening in those remote regions than the white men. It is an understood theory, that the natives use drums made out of goat skin and beat them in the village and carry the sounds by native telegraphy from village to village, and also they have fast native runners, a kind of express runners, but this is quite practical, as sound carries a long distance in Africa. The silence is so dense, you could cut it with a knife.

I could quote instances where the black races of Africa are ahead of the white race in many instances, as regards ingenuity, foresight, etc., etc.

ONE THOUSAND PEOPLE SAW THE HAYSEED CARNIVAL

Six Hundred and Fifty Attended Performance in the Y.M.C.A. Friday Night

Six hundred and fifty people saw the popular Hayseed Carnival at the Y.M.C.A. Friday night. The entertainment was a gratifying success, and Mr. Thompson, Physical Director of the "Y" is to be congratulated on the thorough training, which showed in every one of the drills, given by the "Gym." classes.

Mutt and Jeff were in their element again that night, and ably assisted by the chorus of "hayseeds" they kept the crowd in laughter during the evening.

As four hundred attended the Thursday night performance, over one thousand people in all saw the Carnival, and all were pleased with the entertainment.

NO CANDIDATES HAVE BEEN ANNOUNCED YET IN THE SOUTH WARD

Ald. Buller's Vacancy Has Brought Forward No Definite Announcements.

MR. BRAUND TOO BUSY.

While the attention of the ratepayers has been focused upon the mayoralty contest and several of the City Wards, there has been no mension made of possible contenders for the vacancy in the South Ward. The street has provided not a single name in the general gossip rgarding the coming elections. Mr. R. C. Braund has been approached, but has declined to offer himself as a candidate. He intends to spend from six weeks to two months in England next summer attending the big congress of the Salvation Army, and his business activities make too great a demand on his time.

This does not mean that the residents of the South Ward have entirely ignored the question, but there have been no definite announcements forthcoming. Among the names of citizens who have been suggested as possibilities or as worthy candidates, if they could be impressed into the civic arena are Mr. T. H. Hooper, Dr. Wightman, Mr. E. L. Goodwill, Mr. W. S. Robinson, Mr. J. O. Fife, Mr. Andrew Brown and others. However, there have been no real developments as yet.

MRS. PANKHURST IS RELEASED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 8.—Accompanied by a suffragette bodyguard in twenty taxicabs, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was driven in state from Paddington station, on her arrival from Exeter jail where she was released after a hunger strike, to the handsome suite of rooms in Lincoln's Inn House where she will recuperate. She will probably be imprisoned again later.

WARDEN PRESENTED WITH A WATCH

COBOURG, Dec. 8.—Once more the County Councillors of Durham and Northumberland County have attested their feeling of the high worth of their Warden, Mr. Joseph Hickson, when on his vacating the chair at the close of the session, held on Thursday last, he was presented with a magnificent gold watch, with chain and fob attached. On the outside the initials "J. H." were beautifully engraved. On the dome inside the inscription read: "Presented to Joseph Hickson, Warden of the Counties of Durham and Northumberland, for the year 1913."

The presentation was made by Mr. J. C. Kells, of Millbrook, assisted by Mr. A. A. Colwell, of Newcastle, and Mr. Norman McGill, of Cavan.

HOG CHOLERA DISCOVERED

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 8.—Twenty-four fine hogs en route from Cottam near Windsor to Gunns' packing plant in Toronto, were killed here to-day, when the Dominion Government Onspectors found that they were suffering from hog cholera. Two animals were found dead and several others were sick. Acting on advice from Ottawa the inspectors killed every animal. The affair has created a great sensation and a special inspector has been rushed to Cottam to try and locate the origin of the cholera.

HOW TO KEEP ACTIVE

When Old Age Overtakes Us.

Mrs. John Widmayer of Jackson, Mich., says: "Although 69 years of age, and naturally, because of my advanced age, in an enfeebled condition, I can truthfully say that Vinol has done wonders to keep me as active as I am. It is the best medicine to create strength that I ever saw. This spring I was very much run down and worn out but I took Vinol and soon felt stronger and able to work about the house. I can recommend Vinol as a very invigorating tonic."

Should the system get run down—digestive organs weak — the blood thin and sluggish—take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicinal—body-building properties of cods' livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body-builders and strength creators in the world for aged people.

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

"FINE FEATHERS"

Another of Eugene Walter's Dramatic Successes to be Presented Here—The Original New York Co.

In the two principal cities of the United States last season, it was said that the theatre yielded more successful productions than in any similar period during the past decade and for that reason the theatregoing population of other centres are promised much that is good this year. Of all the pronounced 'hits,' however, the most powerful dramatic offering was "Fine Feathers," which H. H. Frazee produced in Chicago in August, 1912, and kept current at his Cort Theatre there until the Xmas holidays. Following its run in the Western metropolis it was presented at the Astor Theatre, New York, and remained there for a balance of the season. That is the production which comes to the Grand Theatre for matinee and evening performance on Saturday next, Dec. 13, and in which theatregoers will have an opportunity to see what is considered quite the most verile of all the plays written by Eugene Walter, who has to his credit such success as "Paid In Full," "The Easiest Way," "The Wolf," and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

In "Fine Feathers," however, Mr. Walter has dwelt upon the futility of graft, as a road to happiness, for the premise of his story, which centres around a young chemist, and his wife, who are fighting an uphill fight on $25 per week. A business man comes along with what he calls an "opportunity," and the wife concurs in his opinion, seeing ahead that the money will bring a certain amount of luxury. The husband, however, sees in the proposition only "graft" and while he does not change his viewpoint, he accepts the "opportunity" because of his love for his wife. The masterful manner in which the story is developed has served to place "Fine Feathers" among the most profound classics of the world and, according to the consensus of opinion in this country it is being heralded as the biggest play ever written for the American stage.

Local Nimrods Have Made Big Killings on Week-end Trips and Partially Escape the H. C. of Living.

By the number of rabbits reported to have shot during the past few weeks, the woods around the City must be real warrens. Four employees of the Brinton Carpet Company got 32 on Saturday, twenty or more a week ago and on the previous Saturday they brought home 15 or 16. They have been gunning in a woods below the second bride and without the protective snow the rabbits stood out clearly against the bare ground and were comparatively easy marks. There have been dozens of other hunters who have shot four and five apiece every Saturday lately, with the result that rabbit pie has been a frequent

Money Meaning Of Taxation Of Imported Food

The Canadian Tariff Adds Nearly Eleven Million Dollars a Year to Canada's Bill of Food Imports

When the man on the street first confronts a proposal to make foodstuffs cheaper by wiping out the duties upon them he naturally says: "What help will that give us? Canada is a food-producing country." Canada is a food-producing country, but nevertheless food taxes hamper and cripple the food consumer at every turn. Salt and the sauce that savour it. The the breakfast or dinner table that is not dutiable—from the roast to the sale and the sauce that savor it. The jam that the poor man spreads on his bread for mid-day lunch is enhanced in price, even if it is of Canadian manufacture, by the tariff wall that stands against the imported article, although Canadian jelly and jam go out into the world to compete in open markets elsewhere. Canadian flour, it has recently been shown, sells for as much as sixty cents a barrel less in Britain than at home despite the cost of freightage across the Atlantic.

If no food came in over the tariff wall the food duties would still be responsible for a very great increase of prices above those that can be secured in free markets. How great the burden it can be demonstrated from the customs returns as to the foodstuffs that actually do come in. The man who imports food over the Canadian tariff wall has to pay an average duty of over twenty per cent. He imports, therefore, only when he is forced to. The ramifications of tariff advantage are widespread. The duty on sugar is all the stiffer because the grower of sugar beets in Kent county or up in Southern Alberta stands behind the refiner, who is directly protected.

How great in the aggregate is the toll upon foodstuffs, taken by those inside the protected circle, and who are enabled thereby to raise the price of the home article, is indicated by the following table showing a number of the principal food imports. There are many other items in the tariff on food. The seventeen selected were imported for home consumption as follows during the year ending March 31, 1913:

	Value.	Duty.
Feed animals	$ 708,460	$ 182,114
Breadstuffs, cereals, and biscuits	4,606,478	743,897
Fresh and canned vegetables	3,242,214	806,260
Eggs	2,783,665	397,123
Fish	1,606,063	301,115
Fruits and nuts	6,782,305	1,821,422
Sugar, syrup and molasses	17,466,917	4,181,542
Meats and poultry	5,389,673	1,840,547
Lard and similar substances	1,230,180	273,593
Butter	2,081,809	252,311
Sauces and catsup	316,462	94,476
Cheese	202,183	44,818
Jellies and jams	808,242	202,060
Mustard	216,434	44,767
Salt	137,240	34,936
Honey	66,871	16,834
Cocoanuts, cocoa nuts, chocolate, and coffee N. O. P.	1,404,894	255,824
Total	$51,824,330	$10,854,436

Were the duties on these articles to be wiped out, the direct saving would be over ten millions a year. The indirect saving would represent a sum incalculably greater. The water that trickles over the top of a mill-dam gives no indication of the volume that would be released by opening the sluice. There are other things than tariffs involved in the appalling increase in the cost of the necessaries of life, but the tariff is an important factor in producing the result we all deplore. The taxation of food is indefensible. It should be ended.

The Moon Is In The "Apogee"

On Friday next the moon will rise at halfpast three in the afternoon and set at about eight o'lock the next morning. The length of time that the moon is above the horizon each day varies during the month, and also during the year. On the average the moon is much longer above th horizon during the winter time than in the summer. The distance of the moon from us also varies during each month more than 30,000 miles. The nearest point to the earth is called "perigee" and its farthest point from the earth is called "apogee," to-day the moon is in the latter position.

Sunday the planet Saturn was in "opposition" to the sun, that is the planet was at a point in the sky exactly opposite to that of the sun.

On Wednesday the planet Mercury will be at its greatest distance west of the sun.

On Friday Saturn and the moon will be within about six degrees of each other.

Both Saturn and Mars are well up from the east between 9 and 10 o'clock at night. Saturn appears as a yellowish white star abopt five degrees northeast of the bright star Aldebaran in the constellation Taurus. Mars is about 30 degrees further to the north-east and shines with a bright reddish light just under and in line with the twin stars Castor and Pollux in Gemini. The planets can always be recognized from the fact that they shine with a steady light and do not twinkle as the stars do. Mars is now distant from us about 63 millions of miles, whilst Saturn is more than ten times as far away. Mars is about 4,200 miles in diameter, whilst the body of Saturn is 73,000 miles across; this accounts for the fact that Saturn is so bright though so much farther away.

From December 1st until the 14th the earth is passing diagonally across the path of a meteor swarm. The meteors when they strike the earth's atmosphere appear to come from a point in the constellation Gemini, a little to the north and west of the place where the planet Mars now is. These meteors leave but short trails and are likely to be most numerous on the night of Wednesday, Dec. 10th.

Music & Drama

THE LIGHT ETERNAL.

The Light Eternal, played a return engagement Saturday afternoon and evening at the Grand Opera House, when good houses greeted both performances. The cast, in its entirety, was the same as that seen here a year ago. Mr. John Milton, in the rol of Marcus Valerius, the Christian, made a deep impression, as also did Miss Louise Dunbar, in the character of the Princess, Caesar's daughter. The story of the struggles of Christianity in the days of the Romans, intermingled with the beautiful love affair of Marcus Valerius and Caesar's daughter, was strikingly told and will not soon be forgotten by those fortunate enough to be present.

Conservation Of Human Life

Rev. Mr. Peever Preached on This Subject Last Evening

The Rev. R. G. Peever delivered a powerful sermon on the "Conservation of Human Life," in the George Street Methodist Church yesterday evening. He took for his text, "The Son of Man Has Come to Seek and to Save That Which is Lost."

In opening his sermon Mr. Peever said that one of the great problems of Canada and the United States to-day was the conservation of natural resources, to prevent the depletion of the fish in their lakes, the streams of their fur, and the forests of their wooded wealth. Our mines and water powers were being controlled by a few people. The great question was, "How are we to replete our waters with fish and fur? How can we reforest our wooded areas with trees, and how can we retain our mines and water powers for the future generations.

But there was a greater problem which was absorbing the mind of all thoughtful people. That was the conservation of human life." This was the greatest problems on top of God's earth. As evidence of the interest of our people in the latter question, we have had recently certain great reads placed before our Peterborough people. Wise physicians have told us of the preventable plague of tuberculosis. Police women have told us of the need of police women and morality officers. Medical school experts tell us of the great need of the medical inspection and supervision of our day schools and pupils, and everywhere we are warned to keep our boys and girls off the streets during the late hours. These things suggest the fact that as never before the church and state are working along the idea of the "conservation of human life."

For it was true to-day that Jesus Christ placed a child in the midst and said the little child is the state of the kingdom of God on earth. It is true that Jesus to-day still pleads that man is better than a sheep, and the great principle of the Gospel was not only the redemption of, but the conservation and preservation of human life to the great purposes of God.

As a further evidence of the interest of manhood in the value of human life, we have an unknown undaunted labourer pleading the cause of Dublin's poor to London crowds.

In the last twenty-five years, $300,000,000,000 had been spent on the upkeep of European standing armies. Last year nearly 1,000,000,000 cigarettes were smoked in Canada, and already for this year, the figures showed that in three months the consumption of cigarettes was 50,000 greater than for the same period last year.

Think of the awful toll of human life when 60,000 girls and young women died in Canada and the United States each year as the cost of the lust of men, and that in that awful life of shame their life can be but five years. Then, too, 60,000 pure girls and young women are required to fill their places in the life of shame.

The world should awake to these facts, a new standard of morality should be accepted by the public concerned. Thus, the conservation of human life was the greatest problem and highest privilege of mankind.

OLD COUNTRY NEWS

SCOTLAND.

The commencement of the debate in the Tarland right-of-way case, which has been appealed to the Court of Session, has been filed for 20th January.

At Inverness Council meeting Lord-Provost Birnie paid a tribute to the services of the late Ewen Macdonald, who had been water manager for the past twenty years.

A fatal cliff accident occurred at Birsay, Orkney. Simon Anderson, Swannay, was engaged in looking after sheep on the cliffs when he fell over and was killed.

Wilfred Buchan, Cement House, Gardenstown, at present precentor in the Gardenstown Parish Church, has been appointed organist and choirmaster of New Aberdour Parish Church at a salary of $100 per annum.

James Mallis, commission agent, Inverness, who is a candidate for Inverness Town Council, fell down a stone stair in a tenement in Milburn Road, and received serious injuries. He was engaged in canvassing at the time.

The half-yearly feeing market was held at Kirkwall. Heavy rain fell, but in spite of this a large number came to town. Foremen were getting £14, second hands to £12, and boys to £8 for the half-year. Women were not to be had.

At a meeting of the Inverness Chamber of Commerce, the question of the establishment of an Agricultural College at Inverness was discussed, the view taken being that Highland students would be more easily induced to attend there than at any other centre.

The announcement that Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. Gordon, of the Gordon Highlanders, had been appointed Commandant of the Queen Victoria School for the Sons of Soldiers and Sailors at Dunblane was inaccurate. The choice of a successor to the present Commandant will be intimated later.

Good progress is being made with the making of the foundation of the new shooting lodge on Conglass-side. Aided by the fine weather, the trenches are far advanced. The site is about a mile from Tominroul-Ballindalloch road, and is well sheltered. The lodge is intended for the shooting tenant of the Lecht shootings.

It is understood that Sir J. M. Barrie, who occupied Tenandry Cottage at the head of the Pass of Killiecrankie this summer, is likely again to take up residence there next year. Sir James was greatly pleased with the environment of the historic district, and appreciated the retirement afforded by the situation of Tenandry.

The wedding will take place shortly of Major the Hon. Robert F. Carnegie, Reserve of Officers, Gordon Highlanders, of Hillhead Estates, British East Africa, son of the late and half-brother of the present Earl of Southesk, and Violet Mabel, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Affleck Fraser, of Reelig, Inverneesshire.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Sir Trevor Dawson, director of the Vickers' shipbuilding armament firm, says their Canadian works are eminently prosperous. They have been promised repairs for a hundred large steamers on the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. They hope later to have the Canadian artillery work. Their establishment would also be able to construct warships.

WEDDING BELLS

STOCK—BEACH.

On Saturday evening a quiet wedding was solemnized by the Rev. E. E. Johnson, of the Bethany Tabernacle, when Miss Leilah Beach, daughter of Mr. Robert Beach, City, was united in marriage to Mr. Percy Stock, son of Mr. Harry Stock, Sherbrooke Street.

SMITH—GRIFFITH.

On December 1st, Mr. George Smith, until recently engaged in the drawing room of the Canadian General Electric Company, and residing at 307 Frederick Avenue, was united in Schenectady, U.S.A., in the bonds of holy matrimony to Miss Mary Griffith, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Griffith of that City.

The marriage service, which took place at the residence of the bride's parents, was performed by the Rev. G. R. Lunn, D.D., in the presence of a few intimate friends. The best man was the bride's brother, while Miss Lettrick filled the role of maid of honour.

After a brief honeymoon trip the happy couple will take up residence in Schenectady, where the bridegroom has secured a lucrative appointment.

OBITUARY

THE LATE ANNIE FIFE.

Annie Fife, formerly of this City, and daughter of the late Robert Fife, passed away early this morning in Orillia. Mr. W. T. Belleghem leaves this afternoon to take charge of the funeral arrangements, and the remains will be taken to Norwood on Tuesday.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock to the Westwood Cemetery.

THE LATE MRS. HANRAHAN.

The death occurred at her home in East City yesterday afternoon of Mary Ryan, widow of the late Edward Hanrahan.

The late Mrs. Hanrahan, was ninety years of age, and was born in Ireland. About 70 years ago she came to Canada and settled in Douro. She moved to Peterborough 12 years ago, and has since resided in this City.

During her residence in this City she was a faithful member of St. Peter's Church. She was very well known and was highly respected both in Douro and in this City.

The deceased lady leaves to mourn her loss six daughters, Mrs. M. Kylie, Rogers Street; Mrs. Allen, Douro; Mrs. John Sullivan, Park Street; Mrs. James Collins, Indian River; Mrs. Matthew Sullivan, Sault Ste. Marie, and Mrs. Leahy of Douro. One son, Mr. Jas. Hanrahan of Lakefield, also survives her.

H LL CITY SCORED SEVEN TO THE WANDERER'S ONE

An Unexpected Slaughter--Manchester United Trim Local Rivals at Hyde Road--Swindon Back in Winning Form ---League Tables

Tail scores are getting to be quite common in the second division. Last week Leeds City whitewashed Notts Forest by 8 to 0, and this week the other Yorkshire team, Hull City, overwhelm the "Wolves" by 7 to 1. Bradford are now tied with Notts County for first place. They defeated Huddersfield Town on their opponents' ground, while the "County" were only able to get away with a tie at Bury. The "Pescocks" had to return from Woolwich minus two points, the "Arsenal" had proved to be much harder to get at than the "Forest" of a week ago. Blackpool got a nice away-from-home victory from Glossop.

United Beat City.

Saturday was the local derby day on the banks of the Irwell as those two local rivals, Manchester United and Manchester City, were scheduled to fight it out at Hyde Road. United were victorious by 2 to 1. They are now only two points behind the leaders and have still one game in hand. The United and Oldham Athletic were the only two teams in the first division to win away from home, the latter team beating Bradford City by 1 to 0 at Bradford. The Rovers, leaders of the League, had an easy job with Chelsea, the score being 3 to 0. Sunderland are now coming back to their old original form and their victory of 3 to 2 over Bolton Wanderers places them third in the league standing.

Swindon at it Again.

Swindon look as if nothing will be able to stop them winning the Southern League championship this year. They whitewashed Millwall Athletic Saturday by 3 goals to 0. They have won 11 out of 15 games, losing 1 and tieing 3. Crystal Palace and Brighton and Hove share honours for second place, the former beating Watford to-day 3 to 0, and the latter getting a verdict over Merthyr Town by 1 to 0. Cardiff City still grace the bottom of the table, although they managed to take one point off Exeter.

Dundas Make Tall Score.

The boys from bonny Dundee piled up a 5 to 1 score against Dumbarton Saturday. Kilmarnock changed places with Aberdeen, the latter team being beaten by 2 to 1. Celtic are making a sure thing of the championship. They are still two points ahead of Hearts, who hold the second place. The following are the League tables compiled up-to-date:

SALE OF GUELPH CLUB WAS A BIG SURPRISE

Hamilton Spectator: Yesterday's Canadian league meeting was the most important of any yet held. Many good amendments were made to the league constitution, while the way was paved for many improvements in league matters next year. The appointment of President Fitzgerald as president for the next two years was a most thoughtful move, and came in recognion of the splendid work that he has done in the past season, when he was able to handle things so well that the league was able to show abalance on the right side of the ledger at the end of the season of $2,400, $1,000 of which went into the league, sinking fund and $1,400 split up among the eight members of the league. At times during the past few months there has been rumblings of opposition to Fitzgerald, but these have come mostly from disgruntled parties who did not get their own way at every turn and who were chastised on more than one occasion for their behaviour on the ball field. Fitzgerald is the right man in the right place, and the league owners realize it.

The surprise of the meeting was the purchase of the Guelph club. George H. ONeil, the London man, who made the purchase, had no intention of interesting himself in any other club, as he has a large share in the London club, but when W. A. Mahoney of Guelph, started to unburden a hard luck tale, ONeil snapped the Guelph man up so quicgly that the latter hardly realized that he was making a sale until it was through. He then claimed that he was well pleased, but there is no doubt that the one to make the best bargain was O'Neil, who gets a franchise and a good lot of players, while it is understood that O'Neil can secure $3,000 for the club from a party of Guelph fans, to whom Mr. Mahoney would not sell. O'Neil also claims that he can do business with the Erie, Pa., people, and that the deal with them would be a most profitable one. At any rate, the London magnate should do well with the proposition.

London Advertiser—"I'm the only guy in this league who will talk trade," said Frank Shaughnessy, of Ottawa, at the Canadian League meeting in Toronto yesterday, after he had made sundry futile efforts to pull off some kind of a deal with some of the other clubs. "I have been trying to pull a trade off for the last two years, but I haven't been able to land one yet," he continued. Shaughnessy wanted to trade Dolan, his big first baseman, but none of the other club owners could see his proposition. Besides, the Ottawa man wanted too much in exchange for the first sacker.

"Shag." Wants Kopp.

Shaughnessy would like to get Kopp or Wilkinson from St. Thomas. He approached President C. O. Stanley, of the St. Thomas club, and tried to dicker for these players, but when "Shag" mentioned Smykal for Kopp and Dolan for Wilkinson it was all off. The whole trouble with Shaughnessy is that he wants to palm off some of his lemons for real ball players. That is the secret why he has been unable to pull a trade. He couldn't pry Kopp and Wilkinson loose from the St. Thomas club if he offered the whole Ottawa ball team, and Stanley told him so.

Would Like Bierbauer, Too.

Shaughnessy would also like to get Louis Bierbauer or Eddie Linneborn from the London club. President Stevely offered to trade him Rube Deneau for Dolan, but there was flothing doing. The other trades mentioned were along similar lines. They were jokes.

St. Thomas Lands Manager.

The St. Thomas club is building up a strong team for next season, according to President Stanley. "We have landed a manager already," said Mr. Stanley, who also stated that George Ort would not be with the Saints next season. "You may laugh when we announce the name of the man we have signed up," continued Mr. Stanley, "but I want to tell you he is there, and will be the best manager St. Thomas ever had. We will have a great pitching staff next season, with Wilkinson, Baker, Reilly, Clement and Howick. I believe Baker will be a hundred per cent. better next year than he was this year. Look how he improved from the first year."

Pittsburg Club Wanted Baker.

The Pittsburg club of the Eastern Association has written to the St. Thomas club in an effort to make a deal for Bill Baker. Mr. Stanley showed the letter to the writer, and, judging from it, the Pittsburg club is anxious to land the London boy. Pittsburg offers to trade three players for Baker, but the St. Thomas club has refused to make a deal. Mr. Stanley believes Bill will be one of the best pitchers in the league next season, and if he is he will bring a big price. Bill is working at the London Asylum, and he intends to spend a lot of time curling this winter. He has been placed in charge of the curling rink there, and will also make the ice. He is outdoors most of the time and is taking on weight. When the baseball season comes around again next spring he should be in the pink of condition.

CHANGES MADE IN THE RULES

O. H. A. Annual Meeting Passes Amendments

A number of changes in the rules were made at the O. H. A. annual meeting on Saturday.

The rule book has never designated any of the seven players, except the goalkeeper, but in future, by the ad option of Mr. Sutherland's motion in the matter, the players are to be known as: Goalkeeper, right defence, left defence, rover, centre, right wing and left wing. The effect is to officially abolish the names point and cover-point, but the change affects the names only, not the play or the players.

Home teams will be required to change their colours when they are those of a visiting team.

In overtime play there will be no interval of rest, once the overtime has begun, excepting after five minutes play each way.

If rival timekeepers disagree they are to attract the referee's attention by ringing the gong, but this, of course, does no itself stop the play which can only be done by the referee.

The rule declaring no offside on bounds off the goalkeper three feet from goal was amended to make it ten feet. This, of course, does no include passes by the goalkeeper.

The Drumbo amendment presented by Mr. Laidlaw, to allow boys living in police villages to play with the nearest O.H.A. team, just as is done now with dwellers in rural districts, was carried.

The honorarium of the Secretary was raised from $500 to $750 and that of the Treasurer remains at $50.

FOOTBALL

NOMAD'S FOOTBALL CLUB.

On Tuesday evening next a social entertainment under the auspices of the Nomad's Football Club will be held in the Hall of the Woodmen of the World fraternity on George street. The proceeding will be commenced by a concert at 8 o'clock. The programme, it is understood, will be a good one, some of the best talent available in the city having been secured.

This will be followed by the presentation of shield and medals to the the Glazier's Football team. After this function dancing will be indulged in and refreshments will be served. A very enjoyable evening may be anticipated.

NO CITY LEAGUE TEAM FOR PETES

The Peterborough Hockey Club has decided to drop for this year at least the proposal to place a team in the Junior City Hockey League. A third team would add considerable to the expense account, and as the club's finances are far from being in the best of shape, the executive has decided not to enter a team. The players that would have worn the Reserves' colours will likely find berths with the other City League clubs.

HOCKEY

Hockey players are reminded of the training class at Brock St. Rink to-night. Every one who wishes to try for a place on the line up should be out to-night at 7 o'clock.

TURNED THE TABLES.

A Canadian woman wanted to show her Chinese servant the correct way to announce visitors, and one afternoon went out to her front door, rang the bell, and made the man usher her into the drawing-room.

The following afternoon the bell rang and not hearing him answer it, she went to the door herself. To her surprise he was standing waiting outside.

"Why, Sing, what are you doing here?" she asked.

"You foolee me yesterday. I foolee you to-day," was his reply.

COBOURG HOCKEY CLUB AND THE RINK MANAGEMENT

Cobourg World: The following were present on Wednesday evening at a meeting to discuss hockey for the coming winter: Manager Burnet, Kent Payne, W. Cunningham, Jos Mulhall, W. H. Maher, Jas. Freeman, Fred Lavis. The boys have never yet had a nickel ahead at the close of a season and state that they cannot run the club successfully on the terms of 60 and 40 per cent. These gentlemen however, could not see their way clear to accede to the Club's request and would come to terms only on the former agreement of an equal division of the money at hockey matches, or 50 per cent. each.

As a result the boys say there will be no hockey in Cobourg this winter, and they are feeling very much dissatisfied, and say they wish another rink could be provided for them. Moreover they state the Port Hope rink managment gives their club 60 per cent. and pays for all the billing and their argument is, why not the sam terms here. Further they state that last year on a 50 per cent. basis thy went behind and had to dig down in their pockets for cash to settle up. All the more dissatisfaction is felt as the boys feel that the outlook for a winning team was extremely good.

That the Intermediates would have won the district is the belief of one member of the Executive.

We may add that we regret very much that this friction has arisen, and only hope that a satisfactory agreement may be made in the very nar future. Cobourg wants a hockey team. Cobourg needs a hockey team. It is one way that the Town gets free advertising. As a matter of fact Cobourg must have a hockey team to keep up her record as a 'live' town. We therefore beseech both the boys and the rink management to do all in their power to arrive at a satisfactory agreement in the very near future.

Suggests A "Big Brother" Club Among City's Business Men

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Now is the season of Christmas cheer, but to a number of little children in our City the pleasures of Santa Claus' visit will not come on account of lack of work, poverty, sickness or drunkenness in the home.

Many others of us, unfortunately are also deprived the greater pleasur of giving, having none to whom to give or those to whom Santa formerly came have grown up and the old home is childless.

There is a surprisingly large number of the prominent business and professional men in the city who are in these class and who will gladly cooperate in the following scheme, which has been talkd over among several and merely given to the press to make some others acquainted therewith, who might be willing or anxious to enlist but otherwise overlooked.

It has been suggested to form a Big Brother Club, open exclusively to business and professional men who have no children of their own, or whose children have grown up and gone away from home.

(1) That the object of this club be to be a Big Brother to the little children of the City who are going to be sad on Christmas Day from lack of the few little things that make the child's heart happy.

(2) To provide fresh air holidays in the country or elsewhere to poor children who need it and are unable to arrange it themselves.

(3) To help any little child in any other way, where the little help may make it happier or better.

It has been arranged to hold a meeting of those interested, in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Yours,
E. V. FREDERICK.

BERESFORD READY TO FIGHT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 8.—Lord Beresford, Admiral and staunch Unionist, looks with suspicion on any proposals of compromise in the Home Rule matters. "Ulster will fight," he said to-day. "And if the government forces a civil and religious war on that part of Ireland I and many other officers and men of the Royal Navy will fight with her. Beresford said that despite the proclamation there were eighty thousand well armed men in Ulster, and before long there would be six hundred thousand.

SAY ACT OF I. O. O. F. IS NOT LEGAL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MADISON, WIS., Dec. 8.—Whether an act of the Canadian Parliament will enable the Independent Order of Foresters of Toronto to do what otherwise is admitted to be a violation of its contract with the majority of its 140,000 members in the United States, is the question of International independence raised in the report made to-day on the society by the insurance departments of Illinois, Nebraska and Wisconsin. An examination of the affairs of the Canadian organization has been in progress for several months. The Underwriters say that the recent act of the Foresters in making a lien of $250 on policies of members, is illegal under the United States' laws.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The Stock Market continued its slight rally of Saturday and during the first hour prices struck a higher level. There seemed to be plenty of stock for sale. Among the stocks advanced was C.P.R. This stock usually winds up a move after the tide in others already has begun to set in the other way. The improvement in sentiment in both influential and other quarters of the financial district is a feature of importance that must soon be taken into consideration by the investors and speculators. It signifies a change from the old order of pessimism and bespeaks a coming betterment, generally in affairs of Wall Street. This alteration of conditions is reported to be based upon advices from Washington, pointing very strongly to the fact that a salutory effort has been wought upon the minds of the administrative heads by evidence of trade reaction and capital slothness. U.P. is regarded as a bull leader. Rdg. is under accumulation. We think S.P. and G.Q. is cheap. Foreign absorption is reported in Erie.

The industrials are not confidently bought, because of the trade reaction. They will probably be the last to recover.

TANGO GETS A JOLT

Duchess of Connaught Disapproves of New Dance

TEACHER WAS IMPORTED

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—The tango, mild or otherwise, will not be tolerated at Rideau Hall. Not that there has been any definite instructions that the latest craze is unacceptable to Their Royal Highnesses, but it has been quietly but effectively made known to those members of society who have the honor of being invited to the dinner dances at Government House that the Duchess of Connaught disapproves of any of the many tango steps being introduced in the ballroom.

This politely-expressed ban has come as a sad disappointment to some society ladies in the capital. At Rideau Hall fairly broad views have been held by the duchess with regard to many recent social innovations, and society, spelled with a capital S fully anticipated being able to dance the very latest in the tango.

To prepare for this, and in order that their demonstrations could not be criticised from the point of view of inability, a number of Ottawa ladies formed a club early in the autumn and at very heavy expense engaged a New York lady who is an expert in every one of the 120 steps of the tango. With much zest these society ladies delved into the mysteries of the dance. But when it became known that the tango would be banned at Rideau Hall the zest somewhat faded away, and after a few desultory lessons the expert tangoist was sent back to New York, her services being no longer necessary.

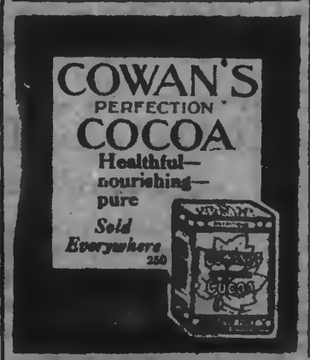
Not that she had inculcated into the mind and feet of the ladies the whole of the tango steps, but what was the use when Rideau Hall barred all the said steps? The result of the unfinished lessons is shown clearly in the abortive and amusing attempts to dance the tango made by the great majority at the society dances in the capital.

Three Are Drowned.

EDMONTON, Alta., Dec. 9.—While crossing the ice on the Athabasca river near Pocohontas, on Saturday, three men, T. Lessard, C. Cantonio and L. B. Arco, broke through and were drowned. As yet their bodies have not been recovered. Cantonio managed to get out, but was drowned trying to rescue the other two.

Duluth Shipping Closed.

DULUTH, Dec. 9.—With the departure of the Squire yesterday with grain and the Lakeland with package freight and the arrival of the Muncy with package freight, the marine season for the year 1913 came to an end.



SHORT LIFE PREDICTED

Parisian Press Not Enthusiastic Over Doumergues Ministry.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Senator Gaston Doumergue succeeded in forming a new French Cabinet yesterday, but out of courtesy to the retiring Premier, J. Louis Barthou, and other members of the outgoing Cabinet, the official decrees appointing the ministers to their posts will not be signed until to-night. This was decided because most of the Ministers who resigned with Premier Barthou were invited to an official dinner at the Austrian embassy last night, and desired to go there in their official capacity.

The new Cabinet is as follows: Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Gaston Doumergue; Minister of Interior, Rene Renoult; Justice, Bienvenue Martin; War, Jos. J. B. Joulens; Marine, Ernst Monis; Finance, Joseph Caillaux; Public Instruction, Rene Viviani; Public Works, Fernand David; Commerce, Louis J. Aloy; Colonies, Albert F. Lebrun; Agriculture, Maurice Reynaud; Labor, Albert Metin.

Under Secretaries of State: War, M. Maginot; Mercantine Marine, M. Ajam; Beaux Arts (to be announced to-day); Finance (suppressed).

The new combination comprises Radicals, Radical Socialists, and Socialists, with the exception of MM. Lebrun and Renaud, who are regarded as Moderates. All except MM. Noulens and Malvy have served in former Cabinets.

The Paris press receives the announcement of the formation of the new Cabinet with disapproval and predicts a short life for it.

ACTION IS DEFERRED.

Government Excludes All Asiatics Until March 31st.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—Decisive action was taken by the Government yesterday to put a stop to the immigration of Hindus into British Columbia for the present at least. At a meeting of the Cabinet an order in council was passed prohibiting the further immigration of artisans or laborers into British Columbia from the Pacific or from the south until March 31 next. During the next four months the Government will have time to decide upon a definite policy regarding Asiatic immigration and legislate accordingly.

The effect of the order will be to exclude Japanese and Chinese until March 31, also, for discrimination is impossible. Indeed the situation created by the influx of Japanese women during the past two years has caused some uneasiness to the Government, and the Hindu situation has been somewhat in the natur of a god-send. For two years Hindu female immigrants have exceeded the male immigrants.

The overcrowded condition of the labor market in British Columbia gave the Government an opportunity to act, and advantage was taken of a clause in the Immigration Act which empowers the stoppage of the immigration of laborers when work is scarce.

The order-in-council does not prevent immigrants going into British Columbia from Europe or laborers going in from any other part of the Dominion.

How He Would Celebrate.

BERLIN, Ont., Dec. 9.—It is definitely known that among the suggestions offered as to how to celebrate fittingly the centenary of peace by the United States and Canada in 1914 was one sent by a Berlin man to President Wilson and Premier Borden, in which he proposed that the Governments of the two countries set aside one-tenth of the appropriation for militia and defence to assist the laymen's missionary movement in their endeavor to evangelize the world in this generation. In reply, Premier Borden has promised the earnest consideration of his Government.

Huerta's Leaders Among the Refugees Entering U. S.

HIS FAMILY IS IN FLIGHT,

PRESIDIO, Texas, Dec. 9.—In the remarkable exodus which struggled for eight days over an 185-mile trail through the desert and endured great hardships for want of food and water were Gen. Salvador Mercado, Huerta's deposed military governor and commander of the Federal troops in the north; Gen. Pascual Orozco, Gen. Antonio Rojas, Gen. Marcelo Caraveo, Gen. Ynez Salazar, and a host of subordinate officers. They had deserted their posts in fear of Gen. Francisco Villa's rebel army, and virtually had surrendered to the rebels, Chihuahua the state capital, and the largest of the far northern cities.

Along with them came, burdened with what property they could carry, men, women and children, representing some of the richest families in the republic. Their flight with the army was in the face of reports that they might expect no mercy should they fall into the hands of the rebels. Luis Terrazan, a wealthy land owner, reputed to own half of the State of Chihuahua, was said to have brought with him a vast fortune in cash, fearing it might be looted by the rebels if he remained in the evacuated city.

Witnesses viewing the oncoming through from the hills at Ojinaga reported the refugees were scattered in a thin line for several miles into the interior, and that the dusty confusion of broken down wagons, disabled artillery and mingling of disheartened soldiers and famished civilians as they slowly moved over the desert presented a spectacle of universal despair.

The fear of being unable to keep pace with the escorting army, of being lost on the desert or caught by the rebels, added to the miseries of so precipitate a flight and kept the refugees in almost a continuous frenzy. Their arrival in a panic, but unmolested by the rebels, formed one of the most tragic incidents of the present revolution.

Huerta's Family Leaves?

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 9.—Provisional President Huerta's family is again reported to have left the capital. A report, apparently well founded, current here yesterday was to the effect that the members of the President's household had gone to Guadalajara, the capital of the State of Jalisco, from where it was said they would go to the Pacific port of Manzanillo, in the State of Colima.

Capt. Luis Fuentes, President Huerta's son-in-law, Mrs. Fuentes, and Miss Elena Huerta, another daughter, were in the party which left for Guadalajara. It was reported that the President's wife has also left the capital, but this is not confirmed.

HOGS ARE DESTROYED.

Cholera Is Found In Shipment From Cottam, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 9.—Eighty-four fine hogs en route from Cottam, near Windsor, to Gunn's Packing plant in Toronto, were killed here yesterday when Dominion Government inspectors found that they were suffering from hog cholera. Nothing was known of the outbreak until the car in which 84 hogs had been shipped was opened to feed and water them. Two animals were found dead and several others were very sick. Acting on advice from Ottawa the inspectors killed every animal and the 21 found suffering from cholera were at once made into fertilizer. As there is no general inspection here and much agitation has taken place for by many doctors and citizens the affair has created a great sensation.

A special inspector has been rushed to Cottam to try and locate the origin of the cholera. The question of who will bear the loss is expected to cause a dispute.

NOT A FAIR STANDARD.

C.N.R. Shouldn't Be Basis For Rates Says Mr. Pitblado.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—Isaac Pitblado, K.C., counsel for the Winnipeg Board of Trade in the western freight rates case, registered a strong objection during his argument yesterday afternoon against the proposal that the Board of Railway Commissioners accept the C.N.R. as the standard road in fixing a new schedule of freight rates for the west.

"There are a number of things the board should consider in connection with the C.N.R.," warned Mr. Pitblado. "Is there any water in the stock? I say if there is, the public will be asked to pay the interest on it. If that board is going to take this road as the standard road it cannot divest itself from the responsibility of making further investigation into the capitalization and financial standing of the company."

"Do you mean that the board should make a further inquiry?" asked Chairman Drayton.

"Yes, that is what I do mean if you adopt the C.N.R. as the standard road, as has been suggested. That is what the order-in-council specifies," answered Mr. Pitblado.

L. G. McPhillips, K.C., counsel for British Columbia, has deferred his argument until F. H. Chrysler for the C.P.R. has concluded his argument, which he began about 20 minutes before the board adjourned last evening.

TO MAKE YOUR HAIR MORE BEAUTIFUL
To give your hair that gloss and lustre and wavy silky-softness, use Harmony Hair Beautifier. It takes away the dull dead look of the hair, and makes it bright—turns the stringiness into fluffiness—overcomes the oily odors and leaves a sweet, true-rose fragrance—makes the hair easier to put up neatly and easier to keep in place. It is just exactly what it is named—a hair beautifier, and whether your hair is ugly now or beautiful, it will improve its appearance. You'll be proud of and delighted with the results, or your money back. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change the color of hair, nor darken gray hair.
To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure, liquid shampoo is most convenient to use, because it gives an instantaneous rich, foaming lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet-smelling cleanliness.
Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Rexall-way laboratories, Toronto, where the celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made.

Message From Stefansson Sets Rumours at Rest

ALL NOW ACCOUNTED FOR

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—Somewhere within the confines of the Arctic Circle's drifts, Vilhjalmur Stefansson's staunch little vessel, the Karluk, is safely frozen in an ice pack. But the leader of the expedition is not with his vessel, and is unaware of its whereabouts, according to a despatch received from the explorer himself yesterday by George J. Desbarats, acting Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs, and acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries. It will be recalled that a recent despatch from Seattle, Wash., reported the Karluk missing with all on board, while still later Stefansson was reported safe in winter quarters.

Yesterday's news sets at rest all rumors, for Stefansson's report gives full details of his trip to the date of Oct. 30.

In brief, Stefansson's message states that, believing the Karluk safe in the ice in longitude west 147, fifteen miles off shore, he took a party ashore with him to hunt. The next day heavy gales sprang up and a fog. When the weather cleared the Karluk was not in sight, and had undoubtedly been carried away by the wind which drove the ice pack off shore.

So far the search for the Karluk has been unsuccessful, but as there is a crew of twenty-five men on board, and plenty of provisions, no anxiety is felt for its welfare.

The message received yesterday was dated Oct. 30, from Point Barrow, Alaska, and was sent overland from there to Circle, from where it was despatched on Dec. 5.

The message reads:

"The Karluk beset by heavy ice on Aug. 12, in longitude west 147, fifteen miles off shore. Ship frozen in on Aug. 17, and drifted with the ice until Sept. 10, when the drift stopped. On Sept. 20, believing the ship fast for the winter, and, as it was necessary to secure fresh meat, I took Jones, McConnell, Wilkins and three Eskimos ashore to hunt. Northeast gales sprang up Sept. 22, with snow and fog. When the storm cleared on the 24th, the ice had gone and the Karluk with it. The ice undoubtedly went west before the wind. The Karluk may possibly have broken free and steamed east, but she probably remained fast and drifted west with the ice. Followed the coast west to Barrow, but the Karluk has not been sighted. The schooners Alaska and Sachs, with southern party, are safe at Collinson Point. The schooner Belvidere, with cargo of freight and provisions, is wintering near the international boundary. I am planning an ice exploration from the 145th meridian to the Mackenzie Delta, making survey and taking soundings for a steamer route.

"The Karluk has on board a company of twenty-five, including Beuchat, Mackay, Mamen, McKinley, Murray and Malloch, with the members of the crew, and five Eskimos.

(Signed) "Stefansson."

The last message previous to yesterday's was received from Stefansson early in August. At that time he reported that the Karluk had behaved well in a heavy storm and had rounded Point Hope on July 31.

Those with Stefansson now are: Dr. D. Jenness of Wellington, N.Z., assistant anthropologist; Burt M. Wilkins of Montreal, the photographer; B. M. McConnell, Los Angeles, Cal., assistant to Stefansson, and meteorologist.

The remainder of the scientific men on board the Karluk whom Stefansson names in his message are: Henri Beuchat, anthropologist; Allister Forbes-Mackay, Edinburgh, Scotland, surgeon; Bjarne Mamen, Christiania, Norway, assistant geologist; W. J. McKinley, Glasgow, Scotland; expert in terrestial magnetism; Jas. Murray, Glasgow, Scotland, oceanographer; George Malloch, Ottawa, Ont., chief geologist and topographer.

The Alaska and the Sachs, which Stefansson mentions are the other vessels of the expedition, and are manned by the scientific parties.

COMMITS SUICIDE.

Woodstock Man Goes to Chief of Police's Office To Die.

WOODSTOCK, Dec. 9. — William Hillman, aged about 46 years, died in the office of the chief of police yesterday afternoon as the result of carbolic acid, which he had swallowed before entering the office.

Shortly before three o'clock the man walked into the office and stood for a moment behind the chief's chair. The chief finished a few words he was writing and turned around, to be met by the odor of carbolic acid, which the visitor acknowledged having taken. A doctor was summoned, but before he reached the office Hillman was dead.

Little is known of Hillman locally, but it is believed he was the victim of despondency. He had been employed with the Thomas Organ & Piano Co. until Saturday morning last. That the suicide was premeditated was shown by a letter found in the dead man's pocket.

HEADINGS MEET TO-NIGHT.

Big C.N.R. Tunnel at Montreal Makes World's Record.

MONTREAL, Dec. 9.—At a point some 620 feet below the highest point of Mount Royal the two headings of the C.N.R. tunnel will meet this evening, almost exactly 15 months after the first heading in the tunnel was commenced, and on Wednesday the first train will run through the tunnel from the west portal to the Dorchester Station.

This establishes a new record for deep tunneling on the American continent and takes the record from the United States, while with the exception of certain of the Swiss tunnels, where the headings are much smaller and the rock softer, the achievement of the C.N.R. engineers is a world's record.

The tapping of the drills could be heard through the dividing rock yesterday.

"That Affair Next Door"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"This is a much more serious affair than I have led you to suppose," I confided to her as soon as we were at a suitable distance from Miss Oliver's door. "If she is the person I think her, she is amenable to law, and the police will have to be notified of her whereabouts."

"She has stolen, then?"

"Her fault is a very grave one," I returned.

Miss Althorpe, deeply troubled, looked about her as if for guidance. I, who could have given it to her, made no movement to attract her attention to myself, bu waited calmly for her own decision in this matter.

"I wish you would let me consult Mr. Stone," she ventured at last. "I think his judgment might help us."

"I had rather take no one into our confidence,—especially no man. He would consider your welfare only and not hers."

I did not consider myself obliged to acknowledge that the work upon which I was engaged could not be shared by one of the male sex without lessening my triumph over Mr. Gryce.

"Mr. Stone is very just," she remarked, "but he might be biased in a matter of this kind. What way do you see out of the difficulty?"

"Only this. To settle at once and unmistakably, whether she is the person who carried certain articles from the house of a friend of mine. If she is, there will be some evidence of the fact visible in her room, or on her person. She has not been out, I believe?"

"Not since she came into the house."

"And has remained for the most part in her own apartment?"

"Always, except when I have summoned her to my assistance."

"Then what I want to know I can learn there. But how can I make my investigations without offence?"

"What do you want to know, Miss Butterworth?"

"Whether she has in her keeping some half dozen rings of considerable value."

"Oh! she could conceal rings so easily."

"She does conceal them; I have no more doubt of it than I have of my standing here; but I must know it before I shall feel ready to call the attention of the police to her."

"Yes, we should know it. Poor girl! poor girl! to be suspected of a crime! How great must have been her temptation!"

"I can manage this matter, Miss Althorpe, if you will entrust it to me."

"How, Miss Butterworth?"

"The girl is ill; let me take care of her."

"Really ill?"

"Yes, or will be so before morning. There is fever in her veins; she has worried herself ill. Oh, I will be good to her."

This in answer to a doubtful look from Miss Althorpe.

"This is a difficult problem you have set me," that lady remarked after a moment's thought. "But anything seems better han sending her away, or sending for he police. But do you suppose she will allow you in her room?"

"I think so; if her fever increases she will not notice much that goes on about her, and I think it will increase; I have seen enough of sickness to be something of a judge."

"And you will search her while she is unconscious?"

"Dont look so horrified, Miss Althorpe. I have promised you I will not worry her. She may need assistance in getting to bed. While I am giving it to her I can judge if there is anything concealed upon her person."

"Yes, jerhaps."

"At all events, we shall know more than we do now. Shall I venture, Miss Althorpe?"

"I cannot say no," was the hesitating answer; you seem so very much in earnest."

"And I am in earnest. I have reasons for being; consideration for you is one of them."

I do not doubt it. And now will you come down to supper, Miss Butterworth?"

"No," I replied, "My duty is here. Only send word to Lena that she is to drive home and take care of my house in my absence. I shall want nothing, so do not worry about me. Join your lover now, dear; and do not bestow another thought upon this self-styled Miss Oliver or what I am about to do in her room."

XXIV.

A House of Cards.

I did not return immediately to my patient. I waited till her supper came up. Then I took the tray, and assured by the face of the girl who brought it that Miss Althorpe had explained my presence in her house sufficiently for me to feel at my ease before her servants, I carried in the dainty repast she had provided and set it down on the table.

The poor woman was standing where we had left her; but her whole figure showed languor, and she more than leaned against the bedpost behind her. As I looked up from the tray and met her eyes, she shuddered and seemed to be endeavouring to understand who I was and what I was doingi n her room. My premonitions in regard to her were well based. She was in a raging fever, and was already more than half oblivious to her surroundings.

Approaching her, I spoke as gently as I could, for her hapless condition appealed to me in spite of my well founded prejudices against her; and seeing she was growing incapable of response, I drew her up on the bed and began to undress her.

I half expected her to recoil at this, or at least to make some show of alarm, but she submitted to my ministrations almost gratefully, and neither shrank nor questioned me till I laid my hands upon her shoes. Then indeed she quivered, and drew her feet away with such an appearance of terror that I was forced to desist from my efforts or drive her into violent delirium.

This satisfied me that Louise Van Burnam lay before me. The scar concerning which so much had been said in the papers would be ever present in the thoughts of this woman as the tell-tale mark by which she might be known, and though at this moment she was on the borders of unconsciousness, the instinct of self-preservation still remained in sufficient force to prompt her to make this effort to protect herself from discovery.

I had told Miss Althorpe that my chief reason for intruding upon Miss Oliver, was to determine if she had in her possession certain rings supposed to have been taken from a friend of mine; and while this was in a measure true—the rings being an important factor in the proof I was accumulating against her, — I was not so anxious to search for them at this time as to find the scar which would settle at once the question of her identity.

When she drew her foot away from me then, so violently, I saw that I needed to search no farther for the evidence required, and could give myself up to making her comfortable. So I bathed her temples, now throbbing with heat and soon had the satisfaction of seeing her fall into a deep and uneasy slumber. Then I tried again to draw off her shoes, but the start she gave and the smothered cry which escoped her warned me that I must wait yet longer before satisfying my curiosity; so I desisted at once, and out of pure compassion left her to get what good she might from the letharzy into which she had fallen.

Being hungry, or at least feeling the necessity of some slight aliment to help me sustain the fatigues of the night, I sat down now at the table and partook of some of the dainties with which Miss Althorpe had kindly provided me. After which I made out a list of such articles as were necessary to my proper care of the patient who had so strangely fallen into my hands, and then, feeling that I had a right at last to indulge in pure curiosity, I turned my attention to the clothing I had taken from the self-styled Miss Oliver.

The dress was a simple grey one, and the skirts and underclothing all white. But the latter was of the finest texture, and convinced me, before I had given them more than a glance, that they were the property of Howard Van Burnam's wife. For, besides the exquisite quality of the material, there were to be seen, on the edges of the hands and sleeves the marks of stitches and clinging threads of lace, where the trimming had been torn off, and in one article especially, there were tucks such as you see come from the hands of French needlewomen only.

This, taken with what had gone before, was proof enough to satisfy me that I was on the right track, and after Crescenge had come and gone with the tray and all was quiet in this remote part of the house, I ventured to open a closet door at the foot of the bed. A brown silk skirt was hanging within, and in the pocket of that skirt I found a purse so gay and costly that all doubt vanished as to its being the property of Howard's luxurious wife.

There were several bills in this purse amounting to about fifteen dollars in money, but no change and no memoranda, which latter seemed a pity. Restoring the purse to its place and the skirt to its peg, I came softly back to the bedside and examined my patient still more carefully than I had done before. She was asleep and breathing heavily, but even with this disadvantage her face had its own attraction, an attraction which evidently had more or less influenced men, and which, for the reason perhaps that I have something masculine in my nature, I discovered to be more or less influencing me, notwithstanding my hatred of an intriguing character.

However, it was not her beauty I came to study, but her hair, her complexion, and her hands. The former was brown, the brown of that same lock I remembered to have seen in the Jury's hands at the inquest; and her skin, where fever had not flushed it, was white and smooth. So were her hands, and yet they were not a lady's hands. That I noticed when I first saw her. The marks of the rings she no longer wore, were not enough to blind me to the fact that her fingers lacked the distinctive shape and nicety of Miss Althorpe's, say, or even of the Misses Van Burnam; and though I do not object to this, for I like strong-looking, capable hands myself, they served to help me understand the face, which otherwise would have looked too spiritless for a woman of the peevish and self-satisfied character of Louise Van Burnam. On this innocent and appealing expression she had traded in her short and none too happy career. And as I noted it, I recalled a sentence in Miss Ferguson's testimony, in which she alluded to Mrs. Van Burnam's confidential remark to her husband upon the power she exercised over people when she raised her eyes in entreaty towards them. "Am I not pretty," she had said, "when I am in distress and looking up in this way?" It was the suggestion of a scheming woman, but from what I had seen and was seeing of the woman before me, I could imagine the picture she would thus make, and I do not think she overrated its effects.

Withdrawing from her side once more, I made a tour of the room. Nothing escaped my eyes; nothing was too small to engage my attention. But while I failed to see anything calculated to shake my confidence in the conclusions I had come to, I saw but little to confirm them. This was not strange; for, apart from a few toilet articles and some knitting work on a shelf, she appeared to have no belongings; everything else in sight being manifestly the property of Miss Althorpe. Even the bureau drawers were empty, and her bag, found under a small table, had not so much in it as a hair-pin, though I searched it inside and out for her rings, which I was positive she had with her, even if she dard not wear them.

When every spot was exhausted I sat down and began to brood over what lay before this poor being, whose flight and the great efforts she made at concealment proved only too conclusively the fatal part she had played in the crime for which her huband had been arrested. I had reached her arraignment before a magistrate, and was already imagining her face with the appeal in it which such an occasion would call forth, when there came a low knock at the door, and Miss Althorpe re-entered.

Try This Home-made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with 1 cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis, and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements, which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

It All Depends on the Liver

So important is the liver and so great is its influence on the other vital organs of the body that it may be said you have little to fear from the ordinary ills of life so long as the liver is in healthful working order. The digestive processes are so dependent on free action of the liver that any derangement of this organ soon brings trouble.

Biliousness and constipation follow, with headache and depressed spirits. Additional work is thrown on the kidneys and soon the whole eliminating system is deranged and the blood carries poisons through the body. Careful eating is a great help towards keeping the liver right, but when it does get wrong there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to restore the liver to healthful action.

With the secretion of bile by the liver, constipation and biliousness are cured, and the digestive and excretary systems are set in order. It is wondrful the benefit obtained by a few doses of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills under these circumstances. A trial will convince you of their superior merit.

THE FIRST MOVIE

Don Roderick Saw Moving Pictures in a Vision

The first suggestion of the cinematograph, or moving pictures of to-day, may be found in the ancient legend of Don Roderick, the last of the Gothic kings of Spain. The king and a gay cavalcade had, against all warnings, entered through magic doors into a vast subterranean chamber. On a table lay a golden casket which the king had been admonished not to open. But curiosity urged him on despite all warnings. He opened the casket. It contained nothing but a piece of linen cloth interposed between two plates of copper. Upon this cloth were painted diminutive figures of men and horses. As Don Roderick gazed these figures became enlarged andd animated. A panoramic vision of a battle displayed itself in which Christians and Moslems were struggling in deadly conflict, while the cries of the combatants, the clash of arms and the roar of battle were distinctly heard. The Christians were seen to retreat, broken and beaten, before the Moslems, and among the figures Don Roderick saw his war steed galloping riderless over the unlucky field, following which the panic-stricken king and his companions fled from the enchanted chamber. And such was the vision of Don Roderick.

DURABILITY OF TIES

The Supply of Cedar is Becoming Exhausted

The average life of untreated ties as reported by the steam roads is as follows: Cedar, 9 years; tamarack, 8 years; hemlock, 7 years; Douglas fir, 7 years; jack pine, 6 years; spruce, 6 years. As statistics bear evidence, cedar is the species principally used, because of its durability, but the supply of cedar is rapidly becoming exhausted. Unless preservative treatment of ties is introduced, the short-lived species will have to be used untreated; which, on account of the necessary frequent renewal, will increase the cost of mileage maintenance. If treated ties were used, which would cost 30 cents extra per tie for creosoting and equipping with tie-plates, the inferior species, which are very plentiful and cheap in Canada, could be used with economy. With such a treatment, these woods would last at least fifteen years, and if protected from wear would probably last much longer, and would affect a very considerable saving.

Many Centenarians

According to official statistics compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410; France, 113; Italy, 197; Great Britain, 92; Russia, 85; Germany, 76; Norway, 23; Sweden, 19; Belgium, 5 and Denmark 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 2,500 centenarians, and there are another 1,764 in Roumania and 573 in Servia.

VALUABLE FISHERIES

Many Fish Found in British Columbia Waters

The fisheries of British Columbia are the most valuable in the Dominion. Of the $35,000,000 worth of fish produced from all the Provinces in Canada in one year, this one contributed fish to the value of $14,000,000. Salmon, halibut and herring are the three chief varieties of fish which inhabit the waters of British Columbia.

The Fraser River, especially that section of it flowing through the lower mainland, contributes most liberally to the fisheries of the Province. The salmon pack in all parts of British Columbia in a year amounted to 996,576 cases, of which the lower mainland district, including the Province's largest canneries at New Westminster, contributed 173,921 cases, or almost twenty per cent. of the entire pack.

The fishing business on "the coast" is only in its infancy. The rivers of the northern part of the interior are practically unknown, so far as their fertility is concerned, and the fishermen on the coast are only beginning to realize the immense wealth which lurks in the numerous bays and inlets of the Pacific coast.

The Wise Widow.

The man who didn't advertise
Was dead, extremely dead.
His widow placed, of mammoth size,
A stone above his head.
She put his name
Upon the same
In letters large and clear
To tell the eye
Of passerby
Her man was sleeping here.

Folks thought her sorrow must be great
To raise a monument.
They did not know—she did not state
Her actual intent
One day there came
A former flame,
Who read, then soothed her sighs.
And as she wed
She sivly said,
"It pays to advertise."

No Use For Sympathy.

A Yorkshireman suffering from toothache went to a dentist to have the aching tooth out. The dentist pulled out the offending tooth and was then asked to pull out the double tooth next to it.

"But that is a sound tooth," said the dentist. "The pain is only sympathetic."

"Yank it out, doctor. Hang such sympathy!" replied the Yorkshireman.—Tit-Bits.

The Final Word.

"GOODBYE: We are just leaving the house."

Just before a journey when there are many last words to be said, final directions to be given and last minute details to be attended to, a telephone in the home is invaluable. By its aid a whole day's work is often compressed into a few minutes.

But a residence telephone is not for special occasions alone—it aids the housewife and lightens the burdens in a score of ways every day. In emergencies—and they are sure to arise some day—it is indispensable.

Have you a telephone in your home?

NO SALT HORSE

It Costs Huge Sum Nowadays to Provision Ocean Liners

In these days, when the high cost of living is so much in the public mind, it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship to provide the necessities of life to the hordes of passengers who cross and recross the Atlantic. The annual statement of the North German Lloyd Company throws some interesting light on the subject.

For one year the company's bill for provisions alone was $4,920,000, while during the same period the coal man was paid $7,876,725 for 1,750,740 tons of coal which were shoveled into the ships' furnaces during the twelve-month. For these two items alone—provisions and coal—the company paid the enormous sum of $12,796,725.

The itemized provision bill showed that the butcher got $1,685,000 for meats. This does not include fish and game; for the former the company paid an additional $329,660, while the bill for the game amounted to $412,360, a total of $652,020.

Preserves cost $256,760 for the twelve months and fresh vegetables ran into the respectable figure of $128,110, while for "sundries," including bread, flour, spices, fruits and the thousand and one articles that are used in the kitchen, the company paid $1,682,890.

More potatoes were consumed during the year than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,975,875 pounds. Flour ranked next with 6,212,152 pounds, fresh beef third with 6,769,124 pounds, while the bread was fourth with 2,353,083 pounds. The passengers consumed 7,098,560 eggs, 4,271,000 oranges and lemons, 707,625 pounds of onions and 983,302 pounds of salt. They used 445,340 pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea and 529,619 cans of sterilized milk, to say nothing of 14,918 bottles of fresh cream.

Queer English Villages

Villages with but a single inhabitant are not unknown, one of them being Skiddaw, in Cumberland. The single villager complains because he cannot vote, there being no overseer to prepare a voters' list, and no church or other public building on which to publish one, as the law requires.

In the Isle of Ely is a little parish with about a dozen inhabitants that has no rates, as there are no roads or public institutions of any kind, and consequently no expenses. Kempton near Bradford, can probably lay successful claim to the distinction of being the longest village in the world, as it straggles along the road for a distance of seven miles.

If you listen to everyone's advice the picture will never be straight on the wall.

You cannot expect the looking glass to reveal more than you put in it.

USES FOR MILKWEED

Science, with practical optimism, tries to find "good in everything," and now points out that we are wasting opportunities by not utilising our neglected wealth in milkweed. The best fibres of the plant, well known to the birds as nest-weaving materials and to Indians as thread, may readily be separated, however, and when bleached yield a white, silky, textile material, much like flax and even stronger. The woody material of which four-fifths of the plant consists has excellent qualities for paper-making, if treated with a soda solution under pressure. From the seeds may be obtained a large percentage of a drying oil, while the long silky down of the seeds is known to be useful as an upholstering material. It would seem as though it would be well worth while to raise the milkweed as a crop, since it can be grown on land otherwise of little value.

The Delicacy of Baby's Skin

Cold Air, Rough Winds, Strong Soaps Often Bring on Chronic Eczema.

More beautiful than the rose is baby's skin when in health, and so delicate that it is susceptible to anything which irritates. For this reason baby's skin troubles are many, and frequently chronic itching eczema is developd.

Nothing can be better for baby's skin when irritated, than Dr. Chase's Ointment, and when eczema is developed you can apply this preparation with the knowledge that its wonderful record as a healer of the skin is due to the success it has proved in the cure of eczema.

The intense itching of eczema of the face and scalp is very hard for the little one to bear, and is a source of worry and anxiety to the mother. The itching parts are scratched, and nasty and coloured scars are formed. Eczema naturally becomes chronic and spreads over the body. You can positively control eczema and cure it by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. What is better still is to use this ointment for all chafing and irriation of the skin and prevent eczema from getting started.

NEED OF POLITENESS

Time to Revive Usages of Chivalry, Young Germans Think

A number of young men of good standing in the German capital, displeased by the growing lack of chivalry to be seen in men's treatment of women, formed a league pledged to practice and encourage politeness in public places.

Members of the league obligate themselves, for instance, to surrender their seats in street cars to women and the aged; to offer assistance to women at street crossings and in other places of peril; and to revive so far as possible, all the little niceties of deportment which went into eclipse about the time that women began to compete largely with men as wage-earners.

The objection to chivalry is that it is only skin deep; that along with extreme politeness may go the most substantial injustice. That, of course, is true. But isn't it better to have the injustice with politeness than to have neither justice nor courtesy? Courtesy costs so very little, and it is so nice!

The Boy Scout movement has elements of usefulness in this direction; but a courtesy league for elders, as in Berlin, might also serve a good purpose in our careless age.

A Share of the Catch

In the French fisheries on the Newfoundland banks the fishermen do not work for wages, but for a share in the catch. Before they leave France they receive an advance payment, varying from $76 to $150, to be deducted from their future earnings. If, as not infrequently happens, a man's share at the end of the season is not sufficient to cover the amount advanced to him, the owner of the vessel loses the difference, and the man himself comes home with empty pockets. The fisherman's total earnings in seven months of hard labor and exposure probably do not average more than $150. Strangely enough, the men appear to be content with their lot, and all the reforms that have been effected toward improving their wages and the conditions under which they labor have been initiated by naval officers, administrative officials and enlightened ship-owners.

WHAT COAL CAN DO

Does anyone realize the power of coal as a worker? A man was set to work a pump as hard as he could all day, and at the end of ten hours it was found that he had done just as much work as a little less than 2 ounces of coal could do.

Taking all the energy put forth by a hard-working man during one whole year, the same amount of force would be furnished by 36 pounds of good coal —or, say, 40 pounds of average coal.

Of course, even in the best engines, the greater part of the working energy of coal is wasted. But even if only one-tenth is turned to account, 150 pounds of coal is equal to a man working for 300 days of the year.

A horse can do as much work as ten men, but 1¼ pounds of coal has as much working force as a horse expends in one day. So that a ton of coal, if we could use all its force, would do as much work as six horses working for a whole year!

ICELESS REFRIGERATOR

Keeps the Contents at a Desirable Temperature by Use of Water

The iceless refrigerator is not intended to put the ice man out of business, but is meant for service in localities not traversed by that august individual. This cooler consists of a stout wire mesh covered with an absorbent cotton cloth. The base and top are of metal, with provision made for accommodating a quantity of water. After this has been poured into the interior of the cooler it is conveyed to the cloth by means of several wicks, so that the cloth is always moist as long as there is water in the tank. The evaporation of this water on the exposed surface of the cloth causes the temperature to lower, so that the interior is maintained at a temperature of about 50 degrees, which is sufficient for a great many purposes.

IN DREAD OF CROUP

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. It is use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

FARMING IN MANITOBA

The Industry in the Province Is Yet in Its Infancy

Although the Province of Manitoba is the oldest settled of the prairie provinces, it is well within the truth to state that farming is as yet in its infancy. The area now under cultivation is an amazingly small percentage of the total area available for the production of crops.

The following summary of yields per acre of principal grain crops in Manitoba, shows the situation in a nutshell and will convince the most skeptical that this province is one of the richest districts on the American continent.

Wheat, average for 27 years, 13.39 bushels per acre.

Oats, average for 27 years, 35.66 bushels per acre.

Barley, average for 27 years, 29.87 bushels per acre.

The Whirligig of Time

In place of the hitching post and the carriage stepping stone has come the gasoline filling station. In place of the livery stable has come the modern garage, and the old-fashioned roadside smithy has been turned into a modern automobile repair shop.

The motor car has brought many changes, but with the changes has come prosperity. The foundry that once turned out ornamental hitching posts with a horse's head, or a little iron negro jockey patiently waiting to hold old Dobbin's reins, is manufacturing automobile parts.

The gasoline motor has played its part in making the automobile the popular method of transportation, but without the pneumatic tire the motor car would be limited to improved city streets and boulevards.

London is the chief human hair market of the world, and deals with something like $1,500,000 worth of hair every year. The hair mostly comes from the heads of peasant girls in Italy, Brittany, and the South of France.

NEW ICE CUTTER

Saw Carried in Frame That Is Mounted on Pair of Wheels

The old style way of cutting ice was by the use of a long hand-saw, sometimes operated by two men. A western man has designed a machine for the purpose and it is said that with this machine one man can cut ice quicker than two men could with the hand-saw. A frame with spaced side bars, is mounted on a pair of wheels. Between the bars, at their lower end, a saw is mounted and this saw is driven up and down by a chain gear that is operated by the turning of a handle at the top. Adjustable gage shoes are pivoted at one end to one of the side bars and these shoes keep the saw running straight, so that the cut it makes is at all times the same distance from the former cut that it must parallel. The saw in this machine, instead of being of the regulation stiff blade type, is in the form of a chain.

NATURAL BASIN NEAR CALGARY

Immense Water Supply Is Only Thirty-five Miles Away

That the citizens of Calgary have a natural basin with an estimated storage capacity of 500,000,000 gallons of water, enough to supply the city for an entire winter, only 35 miles up the Elbow river, was an interesting report made by Mr. A. W. Ellison Fawkes.

For some months Mr. Fawkes had a crew of surveyors and assistant engineers working out the data on a pipe line scheme and also a proposed filtration and pumping scheme as an alternative.

On a trip up the Elbow Mr. Fawkes inspected three feasible sites for the location of an impounding dam. The nearest of these for a pipe line is about 35 miles distant, and here the Elbow widens into a big basin with the immense storage capacity mentioned. It would be necessary to have a dam at this point 400 feet long. Five miles farther up the river and again three miles above this point there are other suitable sites. But, of course, the closer site, 35 miles up, has the advantage, when the cost of constructing a pipe line is considered. The upper sites would on the other hand be narrower and would not require as long a dam.

HEART WAS SO BAD Could Not Do Her Housework

Many women get run down and are unable to look after their household duties owing to the heart action becoming impaired or the nervous system unstrung. To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Thomas Melville, Saltcoats, Sask., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and tell you how much your Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart was so bad I could not sleep, eat nor walk about the house. I could not do my housework at all, and what my husband could not do had to go undone. I had two small children depending on me besides three men to cook for, and it worried me to not be able to do anything. My husband had taken some of your pills some years ago, and insisted on me trying them, so I started, and before I had taken them two weeks I was considerably better, and before I had taken two boxes I was doing my own work again. Any one suffering from heart or nerve trouble should just give your pills a trial. If anyone cares to write me I will gladly give them all the information I know concerning your wonderful medicine."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Wolves Near St. John

Wolves were seen near St. John, N. B., recently for the first time since the days of the early settlers in the district. John Johnston, of Gilbert's Lane, was enjoying an early morning stroll in Rockwood Park, about a mile back from the nearest settled section, when he saw four large black wolves and a cub. Two of the animals followed him for a short distance. They did not show any intention of attacking him, but he did not wait to make any closer investigation of their intentions.

While wolves are known to exist in the densely wooded regions in the north of the province, it is many years since any have been reported in the south.

NEWS OF THE WEEK FROM LONDON, BERLIN AND PARIS

Berlin's Winter Season Likely To Be One of Extreme Gayety

Clearing of the Atmosphere in American Political Circles and Peace in the Balkans Combine to Make for Unusual Brilliance in Both Circles in German Capital.

MR. AND MRS. GERARD IN MANY GATHERINGS

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
BERLIN, December 6.

ONE of those epidemic influences of which Tolstoy speaks has swept over Berlin society this week. At no time since the opening of the season has the social calendar displayed so congested a condition, and if the late autumn activity may be taken as a forecast of the approaching high season the winter of 1913-14 will be written down in red letters.

Many regard this as a logical rebound from the marked social lethargy of last year, due to the suspense caused in German social circles by the impending conflagration in the Balkans, while Americans were no less disturbed by the unsettled conditions which follow in the wake of each change of administration. With the cloud lifted from both hemispheres there seems to be a general inclination to make up for lost time and social enthusiasm seems to have gathered fresh impetus from this period of enforced inactivity.

The arrival of the new American Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard precipitated an early season of unwonted activity. Every one seems bent upon speeding the parting and welcoming the coming guests and the result has been an uninterrupted round of dinners, déjeuners, dances and musicales.

The Smartest Event.

Quite the smartest of these private parties was the large dinner and dance given by the Honorable Mary Portman and Miss Amy Hare for Mr. and Mrs. Gerard and Mr. and Mrs. Thackara. The guests further included the British Ambassador, Sir Edward Goschen, Frau Anna von Roth, Baron von Rosen, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Magnus, Mrs. Robert Tornow, Miss Eleanor Thackara, Miss Margaret Payne Lace, Major George T. Langhorne, Mr. John B. Moore, the Secretary of the Legation, Mr. Balder, and Mrs. Arthur Magnus.

Many additional guests came in for the dancing, the tango being barred from the programme until the official personages had withdrawn. The exceptionally graceful manner in which this dance was interpreted by Miss Eleanor Thackara and Miss Margaret Lace, with their attendant cavaliers, would have completely disarmed the criticism of the most violent anti-tango minds.

Among the later guests were Earl and Lady Granville, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew, the American Naval Attaché and Mrs. Gherardi, Herr Felix von Weingartner, the distinguished conductor and his American wife, Mme. Marcel Weingartner, Mrs. Anna B. McElee, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen S. McFadden and Miss Helen McFadden and Mrs. Roy McElree, of Hamburg.

Biggest German Affair.

The outstanding event in German social circles was the big charity tea given in the Zoological Garden restaurant for the benefit of the poor of the educated classes. The German Crown Princess was present, looking lovely in a white satin gown and a hat—the latter would have had difficulty in escaping the vigilant eye of an American custom house officer—and wearing a chinchilla stole and muff.

Frau von Below, the American wife of Colonel von Below, commander of the Royal Augusta Guards, presided at a table decorated with a wealth of old silver and pink roses. Her guests were entirely from the diplomatic circles and included the American Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard and Mr. Thackara.

A luncheon was the special designation given to the week's meeting of the American Luncheon Club held at the Hotel Adlon. The retiring Consul General on this occasion was raised from the rank of membership to be the principal guest. Upon the American Ambassador, as chairman and toastmaster of the day, devolved the pleasant duty of making a speech of presentation, accompanying a gift of a silver loving cup, upon which was inscribed "To Consul General Alexander M. Thackara as a token of friendship and esteem from the American Luncheon Club."

Talk on Opera.

Mrs. Anna McElree, who recently was appointed acting president of the Ladies' Union of the American Church, ushered in a series of Monday afternoon teas by inviting the members and guests to listen to an analytical talk on Carpentier's opera "Louise" given by Mrs. Louise Van Ogle, of Seattle, who is well known in the United States as a lecturer on musical topics. She is now on her way to Russia with Mrs. John L. Wilson, widow of Senator Wilson, of Washington, where she expects to make a study of Russian opera at first hand and collect material for extending the scope of the subject. The well known aria of "Louise" was sung by Miss Leila Holterhoff, an interesting young blind soprano. Before the introduction of the speaker a letter was read by Mrs. Stephen S. McFadden, vice president, in which Mrs. James W. Gerard accepted the invitation to become honorary president of the organization.

Mrs. T. Stewart White entertained at dinner for the American Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard, the remaining guests of the party being Count Montgelas, of the Foreign Office, and Countess Montgelas, the latter's mother, Mrs. Charles Hazeltine, of Grand Rapids; Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Conger, Miss Agnes Kerr, Baroness von Schroeder, Mrs. Dewitt Poole and Mr. Roderick White.

Others Who Entertain.

Other hostesses of the week were Mrs. M. E. Walker, who entertained for Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Messner, of Chicago; Mrs. Harry Hirsh, of Philadelphia, who offered her guests a musical programme contributed by Mr. John Thompson, a young American pianist, and Mme. Kinsinger, whose salon presented the customary international physiognomy on the afternoon she entertained for Mr. Adolphe Borchard, of the French Musical World.

Upon learning of the death of her sister, Mrs. Thomas Williams Fitch, Mrs. Thackara cancelled all her engagements, and this will necessitate some sweeping changes in the social slate, as many of the forthcoming events were to be given either by or for the family of the Consul General.

DAUGHTER OF GERMANY'S "COAL KING" TO BE ENGLISHMAN'S BRIDE

FRÄULEIN MARIANNE VON FRIEDLANDER-FULD

This young lady is the only child and heir of Herr von Friedlander-Fuld, the Berlin "Coal King," and has recently become engaged to the Hon. John Freeman-Mitford, fourth son of Lord Redesdale. The "Coal King" is said to be worth some $25,000,000. Arrangements are being made whereby Mr. Freeman-Mitford, who has been in business for some time in Hamburg, will become a partner in his future father-in-law's firm.

NO FUSS OR FRILLS FOR ENGLISH BRIDES IF FASHION OF SIMPLICITY HOLDS GOOD

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, December 6.

WHILE sportsmen are busy in the country decreasing the pheasant population the social activities of London are devoted to charity bazaars and weddings. Princess Christian and the Duchess of Marlborough being the most prominent in the promotion of the former. If the question were asked "Who is the busiest English princess?" the answer certainly would be "Princess Christian." Though in her sixty-seventh year, wrapped in warm sables, she gets about with astonishing agility, here, there and everywhere. She is a patroness as well as an active worker in innumerable charities and always is sought after to preside at bazaars, for her winning manner invites the most generous of purchases. Her presence each day at the Royal School of Art needlework sale for nearly five hours, working busily all the time, was not matched by many society women, however enthusiastic they might be.

The activity of the Duchess of Marlborough also is extraordinary. Never a day passes without her name being associated with some philanthropic public movement. Her magnificent home, Sunderland House, is becoming a sort of clearing house for charitable effort. This week she has had a big sale of articles of clothing for prisoners' wives, in whom she takes the deepest interest. Many well known society ladies assisted her, including Lady Acheson, Lady Blandford, Lady Pembroke and Lady Dorothy Browne.

Mr. Page to Speak.

The American Ambassador is to speak at the Duchess of Marlborough's "at home" at Sunderland House in favor of Dr. Barnado's homes.

Lady Desies also is showing an interest in charitable work. On Thursday she assisted Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll at the bazaar in aid of the Church Army.

Princess Arthur of Connaught makes her appearance in the world of charity on December 11, when, with Prince Arthur, she opens the great military bazaar in Horticultural Hall under the patronage of the King. This is one of the most important functions of the season. Queen Alexandra is one of the patrons, the list including nearly all the dukes and duchesses and earls and countesses in the peerage.

Among the weddings the surprise marriage of Lady Eva Cholmondeley and Mr. Harry Paravicini at Christ Church, Mayfair, though not the only quiet society wedding recently, seems likely to be taken as an example by others. For instance Prince Louis of Battenberg and his wife, twenty years ago, when they were Duke and Duchess of York and the late King was Prince of Wales, but this is the first time the sovereign and his consort have stopped at the castle. The King has enjoyed excellent shooting over the well preserved coverts, Lord Durham's party including Mr. John Lambton, who some day is likely to succeed to the family honors; the Duke of Leeds, Lord Howick, Mr. Darcy Lambton, Lord Ribblesdale, Lord Derby and Lord Herbert Vane-Tempest.

Queen with the Lowly.

While the King was enjoying the sport the Queen was occupied in making friends of the poor in the neighborhood, calling on them, according to her wont, in their homes. One notable journey was to Middlesome Moor, to the toilworn workers passing their last years in a comfortable home. To the men assembled in the dining room the Queen talked easily in simple, practical language, asking many kindly questions. The brisk moorland air had made the Queen's eyes sparkle and her cheeks ruddy. Her sealskin and ermine coat and black velvet hat with white plumes and violet skirt costume with white gloves made a picture which delighted the old miners. The Queen gave a little sigh of sympathy when told that these men had all begun work before they were nine years old. Before leaving the Queen shook hands with one Thomas Fenwick, seventy-five years old, who boldly offered his hand, and John Clark, eighty-five, made a little speech, saying:—"We wish you long life and good health and we all thank you for coming to see us." The Queen smiled and replied:—"I am very glad to have come to see you and to know you in your homes."

Loose the Cup.

The Queen also entered the cottage of Mary Huntley, eighty-seven, who was overcome by emotion. "I'm so sorry you've lost your husband," said the Queen, and, turning to Mrs. Huntley's granddaughter, said:—"You must take great care of her." The aged woman shook hands with the Queen, saying quickly:—"Good luck to Your Majesty."

At the Old Woman's Home the Queen accepted a cup of coffee. Mrs. Rutter, the matron, afterward was asked for what she would sell the cup and saucer from which the Queen drank. She testily replied:—"Money won't buy them." She has put the cup and saucer and teaspoon in a glass case.

The King and Queen returned to Sandringham from Lambton Castle this week but not for long, as they are due on December 8 at Chesworth to stop with the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire for five days. This will be their first call there since the accession.

All the World to Get Its Time from the Eiffel Tower in Paris

International Hour Association Formed in Paris to Give Greenwich Time by Wireless Messages to Ships at Sea and Stations on Land.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
PARIS, December 6.

A DECISION of great importance, as well from a scientific point of view as from that of the worldwide influence of France, marked the International Hour Conference which has just held its sessions at the Observatory of Paris. The delegates of the countries represented at this meeting signed a document henceforth historic by which there is created an International Hour Association, the headquarters of which are established in Paris.

The City of Light becomes by this fact the hour capital of the world, where there will be received, co-ordinated, analyzed and preserved all the documents relative to the determination, the measuring and the distribution of time. The new agreement, in organizing in Paris itself the centre of time regulation, renders a merited homage to French science, which for several years has especially distinguished itself by sending out Hertzian signals radiated from the gigantic antennae formed by the Eiffel Tower, under the judicious direction of Commandant Ferrie, with the collaboration of the observatory and of the Bureau of Longitudes, signals which bring to ships isolated in foggy seas the hour of Paris and sometimes their safety.

But who would ever have thought only a quarter of a century ago that serious scientists of all countries would devote a day of profound and peaceful discussions to the fugitive hours, the flight of which, sad or joyous, precious or idle, rules in truth our life?

A Complete Fiasco.

When in 1880 the Paris Observatory offered to telegraph the time free of charge to all the cities which should ask for it, there was a complete fiasco. It is quite true that at the end of thirty years of courteous and unwearied manœuvres, in 1911, seven cities in all had accepted this invitation. The others obstinately turned a deaf ear to it.

But in the meantime the Hertzian waves were discovered. Rapid and light, by an electric spark they are going to change this state of things. With them disappears the complicated apparatus of wires, poles and cables. It was soon perceived that these marvellous waves, which are propagated in every direction, which traverse the thickest walls and surround us invisibly with a subtle reservoir of untranslated thoughts, can be easily held captive. The receiving apparatus is simplified to such an extent that to-day ingenious young fellows construct at very small expense delightful detectors, with which they receive surreptitiously the radio-telegraphic messages of the Eiffel Tower.

A Parisian Amusement.

This has even become an amusement in which many Parisians take part. One hears with curiosity the tic-tacs, short or long, which are sounded in the little receiving apparatus and feels a strange emotion in thinking that at the same moment—or almost within a few hundredths of a second—this same ticking is heard in Washington, 6,200 kilometres (3,880 miles) from Paris; in the solitude of the seas by ships which voyage between the Old and the New Continent; and at immense distances in Europe and Africa. It is like a mysterious voice which whispers the same word across space and establishes a tacit accord between all those who hear it, unknown to each other. But the problem of regulating the time has a bearing very much greater than the private interests of amateurs.

Our readers perhaps remember that two years ago, in February, 1911, on the occasion of the reformation of time in France and our adherence to Greenwich time, we discussed this question here in all its details. We will only refer to it, therefore, very summarily.

On this moving planetary ball, on the vibrating surface of which the great mystery of life unfolds our ephemeral existence, time only exists relatively to the movement of the earth in connection with the apparent course of the other heavenly bodies. The sun not being able to shine at the same moment above all the points of our round machine, the result is that two neighboring localities or two streets very near together have not exactly the same true hour. In our latitudes a distance of 366 metres (333 yards) from west to east or in the opposite direction corresponds to a difference of a second of time. To be strictly in accord with the hour given by the apparent advance of Apollo's chariot, it would be necessary for us to change the position of the hands of our watches at each of our movements from east to west or in the opposite direction and to be constantly in disagreement among ourselves.

Simplifying the Time.

To avoid the manifold disputes which would follow, it is indispensable to simplify the question of time. To make it completely uniform is a utopia. That would be to wish to make of the day-star the night-star for our antipodes, to glorify Phœbus and his poetic nocturnal court at noon for the inhabitants of the opposite hemisphere. Human logic, sometimes so hesitating, has recoiled from that anachronism.

It has been found wiser to divide the terrestial globe into twenty-four sections from north to south, each one measuring fifteen degrees in width. All the countries included in one of these sections have the same official hour at the same instant. They are an hour behind those of the section on the right, to the east, and are an hour ahead of those on the left, to the west. This system of hour sections has received the united approval of nearly all civilised nations, with very few exceptions, and this understanding had for its corollary the foundation of the new International Hour Association. The choice of the nation which was to be the depository of the universal data as to time might have aroused certain rivalries. But Germany has as compensation the Central Astronomical Bureau, of Kiel, and England can console herself by thinking that she gives the tone, the "the," of the world hour, because Paris has adopted that of Greenwich.

Eiffel Tower Internationalised.

So the Eiffel Tower, whose scientific usefulness is constantly affirmed, has been internationalised and gives twice a day, morning and evening, the hour of Paris to the world. Other stations, of which that of Norddeich is now in operation, will reply to our Hertzian signals at definite moments and the compilation of all these messages will in the last analysis permit of measuring the hour with great precision.

This precision which is hoped for does not have for its object merely an intellectual diversion. It will have its practical reflex in navigation, in geodesy, in the delimitation of frontiers, in meteorology, in seismology, in voyages of exploration and the like, without counting the late scientific circumstances of our daily life. Long ago, even then the era of an international time accord which is beginning.

Biggest Firm Is Not on Telephone

Messrs. Joseph Rodgers & Co., of Sheffield, Cutlers, Succeed Without the Wire.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, December 6.

"THEY are probably the only big firm in England who are not on the telephone. Yet it has made no difference to their success."

Such was the opinion expressed by a prosperous Sheffield merchant concerning the biggest cutlery firm in Sheffield—Messrs. Joseph Rodgers & Co.

It was London's trying telephone service which prompted the remark, and the merchant went on to tell of a journey to the famous cutlery works which occupies five acres of ground, when he found that, except for an interdepartment telephone, there is not only no telephone but not a typewriter on the premises. The letters are all written by sedate clerks in a clear, legible handwriting, just as they were in 1682, when the firm was granted its first trade mark.

There are no new labor saving devices to be found, and anything that suggests hustling is strongly deprecated.

"We don't believe in doing anything foolish," said Mr. John Rodgers, the head of the firm. "It is true that we are not on the telephone, although we have telephonic communication between the different departments. Some time ago we were on the telephone, but we cut it off."

Other members of the firm expressed themselves in favor of the steady, old-fashioned business method.

"It is much better to keep safe and sound, as we have done for more than two centuries, than to rush wildly ahead," said one. "No doubt if some American business man was in a firm like ours he would try to make things hum, but I am sure he would do more harm than good in the long run."

London Expects Big Christmas

Shopkeepers, as Well as Hotel Men and Boys and Girls, Are Now Eager.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, December 6.

Boys and girls long ago began to count the days to Christmas, and tourists in London cannot fail to observe signs of the approach of the festival. Business men agree that preparations for Yuletide have been made unusually early, the reason apparently being a desire to mitigate the "last minute rush."

Shopkeepers are looking forward to a record Christmastide, and this has, of course, resulted in people remembering relatives and friends abroad more generously than usual. Many Christmas mails have already left, and these, with others now leaving, have brought about a brisk and early season.

"Our preparations began fully two weeks ahead of last year," said the manager of a big London store. "Our catalogue is almost four weeks ahead, and we are doing all we can to decrease the eleventh hour rush. There is but one saving feature of the situation. Schoolboys do not come home until about December 18, so that we can devote all our attention to the grown-ups. But when the boys and girls come home—well, the rush will be terrific."

Christmas literature promises to be unusually attractive. Every firm issues catalogues nowadays, and a noticeable portent of Christmas is the appearance of these in the letter box. The "bazaars" also are beginning unusually early in the shops. At Covent Garden, always a centre of activity when an important celebration is approaching, dealers are placing their orders for Christmas trees, and one firm alone has purchased between 10,000 and 20,000 trees in Norfolk. This is said to be the largest number grown in England, even [illegible] for sale for the Christmas trade.

Some Splendid Art To Be Sold at Coming Auctions in London

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, December 6.

THE art collection formed by the late Mr. Walter Lionel Behrens, of Manchester, is one of the most interesting and certainly by far the largest which will be disposed of in the sale rooms this season. Portions are being sent to Christie's, Sotheby's and Messrs. Glendining's for dispersal during December, and even then several more portions will be left for disposal next year.

Mr. Behrens was well known as an indefatigable and clever collector of the smaller objects of Japanese handicraft—netsukes, inro and other objects in lacquer, sword furniture and similar articles on which the Japanese workmen lavished a skill which, in its way, has never been equalled. In the pursuit of his aim Mr. Behrens spared neither time nor expense. The result was a collection of an extent which is said to surpass any other public or private accumulation.

Among so many it is no easy matter to single out any special examples, but there is the famous netsuké with a curious representation of Christ bearing the cross, one of those rare survivals of Christianity in Japan, which was so ruthlessly stamped out in the early years of the seventeenth century. There are [illegible] and Holy Child" of the same character, and a very curious "Addin and Wonderful [illegible]."

The lacquer is of great interest and value. Several pieces may [illegible] ally be attributed to one of the greatest masters, Korin, one of which, a [illegible] 20x25cm., with dotted lid, is [illegible] with a design of twenty-seven [illegible] and long grass in gold hiramakiye and [illegible] in relief. The inro, or medicine boxes, worn in old Japan at the girdle, are not less beautiful and well chosen. The [illegible] furniture, or mounts, in the days when the sword was the outward and visible sign of national pride and personal honor in Japan, [illegible] its highest [illegible] skill, is undoubtedly of high quality, and there also are wondrously wrought Buddhas and other deities of the greatest interest.

But Mr. Behrens did not confine his attention entirely to Japanese [illegible]. He had a fine taste in furniture, and this section is to be offered at Christie's rooms on December 12. This will include some notable examples of Chippendale and other eighteenth century styles, a remarkable series of chairs dating back [illegible] and one piece probably the finest Jacobean table in existence. This is the famous Unsworth table, dated 1601, made for and for generations in the possession of the Unsworth family, who were among the oldest tenants of the Earls of Derby. It has finely carved on its front a representation of the old family legend of the killing of the dragon which gained [illegible] and lands for the Thomas Unsworth who founded the family.

The story goes that the table was carved with the dagger used by the hero, but the workmanship is too fine for credence to be given to this effort of the story teller's imagination. But there is no doubt as to the authenticity and artistic value of the table.

The large and important collection of Chinese blue and white porcelain, Persian and other wares is to be disposed at Sotheby's rooms before Christmas.

Keeping for the most part to well worn traditions, the hundred and sixty-first exhibition of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colors at the gallery in Pall Mall, East contains a higher proportion of good work than usual. If the greater number of the 25 drawings represent a conventional outlook on nature and a timid [illegible] of the medium there is a "forward edge," by no means confined to the almost recruits, that keeps things moving.

Perhaps the most striking figure of the exhibition is the series of small landscapes by Mr. George Clausen, R. A. Four of these are studies of white dog, full of the color [illegible] to speak, with a firm, broad sweep of the brush, the resulting effect is nature being the gainer. [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WHAT IS PROGRESS

Every Scientific Invention Has Its Human Side

Now and then some prophet looking only at the mechanical side of progress cries out that there is no real benefit in it. But the mechanical cannot be separated from the human side.

Compare the case of the immigrant of to-day with that of his predecessor of fifty or a hundred years ago. In the former the parting with friends in the old country was like death. The Atlantic voyage was a tremendous undertaking. It was followed by a long and toilsome land journey. Few of the exiles could expect to become wealthy enough to return to their native land. Communication by letter was slow. The telegraph and the cable when first introduced were expensive luxuries. To-day the immigrant crosses the Atlantic in less than a week and is whisked off to his destination by fast train in a few days more. He has speedy communication by mail with his friends at home. He can cable if necessary at a moderate expense. He sends money orders home. He receives parcels of plum-pudding at Christmas. A visit to the old land is regarded as no great undertaking.

So every scientific invention has its human side. It lessens farm labor and increases the supply of food. It makes the work of the housewife easier. It makes the house warmer. It enormously increases the output of clothing and other necessaries. If you think these things have no human side, try wearing shabby clothes. Talk to some householder who finds it hard to pay house rent and pay the butcher and buy new shoes to take the place of those that the kids wear out so fast.

Japanese Entertainments

Stage management in Japan is somewhat eccentric. When an actor is killed during the play a man in black rushes on and holds a large cloak before the supposed corpse, who rises and runs off the stage. The scenes are never shifted, but the whole stage revolves upon wheels; while between the acts the children among the audience rush behind the curtain and play until the drum beats for another act. The performance begins at 10 a.m., and the audience provision themselves for twenty-four hours, curling themselves up on mats and smoking the whole time.

Monster Apples

A plate of three apples weighing altogether eighty-six ounces were shown at the Plymouth fruit and flower show, the largest of the three, a North Derby, weighing thirty ounces.

HACKING COUGH OF TWO MONTHS STANDING

Cured by Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne

You know how hard it is to get rid of a cough that has hung on for even two weeks, let alone two months. So you will appreciate what Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne did for Mr. Patrick Holland, of East Baltic, P. E. I. He says:

"I suffered from a hacking cough for over two months. I tried several remedies, but they failed to cure me. At last I tried Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, and got such relief that I tried more, and after using three bottles was absolutely cured."

The unique, scientific combination of three such reliable remedies makes Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne the best preparation that that has ever been offered for all sorts of colds and coughs. A CLEVER ANIMAL IS THE BEAVER

Country Once Swarmed With Millions of These Busy and Intelligent Little Workers

The beaver is the smartest of all wild animals. He has a mental process which corresponds to the reasoning power in man. Also he is a genuine historical celebrity. No other animal has cut such a figure in the development of the North American continent.

Before the white man came beavers were distributed over North America perhaps more widely than any other animal. The beaver population was probably densest to the south-west of Hudson Bay and about the headwaters of the Missouri and Columbia Rivers. Along the thousands of smaller streams throughout North America there was colony after colony, dam after dam, in close succession, sometimes as many as 300 beaver ponds to the mile.

The beaver population at the beginning of the seventeenth century must have been upward of 100,000,000, distributed over an area of approximately 6,000,000 square miles.

The majority of dams are made of slender green poles, which are placed lengthwise with the flow for the bottom, and set braced with the end upstream a foot or so higher than the downstream end. With these there are occasionally used small limby trees. The large end of the tree is placed upstream and the small bushy end downstream.

If in a current these sometimes are weighted down with mud and stones. Short, stout sticks and long, slender poles are deftly mingled in the dam as it rises.

Beaver houses that are built in a pond usually stand in three or four feet of water. The foundation is laid on the bottom of the pond, of the size intended for the house, and built up a solid mass to a few inches above water level. This island-like foundation is covered with a dome-shaped house, the central portion of the foundation forming the floor of the low-vaulted room which is enclosed by the thick house walls. In building the house the beaver provides a temporary support for the combined roof and walls by piling in the centre of the floor a two-foot mound of mud. Over this is placed a somewhat flattened tepee or cone-shaped frame of sticks and small poles. These stand on the outer part of the foundation and lean inward, with upper ends meeting against and above the temporary support. The beaver then cover this framework with two or three feet of mud, brush and turf, and thus make the walls and the roof of the house. When the outer part of the house is completed they dig an inclined passageway, from the bottom of the pond up through the foundation, into the irregular space left between the supporting pile of mud and the walls. And of this space they shape a room by clawing out the temporary support and gnawing off the intruding sticks. This represents the most highly developed type of beaver house.

The room is from one to three feet high and from three to twenty feet across. The room is a kind of burrow and this is without either door or window. Half buried sticks make a comparatively dry floor, despite the fact that it is only a few inches above water level.

In many localities the canals or ditches dug and used by the beaver form their most necessary and extensive works. These canals require enormous labor and much skill. In transporting trees for food supply, water transportation is so much easier and safer than land that wherever the immediate surroundings of the pond are comparatively level the beaver endeavors to lead water out to the tree groves by digging a canal from the edge of the pond to these groves. The felled trees are by this means easily floated into the pond.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Decide NOW for Good Roads—

Don't wait until Summer

YOU can't build roads in winter—but what you can do is to decide which roads shall be started next spring. Get an early start so that the roads will be ready for use in summer. If you wait till spring before deciding what to do you will find when late summer and early fall come around, that your roads are still unfinished—and that is the time you need them most.

Outline your road needs now, make investigations into the cost and type of construction, influence public opinion for highways that mean greater economy to every person in your community.

Start right now—get action on the improvement of your bad roads—begin the construction as soon as spring opens, and by next summer you will have roads over which you can haul a full load in less time than you could formerly haul only half a load.

Good Roads (not a makeshift of filling up ruts and mud-holes), besides marking the economic progress of a community, are an important factor in reducing the cost of living and improving the general prosperity. Insist on "good roads"—roads that will stay good for years to come, that kind is cheapest.

Investigate Concrete Roads

THEY are not only the "best good roads," but they are cheapest at the end of ten, fifteen or twenty years. Their first cost is comparatively the same as that of any good road, but their maintenance cost minimizes the original expenditure because the upkeep is practically nothing. This makes concrete the "economy road," and being free from ruts, holes, mud and dust, easy of traction, and open to traffic the year round, makes concrete the "road to satisfaction."

Every citizen owes it to himself, to his family and to his community, to use his influence for good roads because they have a bearing on his everyday life, which is of vital importance to his economic living and future prosperity.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HENRY GETS A REST

"Henry said," related Mrs. Dillpickle, "that he was not feeling very fit and the change would do him good. 'If you insist,' said he, 'on spending a week in Michigan at the summer cottage getting things ready for the family invasion I might as well go along. There will be fishing—it's just the time for bass—and, besides, maybe I can help you.'

"Henry added that last phrase with the air of a guilty sudden thought. He is a good husband, but I must say that around the house Henry Dillpickle is about as much use as a flying machine or a white elephant. But I let him go along. I've had experience before when I yearned for a strong right arm to beat rugs and rake and spade and scrub and couldn't hire any one because all the men were doing spring plowing and all the women were busy wiping up mud tracks after them.

"Henry has put on too much weight and all winter he mourned because he had no time to take an expensive gymnastic and massage course to run down his weight. He has talked loud and long about how willingly he would live on bran diet and be pounded to a jelly if only he could lose weight, and I thought I saw a way to help him and also myself.

"When the launch dumped us and our baggage on the pier and went coughing away Henry began looking at the lake with that absorbed, feverish, fisherman's stare, I stopped that immediately.

"'Run on to the cottage, Henry,' I said, 'and get the wheelbarrow and cart up the trunk and the linoleum and the suitcase and the groceries.'

"'In these clothes?' he howled reproachfully.

"'There is a lovely suit hanging in the closet at the cottage,' I told him. 'Don't you remember? It's the one you wore when you fell into the lake and went berrying and got run over by the Fishers' automobile. There is fringe on the cuffs, but nobody will see you—trot on!'

"The way Henry puffed and steamed getting that luggage to the house would have been heartrending had I not been too busy cleaning out the kitchen. I made him eat his lunch on the kitchen table, which broke his proud heart. Just as he was getting out an after-lunch cigar I put a spade into his hand.

"'You will have time to fix about half the garden this afternoon,' I told him. 'Then there's the yard to rake, and I want what's left of the woodpile moved, and you know we're going to make a new path to the lake. Meanwhile, I wish you'd beat these rugs.'

"Henry looked at me reproachfully, but I was adamant. 'I did think,' said he feebly, 'that maybe I'd get a nice mess of fish for dinner'—

"'Fish?' echoed I. 'Oh, my no! Not when I have a lovely can of salmon ready!'

"Henry groaned and took up the white man's burden. He went to bed at 7 o'clock that night, walking bent over like an old man. He said that never again should he wonder at the hobbling, shuffling gait of steady farmers. He understood why they couldn't straighten up.

"He tried to slip out at 5 the next morning to go fishing, but I opened one eye and suggested that it would be nice if he would start the kitchen fire and a blaze in the fireplace. Two hours later I found Henry, all smudged like a stoker, shaking his fist at the kitchen stove, which he had entirely covered with all the ashes he hadn't scattered over the floor. 'I've put everything on that fire of yours,' he stormed, 'from kerosene to vanilla extract, and it won't burn! There is a Michigan law against cook stoves burning, I know'—

"When I suggested that if he opened the drafts instead of shutting them it might be better, Henry just blew up and popped out of doors, where he chopped the window boxes into kindling wood before he realized what he was doing. I had to stand over him that day to make him keep on with the garden. By night he said he felt very queer and knew he was going to die and that he had no idea I had such a cruel and inconsiderate nature.

"The next morning he groaned feebly when I woke him and then he refused to get up. He said his head ached and his back ached, and his legs and arms ached, and why in thunder didn't I hire a man to do my slaving and let him expire in peace?

"I had to spend a great deal of the day putting hot cloths on Henry's aches and pains and soothing his disposition, and when he did rise from his bed of suffering he said 'Ouch!' whenever he moved and he looked pale.

"The last day there I let him go fishing and he came home with a fine string of fish. He nearly fainted when I said that, of course, he would have to clean them for me. Henry Dillpickle can't kill a mosquito without gulping and those fish were still lively. At dinner he said he guessed he had lost his fondness for fish.

"Henry said he was mighty glad to get home," concluded Mrs. Dillpickle, "where he could recover his health and strength after his strenuous stay in the country!"

How George Did It.

A Scotsman visiting in America stood gazing at a fine statue of Geo. Washington, when an American approached.

"That was a great and good man, Sandy," said the American; "a lie never passed his lips."

"Weel," said the Scot, "I praysume he talked through his nose like the rest o' ye."

SOAP ON YOUR HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF; SCALP GETS DRY, THEN HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25 cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse"

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause th hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and tryit.

INDICATES PROSPERITY.

High Cost of Living Doesn't Worry Hon. Mr. Crothers.

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 9.—"To my mind, the high cost of living is an indication of the prosperity and expansion of this country," declared Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, in the course of an address on labor conditions in Canada at the business men's luncheon at the Queen Hotel yesterday.

"I do not profess to be an expert, but, in my opinion, the reason for the high cost of living is that there is a smaller percentage of people tilling the soil than ever before. The supply is not equal to the demand, and consequently the prices go up.

"If you want cheap living let's have a few years of hard times."

Arsenal Superintendent Retired.

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.—Col. Gaudet, superintendent of the Quebec arsenal, has been retired with a pension as colonel of artillery, but not as superintendent of the arsenal.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

CORNISHMEN PROTEST.

British Miners Are Aroused by Murders In Michigan.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 9.—Three hundred Cornish miners employed by the Champion Mine at Rainesdale in the copper strike district, aroused by the murder of Arthur and Harry Jame and Thomas Daly, Englishmen, Sunday morning, yesterday held an indignation meeting. The Western Federation of Miners was denounced and a demand was made for protection and law enforcement. A committee was appointed to inform the mine management that the protestants would not return to work unless the company agreed not to reinstate the strikers.

Rainesville strikers were not permitted to parade yesterday.

At Baltic strikers refused to obey the order of deputy sheriffs not to traverse mine property and a shot was fired at the officers. The latter charged with riot sticks and dispersed the crowd.

The murder of the James and Daly has been called to the attention of the British Government.

Can't Stop Exclusion.

ROME, Dec. 9.—The Government was interrogated in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday regarding the exclusion from the United States of illiterate immigrants, which special reference to what measures it intends to take in the way of remedy.

It was stated in behalf of the Government that intervention in the internal affairs of the United States was impossible. It was suggested that the only means to combat exclusion was through diplomatic influence and by establishing schools in Italy for emigrants.

He's Off For Europe.

HAVANA, Dec. 9.—Adolfe de la Lama, Minister of Finance in the Cabinet of Provisional President Huerta, arrived here yesterday from Vera Cruz on board the steamer Ypiranga. Senor de la Lama is going to Europe by way of New York.

The Mexican Finance Minister refused to make any statement with regard to the situation in Mexico. He said his purpose in going to Europe was to place his sons at Swiss schools.

Railroad Aids Temperance.

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 9.—Action against illegal liquor traffic in this state was taken by the Boston & Maine Railroad yesterday. A rule was issued that shippers and those to whom liquors are forwarded over the railroad must sign a statement that the consignment is not to be received, sold or possessed in violation of state or federal laws.

Whitewash Had Thieving.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—During the fifteen minutes that Solomon Goldman was away from his jewelry store yesterday, thieves plastered the front windows and glass door with whitewash so that no one could look inside, opened the door with a key and stole watches, rings and jewels worth $5,000. The robbery occurred while crowds were passing on the sidewalk.

The police call it one of the quickest and boldest jobs on record.

A REAL NERVE AND BODY BUILDING MEDICINE

When you're sick or run down, keep away from so-called "tonics." The alcohol and dangerous drugs many of them contain stimulate you for a few minutes after the dose is taken—then leave you worse off than ever. You cannot get well by taking stimulants. You are liable to get worse.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is not a stimulant. It is a real nerve and body and blood-building medicine. It puts the system into shape to overcome present and resist future sickness. It does not contain a drop of alcohol nor anything else harmful. But it builds you up, makes you feel better, stronger, livelier—not the first hour—but after a few days, when the strengthening, toning and tissue-building ingredients have had a chance to work through your blood into those muscles and organs that need their vitality-giving help. The four Hypophosphites it contains strengthens the nerves while purest Olive Oil nourishes them.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is an ideal, common-sense invigorator and up-builder. There is direct benefit to you in every one of its ingredients. You who are weak and run-down, and you who are apparently well now, but are liable to suffer from various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. For the tired-out, run-down, nervous, emaciated or debilitated—the convalescing—growing children—aged people—it is sensible aid to renewed strength, better spirits, growing health.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion—king of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your family. Pleasant-tasting—unlike the cod liver oil preparations—you'll be as enthusiastic about it as we are when you have noted its strengthening, invigorating, building-up, disease-preventing effects. If it does not help you, your money will be given back to you without argument. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of more than 7,000 leading drug stores throughout United States, Canada and Great Britain.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The first C. N. R. train to run from Brockville to Ottawa made the trip yesterday via Brockville Junction.

A report reached Goderich yesterday that the wreck of the Wexford had been located in Lake Huron close to Bayfield.

Four men were killed in an explosion yeste. day in the gelatine mixing house of the Re anno Chemical Co. at Gibbstown, N.J.

An ordinance making it a misdemeanor for women to wear hatpins with unprotected points while in crowded places has been issued in Paris, France.

Alexander G. McCormick, district agent for the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., dropped dead in his office at Ottawa yesterday. Death was due to heart failure.

A crew of ten men, who abandoned the water-logged schooner Aloha in a storm last Sunday and took refuge on Destruction Island in Puget Sound, were rescued by a tug.

Myrtle Gilroy of Glen Buell, pupil of the Brockville Collegiate Institute while visiting her home on Saturday, received a shock from an electric hand-battery. Her condition is serious.

The Montreal branch of the Cutters' and Trimmers' Union has passed a resolution which binds its 200 members to a promise to boycott eggs in any shape because of the high price.

The Leland Hotel, Winnipeg, owned by C. J. Rechon, the well-known horseman and curler, was almost completely destroyed by fire Sunday night. The loss is $50,000, covered by insurance.

WILL SAVE ANIMALS.

International Congress Begins Struggle With the "Interests."

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 9.—An international congress for the protection of wild animals met here recently on the invitation of the Swiss Government and seventeen countries were represented. After lengthy discussion the congress appointed an international committee, with headquarters at Basel, which will promote protective legislation and organize propaganda in favor of the object of the congress.

The most urgent work of the committee will be to obtain the passage of laws stopping the wholesale destruction of whales and seals, which threatens to exterminate those species in a few years. Attention will be turned to the fur animals, birds of paradise, aigrettes and big game, such as elephants.

The movement is faced with the strenuous opposition of strong business interests, for the capital engaged in the whaling, fur, feather and ivory trades may be counted in hundreds of millions.

HEAD STUFFED? GOT A COLD? TRY PAPE'S

"Pape's Cold Compound" relieves worst cold or the grippe in few hours—No quinine used.

Take "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until you have taken three doses, then all grippe misery goes and your cold will be broken. It promptly opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of the head; stops nasty discharge or nose running; relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling. Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitute.

FORGETS HIS NAME.

Young Man Researches Nature To Find Out Who He Is.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 9.—With his mind a blank for more than twenty-four hours, a young man, who lost his memory when he fainted in the lobby of St. Paul's Church Sunday night, begged the nurses at the Memorial Hospital to do all in their power to learn who he is.

Yesterday he was questioned by Dr. Miller, but was unable to tell his name or where his home is. A picture of two children, a girl about five years old and a boy about three years old, a Toronto street car transfer, dated Nov. 28, and a Buffalo & Niagara trolley conductor's receipt, found in his pockets, were shown to the man, but none of them awakened his memory.

The man is about 26 years old, 180 pounds in weight, six feet tall, light complexion, well dressed.

"Blind Pigger" Fined.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 9. — Police Magistrate Masson yesterday morning imposed a fine of $100 and costs on Frank Julica, a foreigner, who conducts a boarding-house at Point Anne. The accused was convicted of selling liquor without a license in a local option municipality.

New Zealand Ends World's Tour.

LONDON, Dec. 9—The British battle cruiser New Zealand, a gift of the Dominion of New Zealand to Great Britain, arrived at Devonport yesterday, thereby concluding a world's tour, during which she covered 40,000 miles and crossed the Equator four times.

Sculptor's Sudden Death.

ROME, Italy, Dec. 9.—Franklyn Simmons, a well-known American sculptor, died suddenly here yesterday while taking a hot bath.

Mr. Simmons was born at Webster, Maine, Jan. 11, 1839. Since 1866 he had lived mostly in Rome. His work included about 100 portrait busts in marble, some fifteen public monuments and numerous ideal statues. The sculptor was decorated three times by the King of Italy.

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

If Costive, Headachy, Bilious, Stomach Sour, Breath Bad—Clean Your Liver and Bowels

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never grip or sicken.

SOME USEFUL RECIPES

Cheese Straws.

One cup of grated cheese, cayenne to taste, half scant cup of butter, half cup lard, half cup ice water, half teaspoon baking powder. Put baking powder into the flour; add cheese and cayenne. Rub well into this the lard and butter, then pour carefully in the centre of the above mixture the ice water. Mix with a silver fork. Flour breadboard, roll lightly, bring four corners together, and roll once more, this time to a wafer-life thinness. Cut into finger strips and bake.

Plain Christmas Pudding.

Half pound raisins, half pound currants, six ounces bread crumbs, half pound flour, one pound suet, six ounces molasses, two eggs, one-quarter pound candied peel, and one teaspoonful of ground ginger. Wash, stone and pick fruit. Mix all dry ingredients thoroughly; add the eggs, well beaten. Warm the molasses, add to it a little milk; mix all thoroughly, turn into a greased mould and boil for 8 hours.

COST WILL BE ADDED TO THE ASSESSMENT

At the Conclusion of the Present Year, Cost of Garbage Collection Will Cease to be a Separate Charge—Meeting of the Board of Health.

A MARKETABLE PRODUCT

The New Year will see the inauguration of a new system for financing the City's garbage collecting scheme. It may also see the adoption of a system whereby the City will employ its own men and teams to do the work that is now being done by contract. Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer, made recommendations along this line some years ago, and incidentally advocated the establishment of a civic incinerator. The latter has been acquired and it remains for the City, as was suggested by Mayor Bradburn at this morning's meeting of the Board of Health, to purchase the necessary waggons and horses and bring the garbage collecting system under the direct control of the Board of Works Department.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. Ald. Duncan (acting chairman), W. H. Bradburn, James Murty, Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Add to Assessment.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Secretary, informed the Board that in accordance with the new Municipal Act, the charge to householders for the collection of garbage would be included in the assessment, and not be made a separate charge as formerly.

Sanitary Inspector Spence wanted to know if the new incinerator would come under the control of the Board of Health Department, to which Mr. Duncan replied that the contractors had not completed their contract and that the official tests would not take place until the first of the year.

"The trouble is, there will not be enough garbage to keep the plant going," said Mayor Bradburn.

A Dead Horse.

The incinerator is capable of cremating at least twenty tons of garbage a day, and at present is only operated when there is a sufficiency of material.

Mr. Duncan informed the Board that a dead horse had been received at the plant. The digestive properties of the incinerator were equal to the occasion, providing the legs were removed from the animal so as to permit its entry through the charging holes of the crematory.

It was decided to let the question of arranging for a supply of garbage, stand. The chairman will endeavour to come to some arrangement with the collectors. The latter regard the garbage as a marketable product and are not disposed to draw it to the incinerator for cremation purposes.

"Put on your own waggons and bring the work under the supervision of the City," suggested Mayor Bradburn.

Dr. McPherson is in favour of having the night soil men licensed. Proposed licenses to be issued by the Sanitary Inspector at a cost of one dollar each. Proper covered waggons would also be insisted upon. No action was taken in regard to the matter.

Appropriation is Running Low

The Sum of $60.26 Remains [of the Queen Mary Hospital Appropriation

At a meeting of the Board of Health this morning, Dr. McPherson, Superintendent of the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital, reported that the total number of patients received at the institution during the month of November was eight. Four of these were scarlet fever patients and four diphtheria.

It was also stated that the appropriation for the year had narrowed down to $60.26. This, with moneys to be collected for the treatment of out-of-town patients, would leave a balance of $412.63. This is exclusive of the November accounts, which have yet to be paid.

Christmas Presents.

Dr. McPherson thought that the amount would be sufficient to serve the institution for the remainder of the year providing the Board did not indulge in the purchase of expensive Christmas presents for the staff at the Hospital.

If there was any doubt as to whether the Board would emulate Santa Claus, it was dispelled by the facial expression of the members, and it is safe to say that Kris Kringle will not represent the Board of Health at the Queen Mary Hospital two weeks from Thursday next.

NEW "MOVIE" THEATRE

On Charlotte Street—Will Be Opened in Dr. F. L. Robinson's Block, Near Aylmer Street Corner

NEW BARN ACROSS STREET

It was learned to-day that a new motion picture house will be opened in Dr. F. L. Robinson's block on the north side of Charlotte Street, near the corner of Aylmer Street. Th carriage barn, next to the Curling Rink, will be converted into a "movie" theatre and work was begun this morning on the necessary alterations.

To an Examiner reporter Dr. Robinson stated that his plans have not been definitely laid out, and he did not wish to go minutely into the changes that will be made in the building. It is the intention to transform it into a modern picture theatre, completely equipped with the latest appliances of such buildings and ornamented with a splendid front.

The Aylmer Street entrance to the livery will remain unchanged, and Dr. Robinson's barn on the south side of Charlotte street is receiving a large addition. Thus the livery accommodation will not suffer in the least. Dr. Robinson will have plenty of room for the thirty-two horses now in his barns and for a number of others that may be added.

The office on Charlotte street may be moved, and during the alterations the store at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets will be used. It has been kept unoccupied for this purpose. Mr. Allin's office on Aylmer Street, south of Charlotte, will be used in connection with the stables that are being enlarged adjacent to it.

These alterations will greatly improve the appearance of the corner, and should be an additional attraction to the general trade that has been gradually working out along Charlotte Street.

MR. A. H. STRATTON A CANDIDATE FOR NO. 2 WARD

Mr. A. H. Stratton announces that he is a candidate for the aldermanic representation of No. 2 Ward in the City Council. Mr. Stratton is a resident of Centre Ward, and has good claims upon the confidence of the electors. He was born and brought up in Peterborough, and thoroughly understands local conditions. He has what is needed in the City Council, good business ability and sufficient time to devote to adequate discharge of the duties of the position he seeks at the hands of the electors. The evidence of his business ability and energy of character are demonstrated by the success he has made of his own business. It is not too much to say that Centre Ward will be serving its own interest by electing Mr. Stratton.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE W. O. W.

A large initiation took place at the annual meeting of the Sherwood Forest Camp, W.O.W., last night, when 30 new members were admitted into membership of the society.

The election of officers took place and resulted as follows:

Past Council Com.—A. Graham.
Council Commander—W. Clifford.
Advisory Lieut.—E. Lebarr.
Clerk—A. A. Haskill.
Banker—Jas. Kyle.
Managers—Wm. Gibbs, D. N. Jones and E. Waterman.
Escort—W. Spencely.
Watchman—C. Whatley.
Sentinel—R. Beath.
Delegate to Head Council—A. Graham.

After the business of the meeting was concluded, short addresses were given by Ald. G. A. Gillespie, Ald. G. N. Gordon, Mr. W. E. Conway and Mr. J. Wadsworth.

FIFTY ARE DEAD IN DENVER

Examiner Special:

DENVER, Col., Dec. 9.—The bodies of fifty dead lie in their homes in Denver because the undertakers cannot get ambulances through the snow to remove them. It is also impossible to reach the cemeteries. There has been no funeral in Denver since last Wednesday. Many babies have been born since the beginning of the snowstorm, one of them in the shelter of a ten-foot snowbank, while the mother was struggling through drifts on her way to the hospital.

Motor Driven Combination Hose and Chemical Truck.—If the ratepayers approve of a money by-law that will be submitted at the coming Municipal elections, a piece of fire-fighting apparatus similar to the above will be purchased for the Fire Department. It is the general consensus of opinion that the runs to the extreme ends of the City are too long and that the horses are frequently exhausted at the conclusion of a run. The introduction of motor-driven apparatus will obviate this difficulty and increase the efficiency of the Fire Department. It is proposed to expend $8,000 in the purchase of a motor-driven truck, similar to the above, for Peterborough.

ARE BADLY BURNED IN AN EXPLOSION

Boiling Gasoline on Fire Resulted in a Terrible Accident, Which May Cost a Life

INJURIES ARE SERIOUS

Lindsay Post—A terrible accident occurred at Raven Lake Cement Works, near Victoria Road, on Sunday evening, due to a gasoline explosion at the home of Mr. John Haw, who keeps the boarding house at that place.

It appears that Mr. Haw's daughter, a girl of 18 years, was pouring gasoline on the stove from a can, when her brother came along and struck a match. In an instant a terrific explosion took place and the room was like a fiery furnace. The girl's clothes caught fire, and her brother was also in flames. When the father and mother attempted to smother the fire, they were also badly burned.

The explosion attracted others to the scene, and the flames were extinguished before further damage was done.

The unfortunate girl was frightfully burned about the body and presented a horrible sight. Her brother was also burned and is in a dangerous condition. The injuries sustained by their parents, while not serious, are of a very painful nature.

Dr. Huxtable was summoned to attend the victims, and did everything possible to allay their sufferings. The condition of the boy and girl was of such a serious nature that it was decided to have them removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital. They were placed in the caboose train in charge of Conductor Hoover and arrived in town about 2:30 o'clock. The ambulance was at the station, and the boy and girl were taken to the hospital.

In conversation with a Post reporter, Dr. Huxtable stated that the girl was in a very serious condition, her entire body being badly burned. Her recovery is doubtful.

Mrs. John Haw, their mother, accompanied them to Lindsay. Her face is badly disfigured as a result of the burns received.

PETERBOROUGH MAN IS VERY BADLY HURT

John Morrison, of This City, Knocked Down by an Automobile in Winnipeg Last Night

IS IN THE HOSPITAL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 9.—John Morrison, of Peterborough, Ont., while crossing the main street at the intersection of Graham avenue last night, was knocked down by an automobile driven by A. C. Turner, of St. Vital. He was taken into Dr. Peatman's office insensible. The doctor stated that Morrison had sustained a wound on the head and showed symptoms of brain concussion. He had also injuries to his legs. He was taken to St. Boniface Hospital.

Harold Hill Elected to Office in the Queen's Alma Mater Society

Harold Hill, son of Mr. W. H. Hill, Peterborough, has been very signally honoured by the students of Queen's University in being elected to the committee of the Alma Mater Society which consists of four students. It is only the second time in the history of Queen's that a freshman has been elected to this committee. The Queen's Journal has the following complimentary reference:

Harold F. Hill, Arts candidate for committeeman, entered Queen's this year with an enviable record in scholarship, athletics, and executive work. During his last year in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute he was treasurer of the Literary Society, president of the Collegiate Club and the Athletic Society.

With a single exception he held the athletic championship of the school each year during his course, and for the past three years was city champion also.

He is one of the few freshmen who made the first team and the students will not soon forget his great work on the Rugby team during the past season.

THE PROPOSED DALHOUSIE ST. BRIDGE

Will Be Discussed at a Special Meeting of the City Council to be Held This Evening—New Plans Prepared

ESTIMATED COST

The City Council will hold a special meeting this evening. Among the matters to be discussed is the advisability of submitting a money by-law to the ratepayers at the coming municipal elections, to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Otonabee River, from Dalhousie to Maria Streets.

The matter has been before the Council for some months and there is no doubt but what the proposed by-law will be approved. City Engineer Parsons has prepared plans and specifications respecting the proposed bridge and these will be presented this evening for the consideration of the Council.

Previous estimates place the cost of the structure in the neighbourhood of between seventy-five and eighty-five thousand dollars. The maximum cost is sufficient to cover the expense of constructing a bridge suitable for street car traffic, as well as ordinary vehicular traffic.

It is understood that Mr. Parsons has succeeded in trimming these estimates down by fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, so that the actual cost of the bridge will not exceed seventy thousand dollars.

TRAVEL TO ENGLAND WILL BE HEAVY

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Dec. 9. — This year Christmas travel to England will be heavier than ever and there has been considerable decrease in the arrivals of immigrants from the British Isles. Usually at this time of year the immigrant ships are loaded with women and children coming out to join their husbands and fathers who preceded them to Canada and laid the foundations for the new homes. This winter the feeling among immigrants seems to be that their women and children will be better at home than in Canada.

Canada now ranks fifth in world's production of wheat; third of oats.

Estimated number of farmers in Canada, 575,000—one out of 13 population; 3,762,000 dependent upon farming operations for support.

THE "NORONIC".—New steamer launched lately by the Northern Navigation Company. She is 367 feet long, cost over half a million dollars, and is said to be the largest and finest passenger boat ever built in Canada for inland lake service.

THE COLONIAL OFFICE WILL NOT INTERFERE

MEN IN COURT FOR SEPTEMBER FIRES

Former Employees of the Peterborough Lumber Co., Pleaded Guilty to Starting Bush Fires

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Two young men named Hicks were arrested on Saturday last at a farm where they were stopping in the Township of Wollaston, and brought to Bancroft, where they were charged with starting a fire in the Township of Cardiff on Sept. 16, last, which destroyed a lot of valuable timber. They had been working for the Peterborough Lumber Co., and were discharged, and, it is alleged that the fires were started with malicious intent. Another brother, who was with them at the time, is also wanted. He is said to have served a two-year term on the Prison Farm at Guelph.

The charge was laid at the instance of Mr. Dane, fire ranger for the Peterborough Lumber Co., and Constable Bailey brought the prisoners in.

Both men pleaded guilty before Magistrate Jarman, but were let out on suspended sentence, with the warning that they must settle down and get to work as respectable citizens. They were also ordered to pay all costs of the court and $25 to the Peterborough Lumber Co., which amounts to $95 in all, and in the meantime were given until the 15th of February, 1914, to get the necessary "green backs". They are to report to the Magistrate week by week until this amount is paid and in failing to do so will be taken into custody again.—Bancroft Times.

PETERBORO'S TANGO CLASS IS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

Forty of the Ladies and Gentlemen of the City Are Learning the New Steps.

OTHER CLASSES WILL LIKELY BE FORMED

The tango wave has reached Peterborough. In fact it has been here for some time, and from all indications it is going to be as popular as in the larger cities where it has practically banished the waltz, two step and other steps to the discard of dances. A class of about forty ladies and gentlemen is making good progress under the instruction of Mrs. Montmambert of Port Hope. Several Peterborough people who have attended functions in Toronto and Montreal have stated that they were practically compelled to decorate the walls with the rest of the flowers because of their inability to negotiate the latest steps.

It is understood that the first class was held at the residence of Mrs. Aylmer, but as the number grew the Knights of Pythias Hall was secured. Three assemblies have been held, one each week, but the class will meet twice a week in the future. The new dances requiring a spacious floor, are essentially ballroom features. During the coming winter the tango is bound to receive attention on dance programmes, and it is absolutely necessary that you know something of the steps before you essay them.

From the fact that the tango has the floor just now, and there is no hint of its popularity waning, it is likely that other classes will be formed in the near future.

MISSING STEAMERS ARE SAFE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 9. — The steamers McKee and Turret Cape, overdue since Saturday, made Goderich late last evening so heavily crusted in ice they could hardly move. Both Captains say the voyage was the worst they ever made and will take no more chances on being wrecked and go into winter quarters to-day.

MRS. PANKHURST OFF TO PARIS

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 9.—Watched by Scotland Yard detectives, who made no attempt to stop her, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst left to-day for Paris where she will visit her daughter, Christobel. She was carried to the train and steamer on a stretcher, and is apparently ill. Technically she is a fugitive from justice, but the authorities will not attempt to re-arrest her so long as she remains in Paris.

Will Not Take Action in England to the Immigration of Hindus into the Overseas Dominions.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Inquiries from a member of Parliament in close touch with the ministry elicited an emphatic expression of opinion that the colonial office could not and would not interfere with the immigration of Hindus into the dominions. "At the same time imperial travellers here," said our informant, "feel very strongly that the authorities both in Africa and British Columbia do not realize the tremendous effect their attitude towards the Indians has upon the attitude of India generally towards the British Empire. It is realized that the Empire has more native regular soldiers in India than in all the other dominions combined. The question of the Hindus' position in the Overseas Dominion will be one of the principal items for consideration at the next Imperial conference."

Boys Denied Throwing Stones

Case Against Four Local Youths Dismissed in This Morning's Police Court

Four boys appeared in Police Court this morning, charged with creating a disturbance on Weir street last Sunday. It seems that a "bunch" of boys passed the home of a Weir street woman and drew attention to their presence by throwing a stone at the window. She claimed to recognize three of the boys, who were in court this morning.

They were defended by Mr. G. N. Gordon, and denied throwing the stone. As there was no evidence to show that any of the boys threw the stone, the case against them was dismissed.

REV. FATHER McGUIRE PREACHED THE SERMON

At the Sodality Reception in the Church of the Sacred Heart on Monday Night.

Rev. Father McGuire preached an eloquent sermon at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Monday night on the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin. The occasion was the formal reception of a number of the young ladies of the congregation as members of the Sodality. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was present and urged the members of this society to take the Blessed Virgin as their example and to strive to acquire the virtues which she displayed. Father McGuire stated that all the prophets foretold the principal events in the life of the Blessed Virgin, as did Simeon, who lived during her time.

COST WILL BE ADDED TO THE ASSESSMENT

At the Conclusion of the Present Year, Cost of Garbage Collection Will Cease to be a Separate Charge—Meeting of the Board of Health.

A MARKETABLE PRODUCT

The New Year will see the inauguration of a new system for financing the City's garbage collecting scheme. It may also see the adoption of a system whereby the City will employ its own men and teams to do the work that is now being done by contract. Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer, made recommendations along this line some years ago, and incidentally advocated the establishment of a civic incinerator. The latter has been acquired and it remains for the City, as was suggested by Mayor Bradburn at this morning's meeting of the Board of Health, to purchase the necessary waggons and horses and bring the garbage collecting system under the direct control of the Board of Works Department.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. Ald. Duncan (acting chairman), W. H. Bradburn, James Murty, Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Add to Assessment.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Secretary, informed the Board that in accordance with the new Municipal Act, the charge to householders for the collection of garbage would be included in the assessment, and not be made a separate charge as formerly.

MEN IN COURT FOR SEPTEMBER FIRES

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Two young men named Hicks were arrested on Saturday last at a farm where they were stopping in the Township of Wollaston, and brought to Bancroft, where they were charged with starting a fire in the Township of Cardiff on Sept. 16, last, which destroyed a lot of valuable timber. They had been working for the Peterborough Lumber Co., and were discharged, and, it is alleged that the fires were started with malicious intent. Another brother, who was with them at the time, is also wanted. He is said to have served a two-year term on the Prison Farm at Guelph.

The charge was laid at the instance of Mr. Dane, fire ranger for the Peterborough Lumber Co., and Constable Bailey brought the prisoners in.

Both men pleaded guilty before Magistrate Jarman, but were let out on suspended sentence, with the warning that they must settle down and get to work as respectable citizens. They were also ordered to pay all costs of the court and $25 to the Peterborough Lumber Co., which amounts to $95 in all, and in the meantime were given until the 15th of February, 1914, to get the necessary "green backs". They are to report to the Magistrate week by week until this amount is paid and in failing to do so will be taken into custody again.—Bancroft Times.
